Nixon's Manager In 1952 Subpoenaed By Probers

REFUSES ANSWERS — Herman Kravitz, Atlantic City, refuses to tell investigating senators why he hired Murray Chotiner, Vice President Nixon's 1952 campaign manager, as his lawyer in 1953, lest answers "might" incriminate him. Kravitz, a garment manufacturer, testified before the Senate Investigations subcommittee which is looking for evidence of possible corruption in the letting of military clothing contracts. Clothing Makers Balk At Discussing Chotiner's Hiring

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP) — Senators investigating Army contracts today issued a subpoena for Murray Chotiner to appear for questioning next Wednesday.

Chairman McClellan (D-Ark) of the Senate Investigations subcommittee signed the subpoena after Samuel Kravitz and his son, Herman, Atlantic City clothing manufacturers, had invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to discuss their hiring of Chotiner as a lawyer for Herman Kravitz in 1953.

Chotiner, who was Vice President Nixon's 1952 national campaign manager, was retained by the Kravitzes at a time when Herman Kravitz was facing federal charges of misappropriating government goods.

Subpoena Air Mailed

Robert F. Kennedy, the subcommittee's chief counsel, told reporters he was sending the subpoena to the U. S. Marshal at Los Angeles by air mail to be served on Chotiner.

The Kravitzes also invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked whether they had made "pay offs" to government officials in connection with military uniform contracts their company received in the early 1950s.

The subcommittee had told Chotiner he would be subpoenaed if he didn't appear willingly.

Chotiner had quickly indicated he might be willing to testify late next week. He said "It is not necessary for the Senate Committee to subpoena me."

Never Refused To Appear

In Los Angeles, Chotiner said he had informed McClellan last night "that the press of legal business requires my attention in California through May 2." He added:

"I have never refused to appear voluntarily. But I cannot fly across the country on a moment's notice."

The subcommittee heard testimoney yesterday that Chotiner received a $5,000 fee in 1953 for representing Herman Kravitz, a key figure in its search for possible graft and corruption in the handling of military uniform contracts.

Demos To Fight For Equivalent Of 90% Of Parity

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—Rep. Cooley (D-NC) said tonight House Democrats will launch a new fight in Congress to get farmers the equivalent of 90 per cent of parity for their crops this year.

House Democratic leaders gave approval to proposals for direct payments to farmers—a variation of the "Fair Deal" Brannan Plan of the Truman administration.

President Eisenhower vetoed an omnibus farm bill last week because it provided for rigid government price supports at 90 per cent of parity for major crops. The administration favors a sliding scale running from 75 to 90 per cent.

The new development came as Democrats in the House sidetracked soil bank proposals and moved toward a new version of farm legislation which would inclue the administration's soil bank plus direct price support payments to farmers.

Cooley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee told reporters the committee will consider a new bill which would authorize "compensatory payments" in cash to farmers equal to the difference between government support levels and 90 per cent of parity.

The decision followed a swift round of developments that was climaxed by shelving of a $1,200,000,000 soil bank appropriation bill by the House Rules Committee.

The committee argued all day about what kind of legislation to send to the House floor next week and ended up by clearing none.

Another session of the committee was to have been held tomorrow, but the meeting was canceled late in the day. Chairman Smith (D-Va) reported "nobody is very happy" about the situation.

With the special appropriations measure beached high and dry, House leaders indicated an entirely different tack may be taken to get a soil bank plan acted on.

They spoke of bringing out an entirely new bill from the Agriculture Committee or of attaching the soil bank to the regular Agriculture Department appropriations bill.

MIG For Which U.S. Paid Red $100,000 Damaged In Crash

DAYTON, Ohio, April 25 (AP)—A Russian-built jet fighter plane, for which the United States paid a North Korean pilot $100,000, was damaged in a forced landing at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, it was disclosed today.

The British pilot, Flight Lt. E. S. Chandler of the RAF, was not injured. An Air Technical Intelligence Center official said the forced landing occurred Monday during a pilot evaluation flight. He added the damage was repairable.

The North Korean pilot, Noh Kum Suk, fled Communist territory in September 1953 and delivered the Russian MIG to American forces. The United States had offered $100,000 to any Red pilot who would deliver a Russian MIG to U. N. forces.

Ike, Adlai, Estes Gratified By Pa. Primary Results

[By The Associated Press]

President Eisenhower, Adlai E. Stevenson and Sen. Kefauver all said Wednesday they were gratified at the results in the Pennsylvania primary election.

Eisenhower ran well ahead of Democrat Stevenson in the "popularity contest" in Pennsylvania Tuesday, and the President was asked at his news conference in Washington for comment.

He replied, "I am still astonished anytime anybody votes for me—and very grateful."

Stevenson said he had been informed he received 96 per cent of the Democratic vote in the Pennsylvania primary and was "grateful to the voters."

Kefauver said he "didn't make any effort whatever in that state" and was highly pleased at the number of write-in votes he received.

The Pennsylvania vote from 8,659 of 8,730 precincts gave Eisenhower 925,076 votes to 43,080 for Sen. William Knowland of California, who didn't have time to get off the ballot after Eisenhower announced for a second term.

On the Democratic side, 8,655 precincts gave Stevenson 627,010 votes to 37,357 for Kefauver. All of Kefauver's were write-ins; Stevenson was the only name on the ballot.

In Massachusetts, Rep. John W. McCormack, a favorite son candidate for the Democratic nomination, held a considerable lead over Stevenson on the strength of a wide margin in Boston.

Kefauver had asked his supporters to back McCormack's candidacy.

The Massachusetts vote from 1,720 precincts out of 1,767 gave, on the Democratic side, 27,450 votes for McCormack to 18,844 for Stevenson. Kefauver has 4,400.

Integration May Cost Bus Line Franchise

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 25 (AP)—Montgomery City Lines today faced the threat of court action to revoke its franchise unless it backs away from its newly announced policy of racial integration.

The City Commission declared the bus company will have to abide by city and state segregation laws if it continues to do business here.

Meanwhile, there was still no report of race mixing on the buses despite the company's integration order. Most Negroes were still boycotting the bus line as they have for five months. Those who did ride took seats in the rear.

Three Are Accused On Sedition Charges

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25 (AP)—The government today charged John William Powell, his wife, and another man with violating the wartime sedition laws while operating the China Monthly Review in Shanghai during the Korean War.

The federal grand jury charges seditious activities affecting the armed forces against Powell, 36, his wife Sylvia, 36, and Julian Schuman, also 36, of New York.

All three are American citizens. Powell and Schuman are now engaged in writing and lecturing in this country.

French Launch Big Attack In Algeria

ALGIERS, April 25 (AP) — The French reported tonight they have launched a big attack on a strong rebel band in the Aures Mountains of eastern Algeria.

They said heavy fighting was in progress northeast of Batna and claimed rebel losses were large. No figures were given.

Soviet, British Leaders Grim As Talks End

But Both Sides Due To Hail Conference As Limited Success

LONDON, April 25 (AP)—Soviet and British leaders ended their London talks in a somber mood tonight. But there were indications both sides will hail the conference as a limited success toward easing world tension.

Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist boss Nikita Khrushchev tramped grimly out of No. 10 Downing St., after a final emergency meeting. Prime Minister Eden, standing behind them, managed a thin smile. His deputy, Richard Butler, was red-faced and looked tense.

Results To Be Announced

A 31-word British communique rang down the curtain on further bargaining:

"The final stage of the Anglo-Soviet discussions was completed this afternoon. The results will be announced after the return of the Soviet leaders from the visit to Scotland tomorrow evening."

Word spread in diplomatic circles that the two-power announcement will report no sweeping achievements, but claim advances in several relatively minor spheres.

For instance, there was a rumor progress had been made on ruble exchange rates. The Russians now peg the ruble at four to the dollar, a figure unrealistically high on the world market.

Both sides are likely to represent the conference as having revived the old "spirit of Geneva" in a minor key.

Reds Plan Press Conference

But testy public outbursts by Khrushchev midway in the visit had already demonstrated fading chances for any solid agreement in the major fields of difference—the Middle East, German reunification disarmament and East-West trade.

Tomorrow they pay a flying visit to Edinburgh and return in the evening. They plan a news conference Friday morning. Then they will go to Portsmouth, board the Soviet cruiser Ordjonikidze and sail for home.

Cepicka Is Fired From Czech Posts For "Stalinism"

VIENNA, Austria, April 25 (AP)—Gen. Alexei Cepicka has been fired as Czechoslovakia's deputy premier and defense minister, Prague radio said tonight. He also was kicked out of the Politburo.

The 46-year-old son-in-law of the late President Klement Gottwald had been accused in the Czech press last week of practicing "the cult of the individual"—or Stalinism.

Prague radio said the action was taken April 20 by a special meeting of the Central Committee of the Czech Communist party. He was shorn of his membership on the Central Committee.

Stassen, Gromyko To Hold Arms Talks

LONDON, April 25 (AP)—Harold E. Stassen tonight set up a special meeting on disarmament with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. Informed sources said the meeting would come within two days.

The special meeting will follow up Stassen's impromptu talks with Communist party leader Nikita Khrushchev and Premier Nikolai Bulganin at a Soviet reception last night.

The date will be decided when Stassen, President Eisenhower's disarmament adviser, gets instructions from Washington.

Stassen cabled a report of his conversation with Khrushchev and Bulganin.

Stassen's and Gromyko's entire delegations to the current private five-power U.N. disarmament talks here will take part.

The informants said Britain, France and Canada, the other members of the U.N. Disarmament subcommittee, had agreed to the extraordinary U.S.-Soviet meeting.

Stassen spent two hours discussing disarmament with Khrushchev at the reception. Bulganin joined in their conversation for a while. Stassen would give reporters no details. He said only that the matter was important enough to cable Eisenhower.

Highly placed Western sources said the Stassen-Soviet review of rival U.S. and Russian disarmament proposals was "very forthright."

The Soviet leaders asked questions about the U.S. plan for global disarmament, particularly the "open skies" inspection idea.

But the sources cautioned that expectations should not be raised too much. They reported no outstanding differences on disarmament were settled by the chance meeting between Stassen and the Russians.

Eight Crewmen Killed In Crash Of Tanker Plane

WHITE CITY, Kas., April 25 (INS)—The eight crewmen of a refueling plane from Forbes Air Force Base at Topeka were killed today when the plane crashed and burned in a wheat field near White City.

The four-engine, KC-97 took off from the air base with a full load of gasoline for a routine training flight. The crash followed shortly afterwards.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Sheriff Gerroll Wray of Morris County said wreckage was strewn over 40 acres. He added that bits of the plane were found as far as three miles northeast of the crash site, indicating the craft was coming apart as it flew southwest.

The plane finally crashed and burned about a quarter-mile from the home of a farmer, Frank Frohm. Two wing tanks buried themselves four feet in the ground 400 feet east and west of the house.

Cement Mixer Truck Runs Away, Hits Bus

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—A driverless cement mixer truck rolled down a hill and crashed into the side of a Capital Transit Co. bus today. Seven passengers were hurt, none seriously.

The truck driver, Roy J. Russell, told police he parked the truck at the top of the hill with the brakes on. He said it started rolling down the hill shortly after he left it.

Eisenhower Cool To Idea Of Visit By Soviet Bosses

Rejects Adlai's Call For Halt To H-Tests

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP) — President Eisenhower turned thumbs down today on any idea of inviting Soviet leaders to the United States and rejected Adlai E. Stevenson's proposal for halting hydrogen bomb tests.

Eisenhower also voiced a conviction this country is "somewhere around the limit" of maximum effort in trying to develop a long-range guided missile—a field in which Stevenson has accused the administration of being "dangerously dilatory."

At a news conference, Eisenhower also declared that:

1. He sees "no logical reason" for cutting taxes now—that it "would not be to the good interests of America," since in this time of high incomes the government must be run without going into debt or it never will be.

2. He would "have to be convinced" it would be useful for him to attend a heads of state meeting to try to calm explosive unrest in the Middle East. As always, though, he said he would meet anybody practically anywhere if he thought this would promote peace and be in keeping with with America's dignity and self-respect.

3. Democrats are "perfectly right" in making him, rather than members of his Cabinet, a target for election-year attacks. "I am the head of the administration," he said, "and I have been shot at before."

4. Vice President Nixon has given him no "answer that I would consider final and definite" as to whether Nixon would like second place on the GOP ticket again this year. Nixon was unavailable for reaction.

Politics and foreign affairs pretty much dominated the news conference. The tee-off point was a request for an evaluation of a statement by Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev in London that Russia soon will have guided missiles, with hydrogen war heads, capable of hitting any point in the world.

The President said he knew of no reason why the Russians "should be making misstatements in this field" and he certainly wasn't accusing them of it. But he said he wanted to point out out that "there is a very, very long distance between a laboratory capacity or capability of doing something and making an instrument, a really efficient, effective instrument of war."

4 Feared Dead In Hotel Blaze

WARREN, Pa., April 25 (AP)—One guest burned to death and three others were reported missing today in a pre-dawn fire which destroyed the Carver Hotel—A century old landmark in this Western Pennsylvania town.

Coroner Ed Lowrey reported the body of an unidentified man was recovered tonight, more than 18 hours after the fire broke out. He said a search for the missing men would be resumed tomorrow.

The raging blaze enveloped the four-story brick structure shortly after it was discovered about 1:30 a.m. The intense heat weakened the masonry exterior and most it caved in.

Guests, aroused from their sleep, used every possible avenue of escape. Men and women fled into chilling air in their night clothes. Most were unable to save anything but the clothes they wore.

Police Chief Mike Evan said a check of the register showed four persons from Ohio unaccounted for.

The blaze was discovered in a second floor room above the lobby, Fire Chief James Tridico said. He said the cause has not been established. Damage to the 105-room hotel was estimated at $500,000 by Tridico.

Body Of Lost Soldier Found In Old Fort

VERDUN, France, Thursday, April 26 (AP)—Rescue workers early today found the body of a U. S. soldier lost since Saturday in the battlefield tunnels used by the French in World War I.

He was Gerald H. Dunningan, 22, son of Mrs. Edward M. Dunningan, Wicomico, Va.

The body was found 80 feet underground.

The soldier and his wife went sightseeing near Verdun Saturday. He left her to inspect one of the many entrances to an old fort built in 1745.

Duo's Conduct In Redefection Of Seamen Hit

Sobolev Criticized, Ouster Of UN Aides Demanded In Note

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—The United States today expelled two members of the Soviet's United Nations delegation, calling them "no longer desirable" because of their part in the sudden "redefection" of five Soviet seamen.

A note handed Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin also chided Arkady Sobolev, head of Russia's U.N. delegation, for his conduct in the incident. However, Sobolev's expulsion was not demanded.

The note, made public by the State Department, charged the two members of the Soviet delegation, Aleksandr K. Guryanov and Nikolai Turkin, had behaved in "particularly objectionable manner."

It said that they exceeded the "scope of their official capacity and thereby abused the privilege of their residence."

One Went With Seamen

"It is accordingly requested that Aleksandr K. Guryanov make expeditious arrangements to leave the United States," the note said. "On the same grounds the request for a return visa for Nikolai Turkin to re-enter the United States is hereby refused."

Officials said Turkin, third secretary of the Soviet delegation, accompanied the five seamen back to Russia when they left from New York's Idlewild Airport last April 7. Guryanov was described as an attache.

The five seamen in question were among nine crewmen of the Soviet tanker Tuapse who came to this country last fall from Formosa, where they had been interned after the vessel was captured by Chinese Nationalists.

They abruptly left their U.S. asylum on April 7 for Russia, and a Senate subcommittee has been airing charges that some of them at least were spirited away against their real wishes, or even "kidnaped."

"Incompatible" Conduct

The U.S. note today did not make such charges but declared Soviet U.N. personnel acted in a way "incompatible" with their positions when they took a hand in

Atom Code Sets Up Safeguards

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., April 25 (AP)—A worldwide atomic code to breathe life into President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace plan was made public today. The United States is working for full approval of the program at a huge conference to be convened here around Sept. 24.

President Eisenhower broached the idea of using atoms for peaceful purposes in his speech to the U. N. Assembly on Dec. 8, 1953. He is expected here to make the opening address at the world conference next fall. The Americans hope the code will be signed at the end of that conference and will be in operation in 1957.

The United States, Russia and 10 other countries approved the program last Wednesday after weeks of secret negotiations. It would create an international atomic energy agency to see that peaceful nations around the globe share benefits of the atomic age. It contains provisions barring war-like use of atomic material pooled with the agency and creates an inspection system to make this certain.

Despite the unusual agreement among the 12 countries on the broad outlines of the code, a fight looms in the conference next fall on Red China.

James J. Wadsworth, U. S. delegate, told reporters the United States is opposed to giving Red China a seat and chances of Peiping getting a place are remote. On the other hand, a Soviet spokesman said Russia, backed by India and Czechoslovakia, would demand a place for Red China on the board of governors of the proposed agency.

Clothing Makers Balk At Discussing Chotiner's Hiring

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP) — Senators investigating Army contracts today issued a subpoena for Murray Chotiner to appear for questioning next Wednesday.

Chairman McClellan (D-Ark) of the Senate Investigations subcommittee signed the subpoena after Samuel Kravitz and his son, Herman, Atlantic City clothing manufacturers, had invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to discuss their hiring of Chotiner as a lawyer for Herman Kravitz in 1953.

The special meeting will follow up Stassen's impromptu talks with Communist party leader Nikita Khrushchev and Premier Nikolai Bulganin at a Soviet reception last night.

The date will be decided when Stassen, President Eisenhower's disarmament adviser, gets instructions from Washington.

Stassen cabled a report of his conversation with Khrushchev and Bulganin.

Stassen's and Gromyko's entire delegations to the current private five-power U.N. disarmament talks here will take part.

The informants said Britain, France and Canada, the other members of the U.N. Disarmament subcommittee, had agreed to the extraordinary U.S.-Soviet meeting.

Stassen spent two hours discussing disarmament with Khrushchev at the reception. Bulganin joined in their conversation for a while. Stassen would give reporters no details. He said only that the matter was important enough to cable Eisenhower.

Highly placed Western sources said the Stassen-Soviet review of rival U.S. and Russian disarmament proposals was "very forthright."

The Soviet leaders asked questions about the U.S. plan for global disarmament, particularly the "open skies" inspection idea.

But the sources cautioned that expectations should not be raised too much. They reported no outstanding differences on disarmament were settled by the chance meeting between Stassen and the Russians.

Eight Crewmen Killed In Crash Of Tanker Plane

WHITE CITY, Kas., April 25 (INS)—The eight crewmen of a refueling plane from Forbes Air Force Base at Topeka were killed today when the plane crashed and burned in a wheat field near White City.

The four-engine, KC-97 took off from the air base with a full load of gasoline for a routine training flight. The crash followed shortly afterwards.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Sheriff Gerroll Wray of Morris County said wreckage was strewn over 40 acres. He added that bits of the plane were found as far as three miles northeast of the crash site, indicating the craft was coming apart as it flew southwest.

The plane finally crashed and burned about a quarter-mile from the home of a farmer, Frank Frohm. Two wing tanks buried themselves four feet in the ground 400 feet east and west of the house.

Cement Mixer Truck Runs Away, Hits Bus

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—A driverless cement mixer truck rolled down a hill and crashed into the side of a Capital Transit Co. bus today. Seven passengers were hurt, none seriously.

The truck driver, Roy J. Russell, told police he parked the truck at the top of the hill with the brakes on. He said it started rolling down the hill shortly after he left it.

Eisenhower Cool To Idea Of Visit By Soviet Bosses

Rejects Adlai's Call For Halt To H-Tests

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP) — President Eisenhower turned thumbs down today on any idea of inviting Soviet leaders to the United States and rejected Adlai E. Stevenson's proposal for halting hydrogen bomb tests.

Eisenhower also voiced a conviction this country is "somewhere around the limit" of maximum effort in trying to develop a long-range guided missile—a field in which Stevenson has accused the administration of being "dangerously dilatory."

At a news conference, Eisenhower also declared that:

1. He sees "no logical reason" for cutting taxes now—that it "would not be to the good interests of America," since in this time of high incomes the government must be run without going into debt or it never will be.

2. He would "have to be convinced" it would be useful for him to attend a heads of state meeting to try to calm explosive unrest in the Middle East. As always, though, he said he would meet anybody practically anywhere if he thought this would promote peace and be in keeping with with America's dignity and self-respect.

3. Democrats are "perfectly right" in making him, rather than members of his Cabinet, a target for election-year attacks. "I am the head of the administration," he said, "and I have been shot at before."

4. Vice President Nixon has given him no "answer that I would consider final and definite" as to whether Nixon would like second place on the GOP ticket again this year. Nixon was unavailable for reaction.

Politics and foreign affairs pretty much dominated the news conference. The tee-off point was a request for an evaluation of a statement by Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev in London that Russia soon will have guided missiles, with hydrogen war heads, capable of hitting any point in the world.

The President said he knew of no reason why the Russians "should be making misstatements in this field" and he certainly wasn't accusing them of it. But he said he wanted to point out out that "there is a very, very long distance between a laboratory capacity or capability of doing something and making an instrument, a really efficient, effective instrument of war."

4 Feared Dead In Hotel Blaze

WARREN, Pa., April 25 (AP)—One guest burned to death and three others were reported missing today in a pre-dawn fire which destroyed the Carver Hotel—A century old landmark in this Western Pennsylvania town.

Coroner Ed Lowrey reported the body of an unidentified man was recovered tonight, more than 18 hours after the fire broke out. He said a search for the missing men would be resumed tomorrow.

The raging blaze enveloped the four-story brick structure shortly after it was discovered about 1:30 a.m. The intense heat weakened the masonry exterior and most it caved in.

Guests, aroused from their sleep, used every possible avenue of escape. Men and women fled into chilling air in their night clothes. Most were unable to save anything but the clothes they wore.

Police Chief Mike Evan said a check of the register showed four persons from Ohio unaccounted for.

The blaze was discovered in a second floor room above the lobby, Fire Chief James Tridico said. He said the cause has not been established. Damage to the 105-room hotel was estimated at $500,000 by Tridico.

Body Of Lost Soldier Found In Old Fort

VERDUN, France, Thursday, April 26 (AP)—Rescue workers early today found the body of a U. S. soldier lost since Saturday in the battlefield tunnels used by the French in World War I.

He was Gerald H. Dunningan, 22, son of Mrs. Edward M. Dunningan, Wicomico, Va.

The body was found 80 feet underground.

The soldier and his wife went sightseeing near Verdun Saturday. He left her to inspect one of the many entrances to an old fort built in 1745.

Sobolev Criticized, Ouster Of UN Aides Demanded In Note

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—The United States today expelled two members of the Soviet's United Nations delegation, calling them "no longer desirable" because of their part in the sudden "redefection" of five Soviet seamen.

A note handed Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin also chided Arkady Sobolev, head of Russia's U.N. delegation, for his conduct in the incident. However, Sobolev's expulsion was not demanded.

The note, made public by the State Department, charged the two members of the Soviet delegation, Aleksandr K. Guryanov and Nikolai Turkin, had behaved in "particularly objectionable manner."

It said that they exceeded the "scope of their official capacity and thereby abused the privilege of their residence."

One Went With Seamen

"It is accordingly requested that Aleksandr K. Guryanov make expeditious arrangements to leave the United States," the note said. "On the same grounds the request for a return visa for Nikolai Turkin to re-enter the United States is hereby refused."

Officials said Turkin, third secretary of the Soviet delegation, accompanied the five seamen back to Russia when they left from New York's Idlewild Airport last April 7. Guryanov was described as an attache.

The five seamen in question were among nine crewmen of the Soviet tanker Tuapse who came to this country last fall from Formosa, where they had been interned after the vessel was captured by Chinese Nationalists.

They abruptly left their U.S. asylum on April 7 for Russia, and a Senate subcommittee has been airing charges that some of them at least were spirited away against their real wishes, or even "kidnaped."

"Incompatible" Conduct

The U.S. note today did not make such charges but declared Soviet U.N. personnel acted in a way "incompatible" with their positions when they took a hand in

Atom Code Sets Up Safeguards

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., April 25 (AP)—A worldwide atomic code to breathe life into President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace plan was made public today. The United States is working for full approval of the program at a huge conference to be convened here around Sept. 24.

President Eisenhower broached the idea of using atoms for peaceful purposes in his speech to the U. N. Assembly on Dec. 8, 1953. He is expected here to make the opening address at the world conference next fall. The Americans hope the code will be signed at the end of that conference and will be in operation in 1957.

The United States, Russia and 10 other countries approved the program last Wednesday after weeks of secret negotiations. It would create an international atomic energy agency to see that peaceful nations around the globe share benefits of the atomic age. It contains provisions barring war-like use of atomic material pooled with the agency and creates an inspection system to make this certain.

Despite the unusual agreement among the 12 countries on the broad outlines of the code, a fight looms in the conference next fall on Red China.

James J. Wadsworth, U. S. delegate, told reporters the United States is opposed to giving Red China a seat and chances of Peiping getting a place are remote. On the other hand, a Soviet spokesman said Russia, backed by India and Czechoslovakia, would demand a place for Red China on the board of governors of the proposed agency.

Hammarskjold Seeks Jordan Peace Pledge

AMMAN, Jordan, April 25 (AP)—Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold sought Jordan's help today on his three-week-old U. N. mission to pacify the armistice lines around Israel.

The United Nations official this morning had his first talk with Premier Samir el Rifai. It lasted 2½ hours. A communique said they would meet again tomorrow morning.

Hammarskjold later went to the Jordan sector of Jerusalem for a three-hour visit to holy places in the old walled city.

The Arab press criticized him for having talked with Israeli leaders in the Israel sector of Jerusalem last week. The U. N. Palestine partition plan of 1947 said the city should be internationalized.

The U. N.-Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission, meeting in Jerusalem today, found that both Israel and Jordan had violated their 1949 armistice by firing across the demarcation line a week ago. One Israeli soldier and one of Jordan's national guardsmen were killed in the incident.

The commission chairman, an American U. N. truce observer, abstained from voting on paragraphs that attempted to say which side opened fire.

In a pending complaint to the same commission, Israel says Arab gunmen killed four Israelis Monday night near the Jordan border. Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett has brought this to Hammarskjold's attention.

Despite such incidents, a spokesman said Hammarskjold foresaw no such long technical talks in Amman as were necessary at previous stops.

He held that the problems of the Israel-Jordan frontier were not complicated and "usually involve a simple 'yes' or 'no' by both sides."

Hammarskjold has already visited Israel and the other three Arab countries it borders—Egypt, Lebanon and Syria. A week ago he got an Egyptian-Israeli cease-fire.

He expects to return to his temporary headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon, tomorrow; visit Cairo Saturday for weekend talks, and finally go again to Israel for the windup of his trip.

Nation's Living Costs Increase

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—The nation's living costs rose slightly in March and officials said a further gradual increase can be expected in the months ahead.

The Labor Department reported today its living cost index rose one-tenth of 1 per cent between Feb. 15 and March 15. This put the index at 114.7 per cent of the 1947-1949 base period, three-tenths of one per cent higher than in March 1955.

H. E. Riley, chief of the department's price and living cost division, said food prices began to rise in March after a five month decline and probably will continue to increase seasonally in the spring and summer.

Riley said the increases are likely to be "modest." The March index level of 114.7 is about ½ of 1 per cent below the record living cost mark of 115.4 in October, 1953.

The Labor Department also reported that factory workers' take-home pay was at a record level for March. It averaged $72.10 week for the factory worker with three dependents, and $64.77 for the single worker. This was about 33 cents over February and about $2.70 or 4 per cent above March, 1955.

Three Boys Held In Theft Of Yacht

PARKESBURG, Pa., April 25 (AP)—Three boys, the eldest 18, were charged today with stealing a 42-foot, $12,000 yacht, which was the object of a three-day sea and air search on Chesapeake Bay.

The craft, the Mary B., owned by Richard K. Barnes, of Charlestown, Md., was found stranded in a shallow upper bay river yesterday, about 25 miles from the point where it was stolen.

The three were arrested here today and held on larceny charges for extradition to Maryland. They are Harry Proudfoot, and James Herd, 16, of Parkesburg, and Harry Messner, 18, of nearby Sadsburyville.

Parkesburg Police Chief Earl Shipman, who identified the boys, said they left their homes Saturday night and went to Maryland. On Sunday, he said, they were picked up by Maryland police as runaways and returned here.

Shipman said a Marine radio, which looks like a suitcase, had been taken from the yacht by the boys. It wasn't noticed by officers in Maryland when they took the boys in custody. Later, when it was found that the radio was missing, an order was issued to pick up the boys.

The yacht, when found, was out of fuel, and dirty dishes and fishing gear were littered about. Barnes, the owner, said the motor shaft had been damaged.

Nine Of Family Die In Flaming Trap

PHILADELPHIA, April 25 (AP)—Nine members of one family—seven children and two women—burned to death today in a fire which turned a three-story house into a flaming death trap.

The victims were among 16 persons crowded into the North Philadelphia lodging house. All the dead were trapped on the second and third floors by the spreading flames and dense smoke.

The dead, all Negroes, were identified as:

Mrs. Jessie Clay, 47, and her children, Edith Mae, 15; Annie Murtis, 10, and Ann, 3.

Henry Ozie Clay, 5, son of Williose Clay, 25, who is a daughter of the elder Mrs. Clay.

Mrs. Jessie May Clay, 28, daughter-in-law of the elder Mrs. Clay; and her children, Catherine, 4; Fakina, 2, and Calvin, 3 months.

U.S. Sergeant Weds Ohio Girl In Moscow

MOSCOW, April 25 (AP)—Jacqueline Olden, 27, of Loveland, Ohio, and U. S. Army Sgt. Robert Thomas, 26, of Brinkley, Ark., were married in Moscow's Baptist church today.

The bride, a secretary in the administrative section of the U.S. Embassy, was given away by Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen. The husband is attached to the military attache's office in the Embassy.

Most of Moscow's American community and regular parishioners of the church attended the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Alexei Karpov. A reception followed at the American Club.

the departure of the seamen from New York.

The note called on the Soviet government to instruct Sobolev and his staff to stick strictly to their United Nations functions in the future.

The State Department said Ambassador Zarubin, in receiving the protest note from Asst. Secretary of State Livingston Merchant, objected to the charge against Sobolev and his two aides.

But department press officer Lincoln White said explusion of the two aides is automatic, since the United States holds the right to take such action.

Army To Scrap Most Overseas Warehouses

HEIDELBERG, Germany, April 25 (AP)—U. S. Army spokesmen said today the Army plans to scrap most overseas warehouses as "potential atom bomb targets" and supply itself by air and ship from the United States.

They described the idea as a new logistical concept called "the Modern Army Supply System." The plan will get its first field test next July by the U. S. 7th Army in West Germany.

Storage centers would be widely dispersed in the United States and most of the Army's far-flung chain of overseas supply bases would be done away with.

"By eliminating thousands of warehouses, depots and dumps we will minimize our vulnerability to mass destruction weapons," logistics experts at the Army's European headquarters here said.

Under the new system, the Army would fly or ship supplies direct from bomb-proof storage points in the United States to its armies in the field, doing away with the necessity for most rear supply bases overseas.

Under the plan supplies would be ordered by radio in a simplified code, red tape would be cut and deliveries would be speeded up as much as 600 per cent, the spokesmen said. Army stock-control centers in the United States would be equipped with electronic brains.

State Seizure Of BTC Ends This Afternoon

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin announced tonight that State seizure of the Baltimore Transit Co. will end tomorrow afternoon.

The governor's announcement came shortly after the company and the Amalgamated Assn. of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America reported the signing of a new contract.

Calling for a 20-cent hourly wage increase spread over 2½ years, the new agreement ended a labor dispute marked by a 39-day strike and legislative enactment of a State seizure law covering strike-bound utilities.

TELL OF "KIDNAPING"—Wassilii Kowalew, Paterson, N. J., and his wife, Nina, display a torn shirt after telling senators in Washington yesterday they believe five Soviet seamen who suddenly gave up U. S. asylum and returned to Russia 18 days ago were kidnaped by Soviet agents. The Kowalews, Russian emigres, said the shirt was worn by one of the men the day before he disappeared. They said when they found it there was blood around the tear. The U. S. yesterday expelled two members of Russia's U. N. delegation because of their part in the "re-defection" of the seamen. House Group Backs Ike's Proposals On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—President Eisenhower's civil rights proposals won the approval of the House Judiciary Committee today.

The vote, taken in a closed session, was not announced. Last week, in a temporary setback for the legislation, the committee voted 14-13 to return all civil rights proposals to a subcommittee.

The proposals which were approved today were submitted by Atty. Gen. Brownell April 9. They call for:

1. A federal Civil Rights Commission.
2. A civil rights division in the Justice Department, partly because of an expected flow of lawsuits over racial integration.
3. A new law to "prevent anyone from threatening, intimidating, or coercing an individual in the exercise of his right to vote."
4. Authority for the attorney general to bring action in federal courts on behalf of any aggrieved person.
5. An end to the present requirement that remedies available in the state be exhausted before a civil rights case can be taken to federal court.

Dulles Predicts Russia To Yield On Arms Control

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles said tonight "the time must come" when the rulers of Russia will be prepared to subject "the new power of modern weapons" to the common will of the world community of nations.

"It may seem that this prospect is remote," Dulles said in a speech prepared for the American Society of International Law, "but when we consider the many startling changes which from time to time have occurred within the Soviet Union we need not regard this particular prospect as wholly visionary."

Dulles discussed the problem of arms control in a general analysis of the problem of "The Institutionalizing of Peace."

He said there is a growing recognition "that destructive power such as that now represented by atomic and nuclear weapons is so great a power that it is clothed with a public and community interest."

"Such power," he said, "ought never to be the tool of any single nation to promote its national objectives or to permit it to defy community law and order.

"Unless that concept is accepted, it is impossible for peace ever to become a stable and dependable institution."

Altar Boy Seriously Burned At Baltimore

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—The filmy dress of a nine-year-old altar boy caught on fire while he was lighting candles during novena services at St. Edwards's Catholic Church today.

Albert Longmire was badly burned.

The child had been sent to light a candle in the church sacristy, a small anteroom off the altar. Suddenly he dashed into the sanctuary, his cassock and surplice ablaze.

The Rev. John Kerr, conducting services, leaped from the pulpit, hurdled the altar rail, grabbed a woman's coat, wrapped it around Albert and beat out the flames.

Winchester Welcomes Festival Queen

WINCHESTER, Va., April 25 (AP)—Laura MacArthur, a cute coed of 19, rode merrily into old Winchester today to a royal welcome heralding her brief but happy reign as queen of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

Queen Laura—they call her "Mimi"—arrived from her Washington home shortly before noon and promptly made a confession.

She can't bake an apple pie.

But she squelched a foul rumor that had caused festival folk to shudder—a low blow report her majesty didn't even like apples.

"Why, of course I like them," she said. "But I'm not eating apple pie at the moment because of my diet."

Diet aside, Mimi shaped up as a well-proportioned lass who will fill the queenly bill well during her three-day reign over the 29th festival.

She also displayed a fine culinary hand in cutting a gigantic 34-pound apple pie that marked the sendoff ceremony.

Storage centers would be widely dispersed in the United States and most of the Army's far-flung chain of overseas supply bases would be done away with.

"By eliminating thousands of warehouses, depots and dumps we will minimize our vulnerability to mass destruction weapons," logistics experts at the Army's European headquarters here said.

Under the new system, the Army would fly or ship supplies direct from bomb-proof storage points in the United States to its armies in the field, doing away with the necessity for most rear supply bases overseas.

Under the plan supplies would be ordered by radio in a simplified code, red tape would be cut and deliveries would be speeded up as much as 600 per cent, the spokesmen said. Army stock-control centers in the United States would be equipped with electronic brains.

State Seizure Of BTC Ends This Afternoon

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin announced tonight that State seizure of the Baltimore Transit Co. will end tomorrow afternoon.

The governor's announcement came shortly after the company and the Amalgamated Assn. of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America reported the signing of a new contract.

Calling for a 20-cent hourly wage increase spread over 2½ years, the new agreement ended a labor dispute marked by a 39-day strike and legislative enactment of a State seizure law covering strike-bound utilities.

TELL OF "KIDNAPING"—Wassilii Kowalew, Paterson, N. J., and his wife, Nina, display a torn shirt after telling senators in Washington yesterday they believe five Soviet seamen who suddenly gave up U. S. asylum and returned to Russia 18 days ago were kidnaped by Soviet agents. The Kowalews, Russian emigres, said the shirt was worn by one of the men the day before he disappeared. They said when they found it there was blood around the tear. The U. S. yesterday expelled two members of Russia's U. N. delegation because of their part in the "re-defection" of the seamen. House Group Backs Ike's Proposals On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—President Eisenhower's civil rights proposals won the approval of the House Judiciary Committee today.

The vote, taken in a closed session, was not announced. Last week, in a temporary setback for the legislation, the committee voted 14-13 to return all civil rights proposals to a subcommittee.

The proposals which were approved today were submitted by Atty. Gen. Brownell April 9. They call for:

1. A federal Civil Rights Commission.

2. A civil rights division in the Justice Department, partly because of an expected flow of lawsuits over racial integration.

3. A new law to "prevent anyone from threatening, intimidating, or coercing an individual in the exercise of his right to vote."

4. Authority for the attorney general to bring action in federal courts on behalf of any aggrieved person.

5. An end to the present requirement that remedies available in the state be exhausted before a civil rights case can be taken to federal court.

The Lake of the Cherokees in northeastern Oklahoma is set in an area which boasts more varieties of wild flowers than any other similar section of the United States.

Dulles Predicts Russia To Yield On Arms Control

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles said tonight "the time must come" when the rulers of Russia will be prepared to subject "the new power of modern weapons" to the common will of the world community of nations.

"It may seem that this prospect is remote," Dulles said in a speech prepared for the American Society of International Law, "but when we consider the many startling changes which from time to time have occurred within the Soviet Union we need not regard this particular prospect as wholly visionary."

Dulles discussed the problem of arms control in a general analysis of the problem of "The Institutionalizing of Peace."

He said there is a growing recognition "that destructive power such as that now represented by atomic and nuclear weapons is so great a power that it is clothed with a public and community interest."

"Such power," he said, "ought never to be the tool of any single nation to promote its national objectives or to permit it to defy community law and order.

"Unless that concept is accepted, it is impossible for peace ever to become a stable and dependable institution."

Altar Boy Seriously Burned At Baltimore

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—The filmy dress of a nine-year-old altar boy caught on fire while he was lighting candles during novena services at St. Edwards's Catholic Church today.

Albert Longmire was badly burned.

The child had been sent to light a candle in the church sacristy, a small anteroom off the altar. Suddenly he dashed into the sanctuary, his cassock and surplice ablaze.

The Rev. John Kerr, conducting services, leaped from the pulpit, hurdled the altar rail, grabbed a woman's coat, wrapped it around Albert and beat out the flames.

Winchester Welcomes Festival Queen

WINCHESTER, Va., April 25 (AP)—Laura MacArthur, a cute coed of 19, rode merrily into old Winchester today to a royal welcome heralding her brief but happy reign as queen of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

Queen Laura—they call her "Mimi"—arrived from her Washington home shortly before noon and promptly made a confession.

She can't bake an apple pie.

But she squelched a foul rumor that had caused festival folk to shudder—a low blow report her majesty didn't even like apples.

"Why, of course I like them," she said. "But I'm not eating apple pie at the moment because of my diet."

Diet aside, Mimi shaped up as a well-proportioned lass who will fill the queenly bill well during her three-day reign over the 29th festival.

She also displayed a fine culinary hand in cutting a gigantic 34-pound apple pie that marked the sendoff ceremony.

Changes In City Directory During 97-Year Span Provide Sidelights On Cumberland's History

Many changes have been made in the spelling of streets, names of streets and professions of local residents since the first Cumberland Directory was published 97 years ago.

The first City Directory was published in 1859 because the citizens of Cumberland felt that the growing importance of the city demanded that its population and business should be represented in book form.

Raymond L. Beck, 103 Decatur Street, still has in his possession a copy of the first City Guide and Business Mirror, which was compiled by C. S. Williams of Cincinnati.

The first name in the directory was that of Mrs. Margaret Abbott who resided on Center Street. The last name in the book was Mrs. Margaret N. Zink, who also resided on Centre Street.

Spelling Differed

At the time of publication Allegany Street was spelled Alleghany; Baltimore Avenue was Baltimore Turnpike; Beall was Beal; Fayette was Fayatta, and Greene Street was just plain Green. Perhaps some of the differences were just mispelled words.

A few of the alleys and lanes listed back in 1859 were Apple Lane, Bridget Lane, Cherry Alley, Chestnut Lane, Hickory Lane, Huckleberry Lane, Papa Alley, Plum Alley, Spruce Alley, Walnut Alley, West Lane and White Oak Lane.

At that time Harrison Street was divided into Harrison North, which was located from Little Valley Road to Front, and Harrison No. 2, running east from South Mechanic, south of Baltimore.

A few of the professions listed in the first directory were attorney, bar keeper, butcher, school teacher, plasterer, boarding house operator, bookkeeper, cabinet maker, carpenter, clerk, engineer, laborer, merchant, notary public and servant.

Three bakers were listed in the first edition, including Joseph Bohnert, Jacob Flackenstine and John Shane. Listed under "attorneys at law" were Jacob Brown, H. Bruce, Peter Devecman, Thomas Devecman, J. H. Gordon, Thomas A. Hopkins, William Kilgour, McKaig and McKaig, George A. Pearre, James M. Schley, Saml M. Semmes, G. A. Thruston, C. B. Thruston and William Walsh.

Berston and McCleary, Karns Brothers, Snyder and Mertens and John Young were listed as boat builders, while William K. Newman operated the city's only bowling saloon. John G. Trieber and the George E. Ways Company were the city's candy manufactories, while Taylor and Company operated a car builders plant.

According to the directory Hummelshine and Ewing were the city's dentists, while Miss A Hall, Miss Maguire and Miss Mathilda L. Thomas were the towns's dress makers. Misses Sarah and Em-

Court House Has Records From 1791

The Court House on Washington Street is a storehouse of historic records which mirror the days when this area was not much more than a wilderness outpost.

The first two deeds filed in the land records were listed January 1, 1791, and indicate something of the monetary system then in force.

In the first deed inscribed in fancy script handwriting, a property on Washington Street, then known as Lot 96, was sold by Captain Jonathan Morris to Captain John Lynn for 10 pounds. This shows that English money was widely used after the Revolutionary War against the Britons.

Ground Rent

The deed included an annual ground rent to Thomas Beall of Samuel.

The second deed, filed the same day, listed a property purchased by Henry Kemp from Thomas Beall of Samuel for 20 pounds. The property was Lot 102 of the Town Plat. An annual ground rent of one Spanish milled dollar was provided.

Cumberland's first court was held April 25, 1791, at the home of John Graham on North Mechanic Street. The first Court House was completed in 1799 and was located on Washington Street where the Cumberland Free Public Library is now situated.

The second Court House was completed in 1841 and on January 5, 1893, it burned to the ground. The present Court House was completed in 1894. The 1893 Court House fire destroyed some records but the most valuable ones, such as deeds, etc., were saved.

Copied Newspaper Listings

A small ledger with the names of couples who obtained marriage licenses between August 1, 1791, and a hundred years later was copied from newspaper listings. The original records were burned in the 1893 fire.

Two publications, "The Cumberland Civilian" and "Cumberland Independent" were source material for the marriage license records. The ledger lists the dates the wedding permits were obtained and the names of the man and woman embarking on a wedded life.

The first recorded couple to obtain a marriage license took out papers August 1, 1791. Godfrey Richards and Tempe Knight were the man and woman involved.

Other pioneer marriage couples were David Beall and Mary Davis, Robert Green and Barbara Chambers, George Jordan and Elizabeth Felrix and John Glazner and Mary Snediker. These were taken out within the same year.

Five Or Six A Month

It is interesting to note that about five or six couples obtained marriage licenses each month. This indicates that Cumberland was in the process of growing at a fast rate considering the times.

The marriage license listings in the little ledger reveal the tide of immigration to this section. In the 1940s there were quite a few names of Irish extraction appearing on the list. A similar increase in German names started about the same time.

Most popular name among the brides-to-be more than 100 years ago was Elizabeth. Other names of brides included Phoebe, Prudence, Liddy (which was probably a form of Elizabeth), Susanna, Mary, Matilda, Polly, Ann, Christina, Sara, Hannah, Abigail and Rosanna.

Some of the earliest names on the marriage records for the bridegrooms were Payne, Cox, Moore, McKean, Sapp, and the ones mentioned above.

First Will Recorded

The ledgers in the register of wills office also lists some unusual documents.

The first will recorded was that of Matthias Snook. It was probated December 29, 1790, and Snook made out the will November 30, 1790, just the month before. Allegany County was spelled with an "H" in this document.

Snook's widow, Barbara, was left his property. Samuel Elitte and Joseph Warnock were the executors and William McMahon was the register of wills.

Many of the wills were signed by a simple "X" as those persons possessing the ability to read and write were not so prevalent. Other wills on record show bequests of Negro slaves to relatives or friends in the early 1800s.

Changes In City

eline Heckman and H. D. Wineow operated the city's fancy goods stores, Charles G. Endriss and George Reuschlein operated glove manufacturers and A. R. Fisher and M. L. Rizer were gunsmiths.

The directory shows that Levi Eickard was the ice dealer; A. Villison ran the livery stable; John Tauber was a locksmith; John Smenner operated the Marble Works and Henry F. Lear operated an oyster saloon.

The faculty of the Redemptionist House of Studies was listed. This institution was to prepare young men for the priesthood. The school was instituted in 1851 and members of the order were known as Redemptionists.

When the first City Directory was published the city's fire departments included the Mountaineer Hose Company which was located on Liberty Street, the Pioneer Hose Company on the corner of Frederick and Center streets and the Cumberland Hose Company located on Mechanic Street near the Railroad Bridge.

Court House Has Records From 1791

The Court House on Washington Street is a storehouse of historic records which mirror the days when this area was not much more than a wilderness outpost.

The first two deeds filed in the land records were listed January 1, 1791, and indicate something of the monetary system then in force.

In the first deed inscribed in fancy script handwriting, a property on Washington Street, then known as Lot 96, was sold by Captain Jonathan Morris to Captain John Lynn for 10 pounds. This shows that English money was widely used after the Revolutionary War against the Britons.

Ground Rent

The deed included an annual ground rent to Thomas Beall of Samuel.

The second deed, filed the same day, listed a property purchased by Henry Kemp from Thomas Beall of Samuel for 20 pounds. The property was Lot 102 of the Town Plat. An annual ground rent of one Spanish milled dollar was provided.

Cumberland's first court was held April 25, 1791, at the home of John Graham on North Mechanic Street. The first Court House was completed in 1799 and was located on Washington Street where the Cumberland Free Public Library is now situated.

The second Court House was completed in 1841 and on January 5, 1893, it burned to the ground. The present Court House was completed in 1894. The 1893 Court House fire destroyed some records but the most valuable ones, such as deeds, etc., were saved.

Copied Newspaper Listings

A small ledger with the names of couples who obtained marriage licenses between August 1, 1791, and a hundred years later was copied from newspaper listings. The original records were burned in the 1893 fire.

Two publications, "The Cumberland Civilian" and "Cumberland Independent" were source material for the marriage license records. The ledger lists the dates the wedding permits were obtained and the names of the man and woman embarking on a wedded life.

The first recorded couple to obtain a marriage license took out papers August 1, 1791. Godfrey Richards and Tempe Knight were the man and woman involved.

Other pioneer marriage couples were David Beall and Mary Davis, Robert Green and Barbara Chambers, George Jordan and Elizabeth Felrix and John Glazner and Mary Snediker. These were taken out within the same year.

Five Or Six A Month

It is interesting to note that about five or six couples obtained marriage licenses each month. This indicates that Cumberland was in the process of growing at a fast rate considering the times.

The marriage license listings in the little ledger reveal the tide of immigration to this section. In the 1940s there were quite a few names of Irish extraction appearing on the list. A similar increase in German names started about the same time.

Most popular name among the brides-to-be more than 100 years ago was Elizabeth. Other names of brides included Phoebe, Prudence, Liddy (which was probably a form of Elizabeth), Susanna, Mary, Matilda, Polly, Ann, Christina, Sara, Hannah, Abigail and Rosanna.

Some of the earliest names on the marriage records for the bridegrooms were Payne, Cox, Moore, McKean, Sapp, and the ones mentioned above.

First Will Recorded

The ledgers in the register of wills office also lists some unusual documents.

The first will recorded was that of Matthias Snook. It was probated December 29, 1790, and Snook made out the will November 30, 1790, just the month before. Allegany County was spelled with an "H" in this document.

Snook's widow, Barbara, was left his property. Samuel Elitte and Joseph Warnock were the executors and William McMahon was the register of wills.

Many of the wills were signed by a simple "X" as those persons possessing the ability to read and write were not so prevalent. Other wills on record show bequests of Negro slaves to relatives or friends in the early 1800s.

Changes In City

eline Heckman and H. D. Wineow operated the city's fancy goods stores, Charles G. Endriss and George Reuschlein operated glove manufacturers and A. R. Fisher and M. L. Rizer were gunsmiths.

The directory shows that Levi Eickard was the ice dealer; A. Willison ran the livery stable; John Tauber was a locksmith; John Smenner operated the Marble Works and Henry F. Lear operated an oyster saloon.

The faculty of the Redemptionist House of Studies was listed. This institution was to prepare young men for th priesthood. The school was instituted in 1851 and members of the order were known as Redemptionists.

When the first City Directory was published the city's fire departments included the Mountaineer Hose Company which was located on Liberty Street, the Pioneer Hose Company on the corner of Frederick and Center streets and the Cumberland Hose Company located on Mechanic Street near the Railroad Bridge.

East-West Tension Is Panel Topic

"Easing East-West Tension" will be presented in a governmental panel and also a non-governmental panel by the International Relations Group of Frostburg-Georges Creek AAUW in conjunction with the all-day regional and neighborhood conference of the State Teachers College International Relations Club Saturday at the college.

The governmental panel will be in the morning session by an embassy representative, and will be followed by an open forum. Foreign students, members of the World University Service, and Miss Ruby Livengood, from the local college, will take up ways of easing East-West tension for the afternoon session. The latter will give the mental hygiene approach; and O. E. Onyewu a South African student, the intercultural understanding and religious approach. It also will be followed by a discussion.

The program beigns at 9:30 with a coffee session. Don Sellin, program chairman and vice president of the club, will introduce John Swope, Westernport, president of the college club. Sociability will mark the luncheon. There will be a brief break in the program, before the banquet at 6:30, when Richard Rowson, head of the New England region Foreign Policy Association, will be the speaker. An open forum will follow.

Either "day tickets" to the conference, or a "half day ticket" beginning at 2 with the non-governmental panel and including the banquet and speaker, may be obtained. The committee consists of Mr. Swope, doing student teaching at Mt. Savage, who may be reached at the college after 6; Miss Livengood, Oldtown, club secretary; Miss Louise Ewald, Cumberland, at the college dormitory; Arthur Hugglestone, East Main Street, Frostburg, treasurer, at Frostburg; Alan Shane, Beall Street, Frostburg, Ticket chairman; Dr. Howard Lewis Briggs, Dr. Hazel G. Tickets purchased before Tuesday but not delivered may be picked up at registration at Lowndes Hall.

Any club member or person in the Community wishing to participate in the panel is invited.

This will be the regular April meeting of the AAUW group, originally scheduled for the 28th. Subject material, which the National AAUW made available to branch study groups chairmen for the panel on UN and its agencies in United States foreign policy, may be obtained from the International Relations chairman.

OLD CORNER, NEW FACE—This is the corner of South George Street and Baltimore Street not too many years ago but before the Montgomery Ward store was built. Modern traffic lights can be seen on the light pole. The frame buildings were torn down to make room for the modern construction which now houses the chain department store.

15 Minutes May Save Anglers From Drowning

ATLANTA, Ga. — (AP) — The first fishing trips and family outings of the season may be hectic affairs, but if you think you'll be able to spare 15 minutes for learning a way to save yourself from drowning, paste this on the lid of your tackle box or picnic basket.

Fifteen minutes is about what it takes to understand the water survival technique called "drownproofing" at Georgia Tech, where it was developed.

A few practice sessions might qualify you as a survival expert, able to float even in hipboots or waders, if some of the extreme demonstrations at Tech and some unexpectedly rigorous field tests since have shown.

The system, which really involves keeping alive in deep water with an absolute minimum of energy, is not brand-new. During the past year it has been used by various youth groups, schools and colleges and the armed forces. The Water Safety Congress has urged still further use, especially by outdoormen and their familes.

Big advantage to the method is that it can be learned in minutes, and the terrifying complications like cramps, heavy clothing, disabling injuries, rough water and long immersion have practically no effect on survival.

In his original report, for instance, Prof. Fred R. Lanoe of Tech told of 60 poor swimmers at Tech who took part in a test. One-third had their hands tied behind their backs, one third had legs tied in a half bent position. One third remained free.

Average quitting time of these poor swimmers, Prof. Lanoe said, was four hours and forty minutes. Sixteen stayed afloat eight hours.

Now then, to details. Say that you are suddenly pitched into the water, from a capsized boat, fully clothed. There may be lifelines, life preservers, floating cushions and all sorts of safety devices in the boat or on shore, but there you are, alone.

Here is a step-by-step outline of what to do:

1. With lungs full, float face down. Just relax. The back of your neck will be out of water.

2. Move your hands up, preparing for a downward thrust in the water. Make sure your mouth is empty.

3. Exhale through the nose while raising your face out of the water.

4. Make the downward thrust with hands or feet or both to clear the surface with your mouth, inhale through your mouth and when your lungs are full, sink back into the water.

5. You'll float again. Beginners can rest here for three seconds or so. Experts rest 10 seconds. Then start the cycle again.

And there you are. This may have been 15 minutes well spent.

East-West Tension Is Panel Topic

"Easing East-West Tension" will be presented in a governmental panel and also a non-governmental panel by the International Relations Group of Frostburg-Georges Creek AAUW in conjunction with the all-day regional and neighborhood conference of the State Teachers College International Relations Club Saturday at the college.

The governmental panel will be in the morning session by an embassy representative, and will be followed by an open forum. Foreign students, members of the World University Service, and Miss Ruby Livengood, from the local college, will take up ways of easing East-West tension for the afternoon session. The latter will give the mental hygiene approach; and O. E. Onyewu a South African student, the intercultural understanding and religious approach. It also will be followed by a discussion.

The program beigns at 9:30 with a coffee session. Don Sellin, program chairman and vice president of the club, will introduce John Swope, Westernport, president of the college club. Sociability will mark the luncheon. There will be a brief break in the program, before the banquet at 6:30, when Richard Rowson, head of the New England region Foreign Policy Association, will be the speaker. An open forum will follow.

Either "day tickets" to the conference, or a "half day ticket" beginning at 2 with the non-governmental panel and including the banquet and speaker, may be obtained. The committee consists of Mr. Swope, doing student teaching at Mt. Savage, who may be reached at the college after 6; Miss Livengood, Oldtown, club secretary; Miss Louise Ewald, Cumberland, at the college dormitory; Arthur Hugglestone, East Main Street, Frostburg, treasurer, at Frostburg; Alan Shane, Beall Street, Frostburg, Ticket chairman; Dr. Howard Lewis Briggs, Dr. Hazel G. Ramsay, faculty coadvisors, the latter this year also serving as IR chairman of the Frostburg-Georges Creek AAUW. Tickets purchased before Tuesday but not delivered may be picked up at registration at Lowndes Hall.

Any club member or person in the Community wishing to participate in the panel is invited.

This will be the regular April meeting of the AAUW group, originally scheduled for the 28th. Subject material, which the National AAUW made available to branch study groups chairmen for the panel on UN and its agencies in United States foreign policy, may be obtained from the International Relations chairman.

Luke Paper Mill Was Parent Plant Of Mighty Industrial Giant

Firm Shows 68 Years Of Progress

When William A. Luke, a hard-headed Scotsman with a gambling spirit, came to Western Maryland back in 1888 to start making paper by a process that had never before been commercially rewarding, he took quite a gamble indeed.

But the past two-thirds of a century has seen Luke's bet pay off at terriffic odds—a far-flung paper empire with six U. S. plants an American and two foreign subsidiaries earning better than $15 million last year, a working force of 8,200 employes with an annual payroll now over $50 million, and a position among the nation's top 10 paper producers.

Though William Luke was a man who did few things by chance, the selection of what is now the Town of Luke as the site for the parent plant of what is now West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company came about in just that way.

Shipped Out Dried Pulp

Luke first came to Keyser, W. Va., to buy Henry Gassaway Davis' race track as the site of his projected pulp mill. But Davis, who didn't want to sell, pointed out that sulfurous waters from Georges Creek coal mines polluted the Potomac River at Keyser, and suggested that Luke consider another piece of land Davis owned upriver.

That tract turned out to be Davis' Island in West Piedmont, Md., which was just below the confluence of the Savage and Potomac rivers and was near a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad connection at Beryl, W. Va.

Luke and two of his sons, David L. and John Guthrie Luke, took a look, bought the land and scraped up $60,000 to $100,000 to found the Piedmont Pulp and Paper Company. William Luke was president, John, vice president and general manager, and David, secretary-treasurer.

The mill was completed in 1889 and soon shipped out its first carload of dried pulp for the paper-making industry. The finished product wasn't yet being made at Luke.

Expansion Starts

Soon the pulp market slackened, so the Lukes bought a huge Fourdrinier machine to make Manila wrapping paper, and almost before anyone knew it, the infant corporation was making money.

In 1892—at the ripe age of four years—the company made the first move in a long series of expansions by starting up a sulfite mill at Davis, W. Va., to handle new business. A third paper machine went into operation at Luke the same year.

In 1893 the Luke plant changed over from Manila to book paper, put in two more machines in the next three years, landed a government post card contract along the way, and consolidated its two plants in 1895 into the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company.

By 1899 the rapidly growing firm had bought out the Morrison and Cass Paper Company at Tyrone, Pa., and opened a new plant at Covington, Va.

In 1900-1902, after river pollution had become a serious problem, the original mill switched over from the sulfite process to the soda process and built a recovery plant to reclaim wastes it had been dumping into the Potomac. Later the mill switched to the present sulfate pulping process.

By 1902 the Cumberland Evening Times could report, in a special industrial edition, that the company's capital stock was up $3,600,000, and that the Luke mill, with a daily capacity of 125 tons of paper, plus pulp and fibre, was entering an expansion program which would nearly double its capacity.

1,800 Employes

Said part of the Times' headline: "The Best and Latest All Around Equipment and Most Perfect Boiler and Power Plant in the Business. The Finest Machine-Finished and Super-Calendered Book and Flat Writing Paper Produced and Pulp of the Highest Grade. Shipping Facilities of the Best."

Between 1903 and 1906 the Luke mill switched from steam to electrical power throughout the plant, installed two more paper machines to bring the total to the present figure of seven, and built a coating mill, from which the first carload of paper was shipped in 1907.

The plant kept on building and enlarging, rebuilding and modernizing its paper machines until it gained for itself the reputation as producer of the finest machine-made coated papers anywhere.

The rapid growth of the early years kept right on into the 20th Century, if at a somewhat more sedate pace, until the company had added new plants at Mechanicville, N. Y., Williamsburg, Pa., and Charleston, S. C. Only the Davis plant has been abandoned.

Also added in recent years were The Hinde & Dauch Paper Company, with 13 American box factories, Hinde and Dauch Company of Canada, Ltd., a partially-owned subsidiary which produces corrugated containers, and the wholly-owned Rigesa, S. A., of Brazil, which turns out corrugated containers and paper products.

Timber Cutters Kept Busy

But despite the company's ever-widening horizons, the 76-year-old parent plant at Luke has not been left behind. Luke's seven thundering paper machines today roll out a daily product of about 400 tons of coated printed and labelling papers, post card stock and white converting grade papers. Many of the big national magazines use the plant's top-quality coated papers for their covers.

Timber cutters for 60 miles around are kept busy supplying the hungry machines with pines, oak, and mixed hardwoods, which are used in about equal proportions.

Last year the mill paid out $2,222,000 for pulpwood, which was among $11 million worth of materials and supplies bought locally Westvaco thus poured nearly $2 million into the economy of the Tri-State area in materials and wages

Heading up the operation at Luke today is John A. Luke, greatgrandson of the Founder William A. Luke, grandson of original Secretary-Treasurer David L. Luke, and son of David L. Luke Jr., now president of Westvaco. John's brother, David III, is a vice president.

Born in the plant town of Tyrone, Pa., while his father was stationed there with the company, John Luke served in the Air Force, graduated from Yale after the war, and went to work with the company as acting employment manager at Charleston.

Two years later he was promoted to personnel manager, then became assistant plant manager at Charleston in 1953. He came to Luke as manager last September.

15 Minutes May Save Anglers From Drowning

ATLANTA, Ga. — (AP) — The first fishing trips and family outings of the season may be hectic affairs, but if you think you'll be able to spare 15 minutes for learning a way to save yourself from drowning, paste this on the lid of your tackle box or picnic basket.

Fifteen minutes is about what it takes to understand the water survival technique called "drownproofing" at Georgia Tech, where it was developed.

A few practice sessions might qualify you as a survival expert, able to float even in hipboots or waders, if some of the extreme demonstrations at Tech and some unexpectedly rigorous field tests since have shown.

The system, which really involves keeping alive in deep water with an absolute minimum of energy, is not brand-new. During the past year it has been used by various youth groups, schools and colleges and the armed forces. The Water Safety Congress has urged still further use, especially by outdoormen and their familes.

Big advantage to the method is that it can be learned in minutes, and the terrifying complications like cramps, heavy clothing, disabling injuries, rough water and long immersion have practicallyn o effect on survival.

In his original report, for instance, Prof. Fred R. Lanoe of Tech told of 60 poor swimmers at Tech who took part in a test. One-third had their hands tied behind their backs, one third had legs tied in a half bent position. One third remained free.

Average quitting time of these poor swimmers, Prof. Lanoe said, was four hours and forty minutes. Sixteen stayed afloat eight hours.

Now then, to details. Say that you are suddenly pitched into the water, from a capsized boat, fully clothed. There may be lifelines, life preservers, floating cushions and all sorts of safety devices in the boat or on shore, but there you are, alone.

Here is a step-by-step outline of what to do:

1. With lungs full, float face down. Just relax. The back of your neck will be out of water.

2. Move your hands up, preparing for a downward thrust in the water. Make sure your mouth is empty.

3. Exhale through the nose while raising your face out of the water.

McNeill's Raid Here One Of Civil War's Most Daring Undertakings

An account of the part Cumberland played in the Civil War cannot be complete without retelling the bold episode of the capture of Generals B. F. Kelly and George Crook.

Gen. Kelly was commander of the Department of West Virginia with headquarters in Cumberland while Gen. Crook was assigned here as a brigadier general on the Department of West Virginia staff.

There have been many published accounts of the raid, but one which has not received wide circulation is the story of the war's boldest raid in the book "From Baltimore, Md., to Charleston, W. Va.," published by J. R. Schaeffer in Gormania, W. Va., in 1906.

Commanded By Imboden

He tells of the formation of Partisan Rangers by the Confederate Congress in the spring of 1862 with Col. J. B. Imboden as commander.

Col. Imboden is known as the only officer who captured Cumberland in its history since the Indian frontier days.

One of the groups of Partisan Rangers was McNeill's Rangers, a band of 200 cavalrymen from the South Branch section under the command of Capt. John McNeill who had been in service earlier in the war in Missouri.

Capt. McNeill went to the section of his choice, his native Hardy County and Hampshire County. He was accidentally killed in an attack on Mt. Jackson, but his band of daring men carried on the name of McNeill. They were under the command of his son, Jesse C. McNeill, who had been first lieutenant under his father's command.

Schaeffer said in his book back in 1906:

Unexcelled In History

"The daring, heroic and hazardous undertaking of such an exploit is not excelled in history. The Blue and the Gray still talk of it, and their descendants are calling for the story which was never written in detail. The best account I have ever seen of it is that written by General John B. Imboden. Being personally acquainted with two of the participants in that memorable night's raid into Cumberland, B. F. Wotring and J. L. Harvey, I can relate some incidents not heretofore recorded.

"JESSE C. McNEILL"

"Son of Captain John H. McNeill and first lieutenant under his father's command; a bare-faced boy, yet he inherited the zeal and lacrity manifested in the old captain, and the following narrative shows his determination to carry out his father's plans. Captain J. H. McNeill had confided to a few of his fast friends his determination to disguise himself and a few of his most resolute and best mounted men as Federal cavalry, enter Cumberland, take captive General B. F. Kelly, take him to Richmond and exchange him for General W. H. F. Lee, son of General R. E. Lee. General Kelly's headquarters were in Barnum Hotel (now the Windsor Hotel) and Crook was at the Revere House (now the Kenneweg Building), in Cumberland, then a town of 8,000 inhabitants, where were 10,000 Federal troops in winter quarters. The day before the raid, Captain McNeill (Jesse C., son of John H.), sent J. B. Fay, a native of Cumberland, and C. R. Haller, a young man from Missouri, to survey the situation, locate outposts, pickets, etc.

"When all reports were in and plans definitely decided upon, the company congregated on the Virginia side of the Potomac, and 16 of the brave Rangers dared to disguise themselves in Federal uniform and to lay down their lives if necessary in accomplishing so hazardous an undertaking. These were followed by 14 others, no less brave, but lacking uniforms. On the night of February 21, 1865, they began their march.

Two Feet Of Snow

"Lt. Isaac C. Welton, equal in courage and ability to Captain McNeill, was second in command. It is stated they were armed with double barreled shotguns and Colt's revolvers. All was quiet on the Potomac, the night was dark and cold, the river was frozen over and the snow was about two feet deep. They crossed the Potomac near what was known as Brady's Mill, entered the county road leading along the foot of the mountain, entering Cumberland by way of Greene Street. They came upon a garrison a few miles from the city and when challenged, answered: 'Friends from New Creek.' They dashed upon the pickets and captured them, and with a threat of instant death secured the countersign for the night which was 'Bull Run.' They passed several outposts and entered the city triumphantly, singing Yankee songs. No time was to be lost here, for it was not long before day would dawn. They passed off as a company of Ohio cavalry with important information for the General. John Cunningham, Charles Nichols and Joe Kuykendall proceeded at once to Barnum Hotel, imposing on the sleepy guard in front of it, who directed them to Kelly's room. A few raps at the door aroused the General, who opened it only to look into the muzzle of several cocked pistols, and to receive the information, 'General, you are a prisoner! Dress quickly if you value your life, keep quiet; any alarm means instant death'. While this was going on, Joe Vandiver, James Daily and some others entered Revere House and received General Crook in a similar manner. General Kelly's adjutant general and Captain Melvin were also captured; meanwhile Sergeant Fay was cutting off telegraph communications with New Creek, now Keyser.

"We here quote a paragraph verbatim from the pen of General J. B. Imboden:"

"'They went down the river, passing on the outskirts of a part of their army, then sound asleep and soon to a camp guard and were challenged with, 'Who comes here?' To which McNeill replied, 'Company B, Third Ohio Cavalry, with the countersign and we are in a hurry.'

"'Instead of requiring the countersign, the officer inquired: 'What's up?' McNeill responded: 'Oh! Old granny Kelly had a nightmare or bad dream that the Rebs are about to come down on him and he is sending us out in this bitter weather to scout the other side of the river. I sometimes wish they would catch him. Don't you think he is a regular old granny in his nervousness whenever he hears there are a few Johnnies across the river?' 'Yes I do; every time I am put on outpost duty such weather as this.' 'Well, let us pass, we want to get back as soon as possible,' and away they went at a gallop. Similar chats occurred at other posts, Captain McNeill impersonating the Ohio captain. At the last post, wishing that General Grant would remove Kelly and put Crook in command, to which Crook laughed outright and pinched Kelly's leg next to him as they rode side by side with guards in front and rear.

They went by way of Moore-

Firm Shows 68 Years Of Progress

When William A. Luke, a hard-headed Scotsman with a gambling spirit, came to Western Maryland back in 1888 to start making paper by a process that had never before been commercially rewarding, he took quite a gamble indeed.

But the past two-thirds of a century has seen Luke's bet pay off at terriffic odds—a far-flung paper empire with six U. S. plants an American and two foreign subsidiaries earning better than $15 million last year, a working force of 8,200 employes with an annual payroll now over $50 million, and a position among the nation's top 10 paper producers.

Though William Luke was a man who did few things by chance, the selection of what is now the Town of Luke as the site for the parent plant of what is now West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company came about in just that way.

Shipped Out Dried Pulp

Luke first came to Keyser, W. Va., to buy Henry Gassaway Davis' race track as the site of his projected pulp mill. But Davis, who didn't want to sell, pointed out that sulfurous waters from Georges Creek coal mines polluted the Potomac River at Keyser, and suggested that Luke consider another piece of land Davis owned upriver.

That tract turned out to be Davis' Island in West Piedmont, Md., which was just below the confluence of the Savage and Potomac rivers and was near a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad connection at Beryl, W. Va.

Luke and two of his sons, David L. and John Guthrie Luke, took a look, bought the land and scraped up $60,000 to $100,000 to found the Piedmont Pulp and Paper Company. William Luke was president, John, vice president and general manager, and David, secretary-treasurer.

The mill was completed in 1889 and soon shipped out its first carload of dried pulp for the paper-making industry. The finished product wasn't yet being made at Luke.

Expansion Starts

Soon the pulp market slackened, so the Lukes bought a huge Fourdrinier machine to make Manila wrapping paper, and almost before anyone knew it, the infant corporation was making money.

In 1892—at the ripe age of four years—the company made the first move in a long series of expansions by starting up a sulfite mill at Davis, W. Va., to handle new business. A third paper machine went into operation at Luke the same year.

In 1893 the Luke plant changed over from Manila to book paper, put in two more machines in the next three years, landed a government post card contract along the way, and consolidated its two plants in 1895 into the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company.

By 1899 the rapidly growing firm had bought out the Morrison and Cass Paper Company at Tyrone, Pa., and opened a new plant at Covington, Va.

In 1900-1902, after river pollution had become a serious problem, the original mill switched over from the sulfite process to the soda process and built a recovery plant to reclaim wastes it had been dumping into the Potomac. Later the mill switched to the present sulfate pulping process.

By 1902 the Cumberland Evening Times could report, in a special industrial edition, that the company's capital stock was up $3,600,000, and that the Luke mill, with a daily capacity of 125 tons of paper, plus pulp and fibre, was entering an expansion program which would nearly double its capacity.

1,800 Employes

Said part of the Times' headline: "The Best and Latest All Around Equipment and Most Perfect Boiler and Power Plant in the Business. The Finest Machine-Finished and Super-Calendered Book and Flat Writing Paper Produced and Pulp of the Highest Grade. Shipping Facilities of the Best."

Between 1903 and 1906 the Luke mill switched from steam to electrical power throughout the plant, installed two more paper machines to bring the total to the present figure of seven, and built a coating mill, from which the first carload of paper was shipped in 1907.

The plant kept on building and enlarging, rebuilding and modernizing its paper machines until it gained for itself the reputation as producer of the finest machine-made coated papers anywhere.

The rapid growth of the early years kept right on into the 20th Century, if at a somewhat more sedate pace, until the company had added new plants at Mechanicville, N. Y., Williamsburg, Pa., and Charleston, S. C. Only the Davis plant has been abandoned.

Also added in recent years were The Hinde & Dauch Paper Company, with 13 American box factories, Hinde and Dauch Company of Canada, Ltd., a partially-owned subsidiary which produces corrugated containers, and the wholly-owned Rigesa, S. A., of Brazil, which turns out corrugated containers and paper products.

Timber Cutters Kept Busy

But despite the company's ever-widening horizons, the 76-year-old parent plant at Luke has not been left behind. Luke's seven thundering paper machines today roll out a daily product of about 400 tons of coated printed and labelling papers, post card stock and white converting grade papers. Many of the big national magazines use the plant's top-quality coated papers for their covers.

Timber cutters for 60 miles around are kept busy supplying the hungry machines with pines, oak, and mixed hardwoods, which are used in about equal proportions.

Last year the mill paid out $2,222,000 for pulpwood, which was among $11 million worth of materials and supplies bought locally Westvaco thus poured nearly $2 million into the economy of the Tri-State area in materials and wages

Heading up the operation at Luke today is John A. Luke, greatgrandson of the Founder William A. Luke, grandson of original Secretary-Treasurer David L. Luke, and son of David L. Luke Jr., now president of Westvaco. John's brother, David III, is a vice president.

Born in the plant town of Tyrone, Pa., while his father was stationed there with the company, John Luke served in the Air Force, graduated from Yale after the war, and went to work with the company as acting employment manager at Charleston.

Two years later he was promoted to personnel manager, then became assistant plant manager at Charleston in 1953. He came to Luke as manager last September.

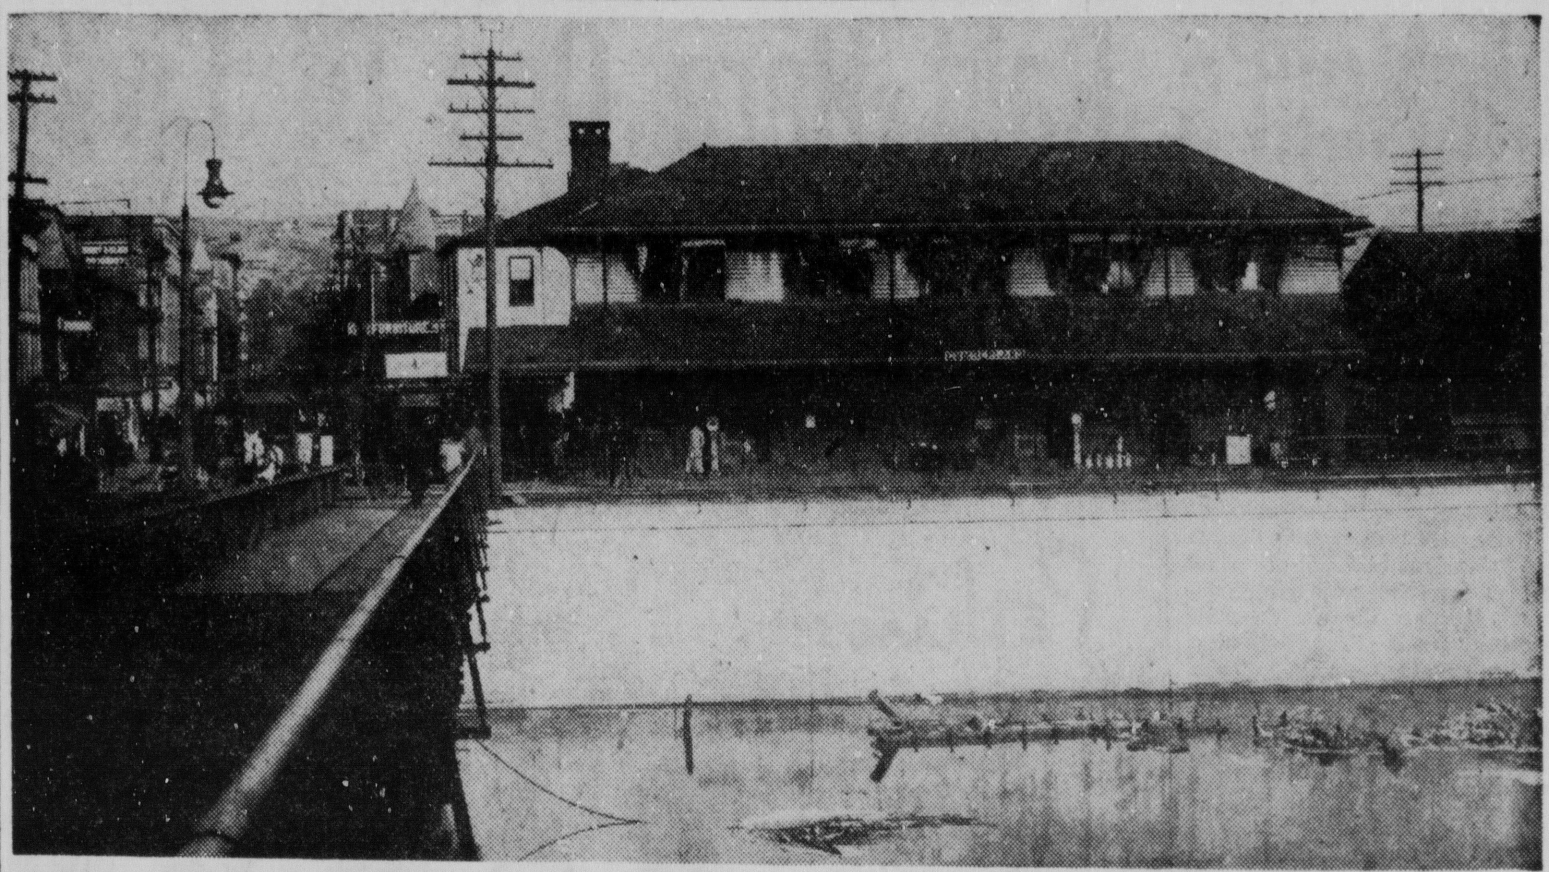
DINGLE CIRCLE—The intersection of McMullen Highway, Greene Street and Braddock road some 300 feet from the entrance to the Dingle. Car is parked before what is now the Standard Esso Station while circle's street light is now located just to the rear of the car. Other vehicle on far right descends Braddock Road and entrance to the Dingle is at center of photograph taken in 1920. Fayette Street entrance to Dingle Circle is behind flower-bedecked hill to right while Gephart Drive begins at left of houses.



RAILWAY STATION—The West Virginia Central Railway station was located at the corner of what is now Baltimore and Canal Street at the Wills Creek crossing. To the left is the bridge across the creek which has been replaced by the concrete construction now connecting Greene Street, Washington Street and the main thoroughfare. The present bridge is to be replaced soon as a part of the flood control project.

City Loyalties Were Divided In Civil War

A cat on a hot tin roof.

That, in effect, was Cumberland during the Civil War, or — as Southern sympathizers say it—the War Between the States.

Here was a prize for the Confederates.

Cumberland was an important terminal as far as rail, highway and river-canal transportation was concerned.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the National Road and the C&O Canal were important connections between the West and the capital of the Union, Washington, D. C.

Maryland, Cumberland Divided

Maryland was divided in its sentiment about the rights and wrongs of the issue of the Union and Secession. Cumberland, as an important city in the border state, was no different.

No sooner had the call to the colors been issued after the firing on Fort Sumter than men flocked to the armed services of both the Union and the Confederacy.

The annals of the Civil War find much personal tragedy in Cumberland and Allegany County—that of brother fighting brother, and neighbor fighting neighbor.

The border states, such as Maryland, were the scenes of much of this bitter conflict.

And, history tells us, Cumberland was strong in its feelings.

In early May 1861, after the fall of Fort Sumter in April, two public meetings were held in separate halls on the same evening—one to protest against the creation of the "Board of Public Safety."

This was following the special session of the General Assembly held April 22 in Frederick (Annapolis was occupied by Federal troops).

The legislature had met to take such measures to "maintain peace, order and security within our limits." The following day the House of Delegates voted in effect that it did not possess the power to pass an ordinance of secession.

Some Hoped For Neutrality

At the one meeting here in May, 1861, strong Union speeches were made and resolutions were passed calling for the preservation of the Union.

At the other, where Conditional Union men met, a resolution was offered that if the government at Washington failed to give the South certain guarantees it would be Maryland's duty to leave the Union. But this order failed in the confusion that followed when one of the men attending proposed to postpone this action until after the peace conference.

Until this time, many Cumberlanders hoped that Maryland would remain in a state of armed neutrality, but not taking sides. At first there were few who believed in either the coercion of the South or the secession of the Southern states, but soon there came violent differences of opinion in Cumberland when it appeared Maryland would be a battleground.

By the summer of 1861, things were in bad shape in Cumberland. The canal and railroad, constantly bothered by Confederate raids, were nearly at a standstill. Industry stopped and business was stymied.

But on the night of June 7, 1861, the alarm changed to a sense of security.

That was when the 11th Regiment of Indiana Zouaves under the command of Col. Lew Wallace arrived in June 1861 to protect this vital point.

Ordered By Lincoln

This action was the result of an order of President Abraham Lincoln.

The Zouaves stayed at Campobello (now the site of Allegany High School) until July of that year when they were replaced by the Kane Rifle Regiment under Col. Charles Bidwell and the Second Pennsylvania Regiment commanded by Col. Charles Simmons. The Pennsylvania soldiers remained here until the last of July 1861.

Then in October 1861, the Second Maryland Volunteer Infantry, Potomac Home Brigades, was formed by volunteers from Allegany County.

In 1862, the City Guard was formed of three companies for home protection under the command of Lt. Col. Horace Resley.

In June of that year, the 84th Ohio Infantry, a regiment of volunteers who had signed up for three months duty, were stationed here and in September were mustered out.

That was followed by the Second Maryland Regiment, Potomac Home Brigade, under Col. Robert Bruce.

As from this beginning, Cumberland's history during the Civil War was hectic.

One time it was captured by the Confederates.

Cumberland Unprotected

On June 15, 1863, the Union Army issued orders for the evacuation of Cumberland and concentration of all forces at New Creek, leaving the Queen City totally unprotected.

On June 16, 1863, Confederate scouts arrived at Williams Street, overlooking the city. Two of their number, under a flag of truce, demanded the surrender of the city.

The acting mayor, A. V. Buckley acceded, with the stipulation that private property, except that needed by the Confederate quartermaster, be left alone.

Then about 300 of Col. G. W. Imboden's Southern cavalrymen entered the city, took the horses the needed, spent much worthless Confederate money on merchandise, tore down telegraph lines, and, at

Local School Trained Business Leaders

Young Men Stenographers In Demand.

So reads one sub-title in the annual catalogue of the old Central Commercial College which was founded here in 1892 and was located at Baltimore and North Mechanic Streets.

"Come to us, young men, for a few months. We will train you in the shortest possible time and place you in a good position. Your future, to a large extent, is then in your own hands."

Frank A. Wolfhope, LL.B., was principal of the college for a time. He is now vice president of the Cumberland Fair Association.

Many Subjects

The college offered this course of study: Bookkeeping, theory and actual business practice in single and double entry, commercial arithmetic, banking, rapid calculations and spelling and defining; business correspondence, commercial law, practical English grammar, business forms, usages and customs, civil government, letter filing, letter press copying.

The shorthand course included theory and practice in shorthand, touch typewriting, business correspondence, spelling, defining, use of words, practical English grammar, letter press copying and a thorough drill in the details of office work consisting of indexing, filing, carbon work, mimeographing, legal and commercial forms.

The commercial course, complete graduating scholarship including diploma, cost $50 with books. Stationery cost $12.

Evening Sessions Too

The shorthand and typing course also cost $50 and books and stationery $6. For shorthand, typing and stenographers' special course in bookkeeping the tuition fee was $65 and books and stationery $10; commercial and typing, $60, with books and stationery $13.50; and the touch typewriting course $20 with books and stationery $1.50.

Evening sessions in any course $4 for one month; $10 for three months; and $18 for six months, all payable in advance.

At the time of this catalogue, the college was located in the Harrison building and it said, "The rooms are well-lighted, heated by steam and ventilated."

Prospective students were advised that good board and lodging in private houses was available at from $3.50 to $4 a week.

The school was in session from 9 a. m. to noon and from 1:30 p. m. to 4 p. m. five days a week. Rooms were always open on Saturday and students permitted to work at their desks all day. Night classes were held Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7:30 to 9:30.

Depended On Health

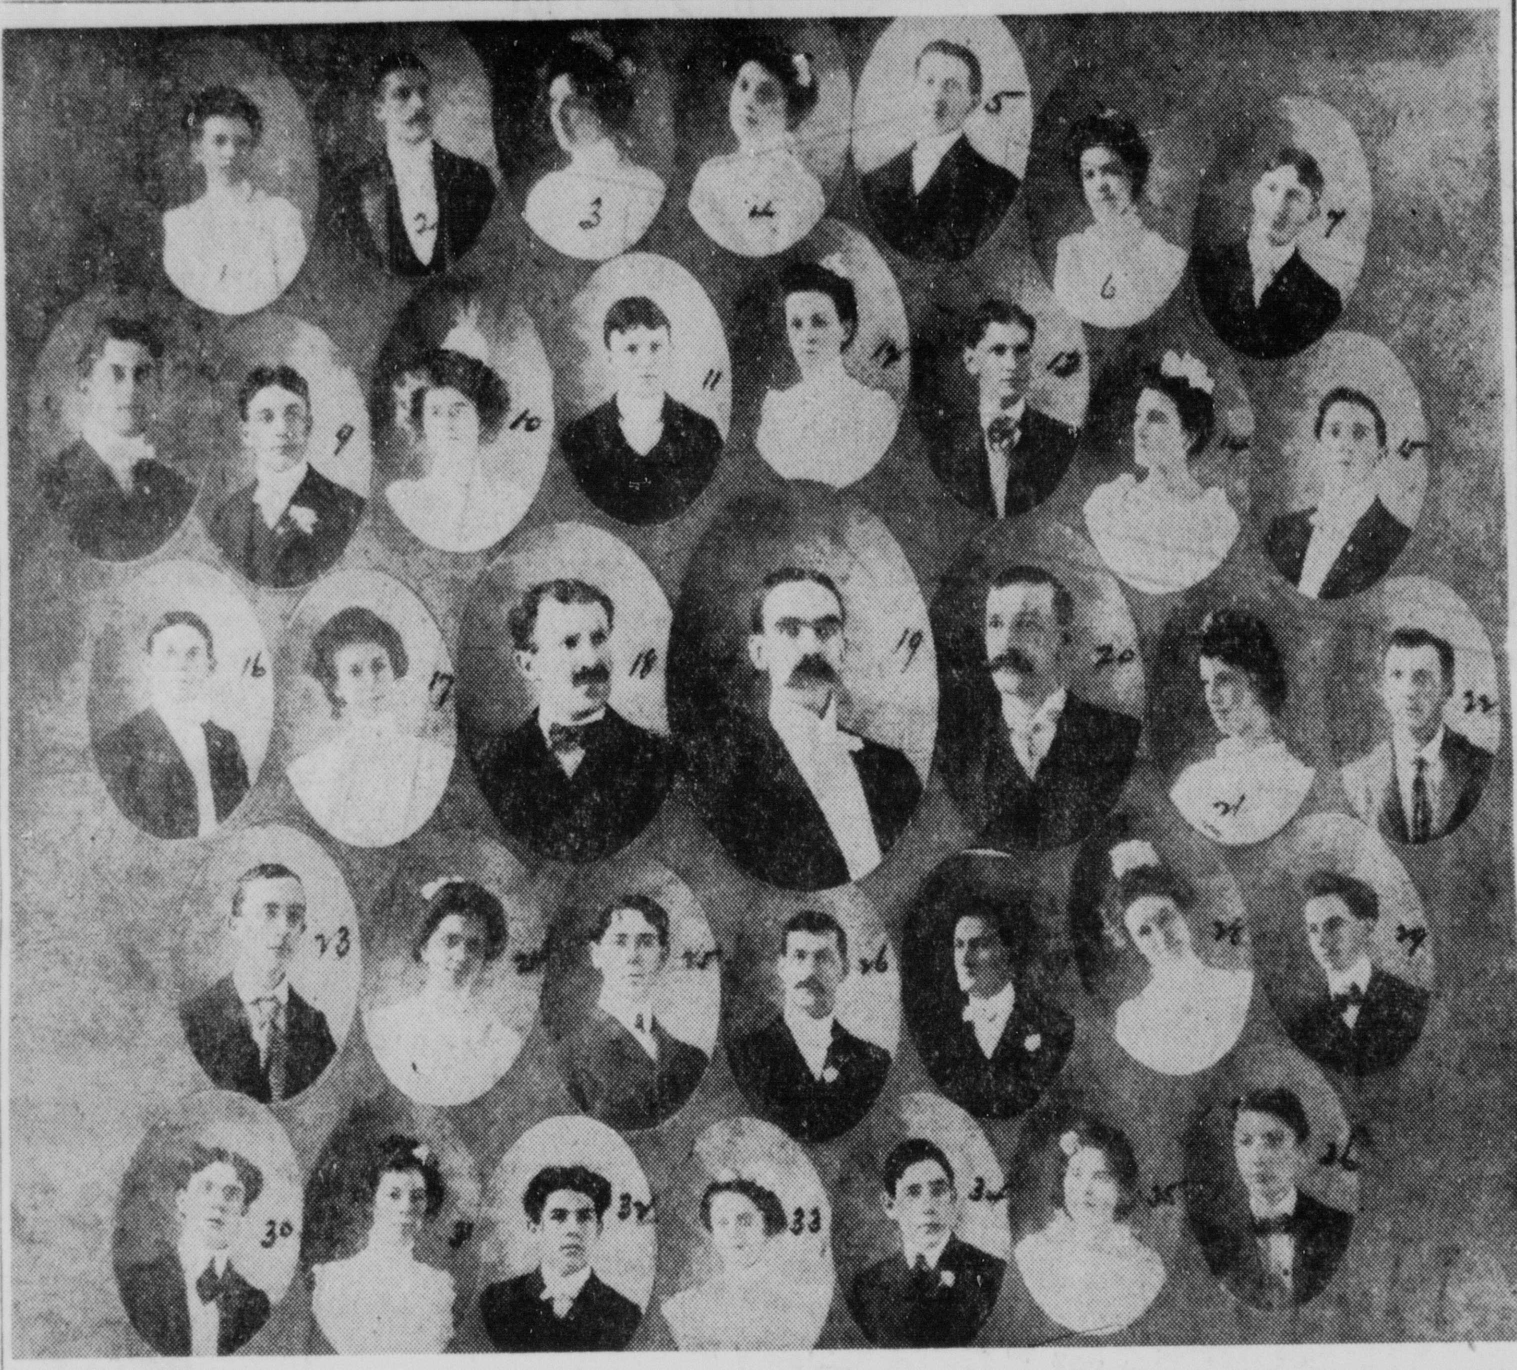
Home work was required of all students "whose health and circumstances permit."

Like any other college proud of its graduates, the catalogue contains a lengthy list of those who had gone on to successes in the business world.

Wolfhope was principal for a short time but had been a teacher there too. C. W. Moser founded Central and its original location was in the Gephart Building, North Centre Street, which was practically destroyed by an explosion some years ago.

Wolfhope left Central to organize the Mt. State Business College for A. G. Sine of Parkersburg, in 1901. Mt. State sold out to Tri-State Business College and this school to the present-day Catherman's Business College.

Central went out of existence about 1905.



COLLEGE GRADUATING CLASS—Although the Central Commercial College no longer exists, in 1901 it was located in the Gillette building to the rear of Rand's Store on North Centre Street. Building was destroyed in an explosion and replaced by what is now Heinrich's Clothing Store. Graduation class of June 1901 includes (1) Miss Edna Davis; (2) D. D. Reese; (3) Miss Lulu Johnson; (4) Miss Emma Zihlman; (5) William Murray; (6) Miss Maud Spiker; (7) Percy Chaney; (8) Edward O'Coner; (9) W. R. E. Local School Trained Business Leaders

Young Men Stenographers In Demand.

So reads one sub-title in the annual catalogue of the old Central Commercial College which was founded here in 1892 and was located at Baltimore and North Mechanic Streets.

"Come to us, young men, for a few months. We will train you in the shortest possible time and place you in a good position. Your future, to a large extent, is then in your own hands."

Frank A. Wolfhope, LL.B., was principal of the college for a time. He is now vice president of the Cumberland Fair Association.

Many Subjects

The college offered this course of study: Bookkeeping, theory and actual business practice in single and double entry, commercial arithmetic, banking, rapid calculations and spelling and defining; business correspondence, commercial law, practical English grammar, business forms, usages and customs, civil government, letter filing, letter press copying.

The shorthand course included theory and practice in shorthand, touch typewriting, business correspondence, spelling, defining, use of words, practical English grammar, letter press copying and a thorough drill in the details of office work consisting of indexing, filing, carbon work, mimeographing, legal and commercial forms.

The commercial course, complete graduating scholarship including diploma, cost $50 with books. Stationery cost $12.

Evening Sessions Too

The shorthand and typing course also cost $50 and books and stationery $6. For shorthand, typing and stenographers' special course in bookkeeping the tuition fee was $65 and books and stationery $10; commercial and typing, $60, with books and stationery $13.50; and the touch typewriting course $20 with books and stationery $1.50.

Evening sessions in any course $4 for one month; $10 for three months; and $18 for six months, all payable in advance.

At the time of this catalogue, the college was located in the Harrison building and it said, "The rooms are well-lighted, heated by steam and ventilated."

Prospective students were advised that good board and lodging in private houses was available at from $3.50 to $4 a week.

The school was in session from 9 a. m. to noon and from 1:30 p. m. to 4 p. m. five days a week. Rooms were always open on Saturday and students permitted to work at their desks all day. Night classes were held Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7:30 to 9:30.

Depended On Health

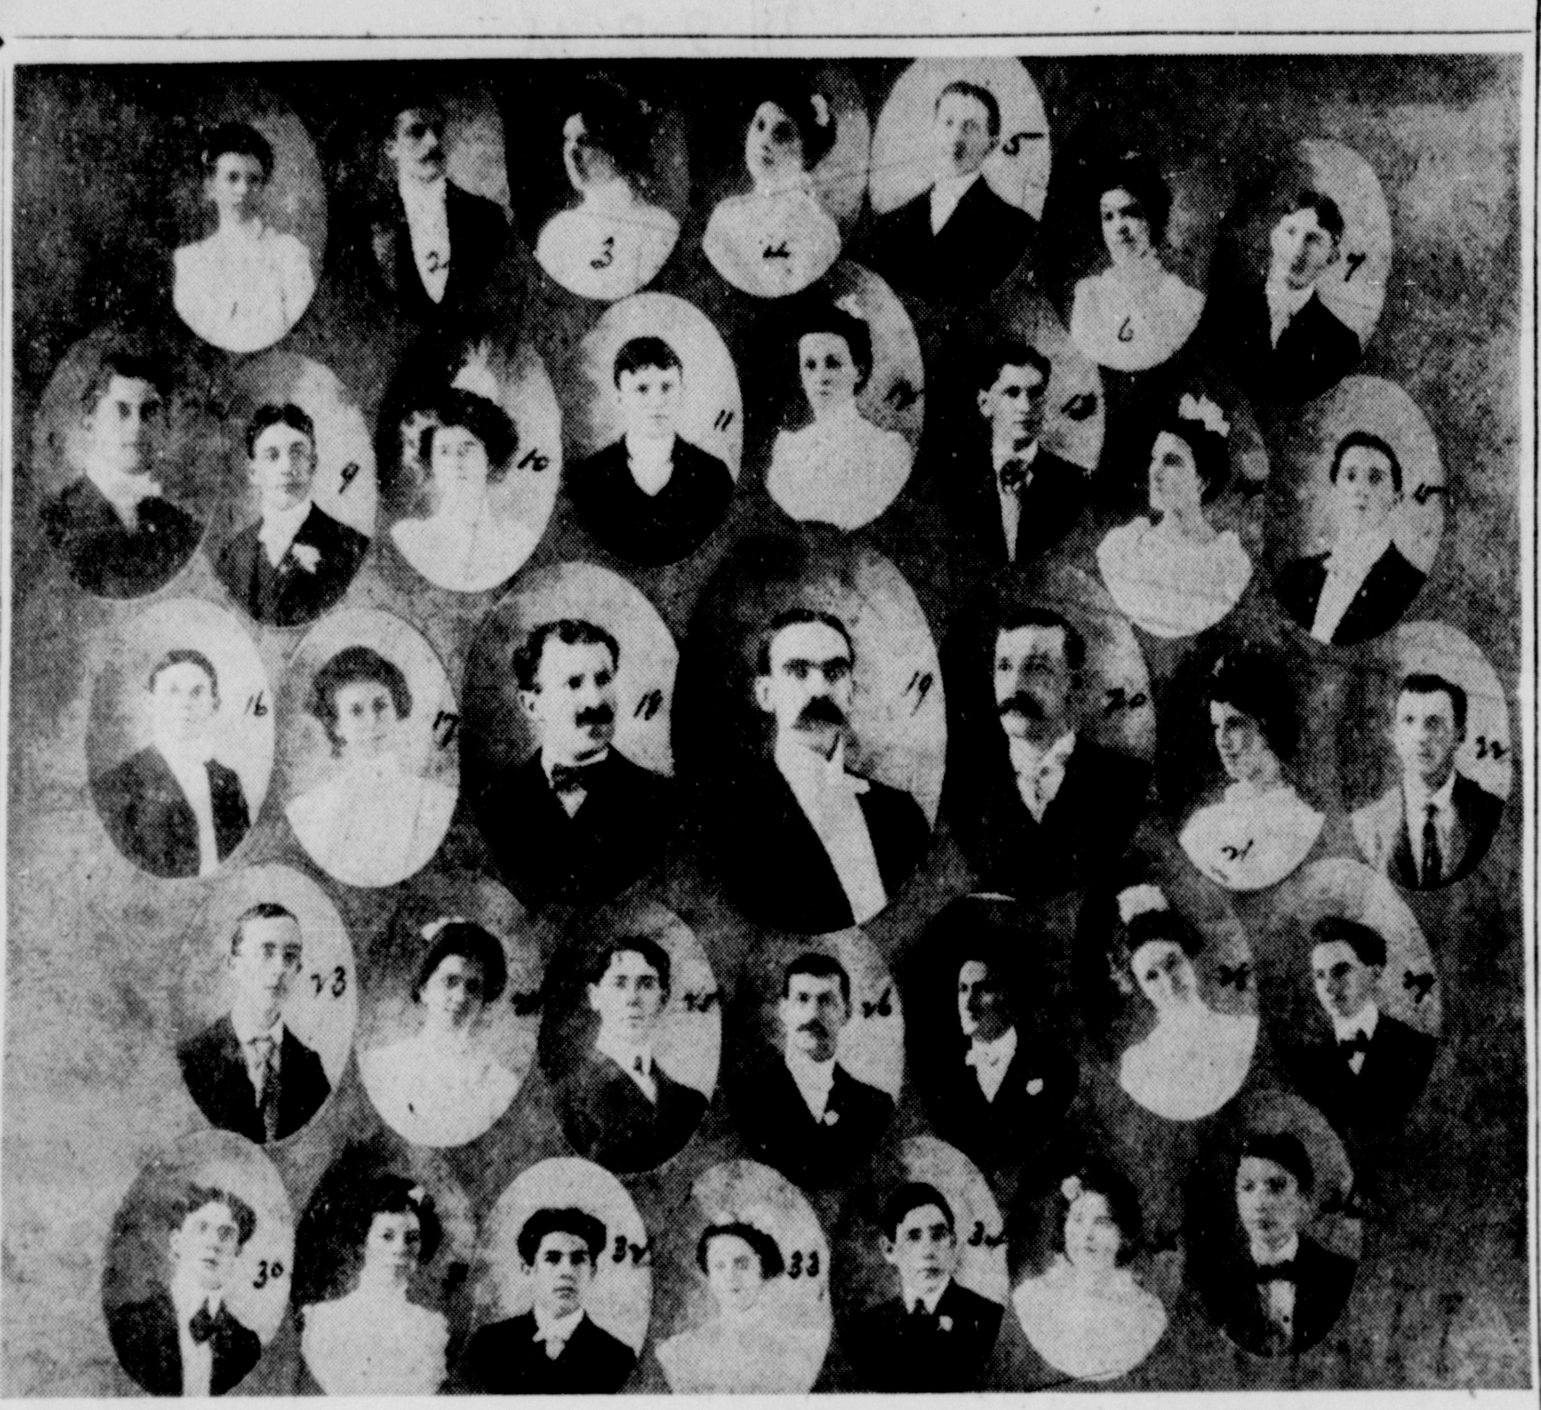
Home work was required of all students "whose health and circumstances permit."

Like any other college proud of its graduates, the catalogue contains a lengthy list of those who had gone on to successes in the business world.

Wolfhope was principal for a short time but had been a teacher there too. C. W. Moser founded Central and its original location was in the Gephart Building, North Centre Street, which was practically destroyed by an explosion some years ago.

Wolfhope left Central to organize the Mt. State Business College for A. G. Sine of Parkersburg, in 1901. Mt. State sold out to Tri-State Business College and this school to the present-day Catherman's Business College.

Central went out of existence about 1905.



COLLEGE GRADUATING CLASS—Although the Central Commercial College no longer exists, in 1901 it was located in the Gillette building to the rear of Rand's Store on North Centre Street. Building was destroyed in an explosion and replaced by what is now Heinrich's Clothing Store. Graduation class of June 1901 includes (1) Miss Edna Davis; (2) D. D. Reese; (3) Miss Lulu Johnson; (4) Miss Emma Zihlman; (5) William Murray; (6) Miss Maud Spiker; (7) Percy Chaney; (8) Edward O'Coner; (9) W. R. E. King; (10) Viola Goethe Casseday; (11) Thomas Rafferty; (12) Miss Mary Roberts; (13) Name unknown; (14) Name unknown; (15) Thomas Morgan; (16) Gerald Zembower; (17) Beatrice Rhoden; (18) Frank Wolfhope; (19) Prof. C. Edward Presho; (20) Prof. Dimm; (21) Mazelia E. Widemire; (22) Edward Gardner; (23) Harry Rainsforth; (24) Miss Nora F. Everett; (25) Joseph Reinhart; (26) J. L. Powers; (27) Jacob A. Cosgrove; (28) Miss Edythe Belle Cook; (29) John F. Many of this class are now deceased.

U. S. Route 40 Spans Continent And Two Centuries Of History

National Pike Had Humble Beginning, Now Links Atlantic, Pacific Oceans

"It is an old road and a proud road," Governor Theodore R. McKeldin remarked recently in breaking ground for the reconstruction of Route 40 from the eastern limits of Allegany County to Cumberland.

It has a right to be proud. It is the National Road, the first federal highway, the historic Gateway to the West of a century and a half ago.

Now it is one of the major arteries in the federal highway system—a great road stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

No highway in America has so rich a historical background and none has played as important a part in the growth of the United States.

Was Rude Trail

It started more than two centuries ago as a series of unblazed trails used by Indian tribes and traders.

Its formal existence began after the Ohio Company was chartered in 1749, and Col. Thomas Cresap and Christopher Gist, with the help of an Indian chief, Nemacolin, marked a path through the wilderness to the West.

Along that pack-saddle path west of Cumberland rode 21-year-old George Washington, in 1753, with Gist as his companion, to deliver Governor Dinwiddie's message to the French at Fort le Boeuf.

A year later, Col. Washington helped open the trail for artillery and wagons from Wills Creek, western outpost of Colonial America, as he went to meet the French — and defeat — on July 3, 1754, at Fort Necessity, nine miles east of Uniontown.

The historic fort has been restored and is one of the attractions to be found on the National Highway.

Was Braddock's Road

The next year, he accompanied the ill-fated expedition led by General Braddock, who lost his life and gave his name, for a time, to the road after his defeat by the French in the Battle of the Monongahela.

The proud general is buried along the highway, eight miles east of Uniontown.

His lonely grave is marked by a monument erected by Britain's proud Coldstream Guards, many of whom lie in unmarked graves along the highway.

It was on this route that Washington, in 1785, advocated the construction of a National Highway.

More than a quarter of a century passed, however, until Congress in 1806 passed a bill directing the construction of a road from the navigable waters of the Atlantic Ocean to the Ohio River.

The bill was signed by President Thomas Jefferson on March 29, 1806.

Began At Lot 1

The Corps of Engineers, now engaged in the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood protection program, surveyed and supervised the construction of the National Road.

It began near the present site of Washington's cabin, at Lot No. 1 of the City of Cumberland, located in Riverside Park.

For many years—the years of its greatest glory — it was known as the Cumberland Road.

The great road was opened to Wheeling, W. Va., by 1818.

It wore out faster than it could be built and repaired, but it served as the route for the many thousands of pioneers who passed through the Narrows on their way to open the West.

The road was later extended toward St. Louis by an 1820 act of Congress.

The present location of U. S. Route 40 was set by the Bureau of Public Roads when the national highway system was set up.

Preserve Landmarks

The State of Maryland, in recent years, has been taking meritorious steps to preserve points of great historical interest along the highway.

Typical was the $10,000 provided by the 1956 General Assembly for the purchase of the old Toll Gate House, six miles west of here.

Built during the construction of the National Road, the brick structure is the last remaining toll gate house of its kind along the route in Maryland.

The State of Maryland also has plans to establish a roadside park to mark another unique structure.

This is the old stone arch bridge across the Casselman River, near Grantsville, which is being restored by the state.

Biggest In U. S.

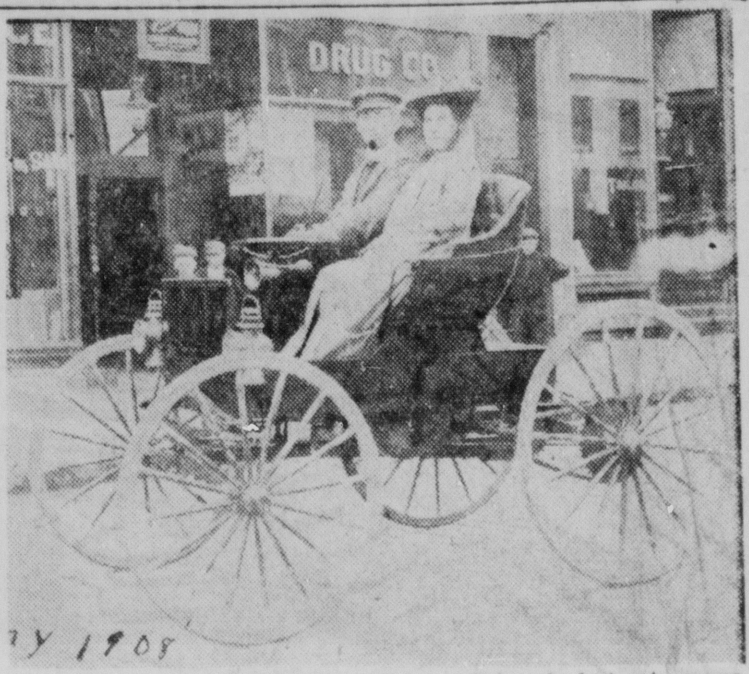
The historic bridge was arched, when built by the Corps of Engineers, to allow the passage of boats along the proposed extension of the C & O Canal, but that once-great waterway never got farther west than Cumberland.

At the time of its construction in 1813, the Route 40 landmark was the largest single span bridge in America.

Was "Appian Way"

The pike and the National Road were busy — old timers recall as many as "52 six-horse wagons" could be seen at one time and "4,000 head of cattle quartered at the same place" along the road.

For 34 years, from 1818 when the Cumberland Road was opened to traffic, until 1853, when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reached the Ohio River, what is now Route 40 was the "Appian Way" of America.



WELL, HONEY, WE'RE OFF—With a full-length duster to cover milady's pretty clothes, our 1908 couple starts off for a drive to visit the home folks on a pretty summer day while interested spectators watch to see if the gasless buggy will run.

Community School Camping Program Sweeps Nation

By ROBERT E. VOGES

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Thousands of children are getting acquainted with nature first hand —on school time too.

This is all coming about through a program of community school camping, pioneered in Michigan and sweeping across the nation.

Dr. Julian W. Smith, now professor of outdoor education at Michigan State University, was principal of Lakeview High School at Battle Creek, Mich., in 1940 when W. K. Kellogg Foundation there invited three area schools to use some camps for experiments in child health.

Dr. Smith was sold on the idea from the start. He later became assistant superintendent in charge of health, physical education and recreation in the Michigan Department of Public Instruction and moved from there to MSU.

"Get the kids outdoors," he says. "It makes better citizens and people of them. They learn something they'll value all their lives."

The program mushroomed despite the war. In 1945 it was given a fresh shot in the arm by enactment of a state law permitting school districts to purchase and operate camps as part of the regular school curriculum.

The program has boomed in Michigan from a handful of schools to more than 90 a year sending out classes for a week or two of camping.

The Michigan operation is to take a classroom at a time by school bus for a week or so of outdoor adventuring.

Two or more teachers watch over the children. The State Conversation Department generally furnishes a visiting outdoor expert. A school nurse might go along.

No money is spent on fancy recreational equipment. The woods, fields, streams and lakes are the classroom and the playground.

Dr. Smith recently broadened his field to make it national in scope.

THE WORLD'S BUT A STAGE—An actor of days gone by strikes a declamatory pose for the photographer while thinking, no doubt, of the oft-quoted lines from the Bard to the effect that everything is a little like show business.

U. S. Route 40 Spans Continent And Two Centuries Of History

National Pike Had Humble Beginning, Now Links Atlantic, Pacific Oceans

"It is an old road and a proud road," Governor Theodore R. McKeldin remarked recently in breaking ground for the reconstruction of Route 40 from the eastern limits of Allegany County to Cumberland.

It has a right to be proud. It is the National Road, the first federal highway, the historic Gateway to the West of a century and a half ago.

Now it is one of the major arteries in the federal highway system—a great road stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

No highway in America has so rich a historical background and none has played as important a part in the growth of the United States.

Was Rude Trail

It started more than two centuries ago as a series of unblazed trails used by Indian tribes and traders.

Its formal existence began after the Ohio Company was chartered in 1749, and Col. Thomas Cresap and Christopher Gist, with the help of an Indian chief, Nemacolin, marked a path through the wilderness to the West.

Along that pack-saddle path west of Cumberland rode 21-year-old George Washington, in 1753, with Gist as his companion, to deliver Governor Dinwiddie's message to the French at Fort le Boeuf.

A year later, Col. Washington helped open the trail for artillery and wagons from Wills Creek, western outpost of Colonial America, as he went to meet the French — and defeat — on July 3, 1754, at Fort Necessity, nine miles east of Uniontown.

The historic fort has been restored and is one of the attractions to be found on the National Highway.

Was Braddock's Road

The next year, he accompanied the ill-fated expedition led by General Braddock, who lost his life and gave his name, for a time, to the road after his defeat by the French in the Battle of the Monongahela.

The proud general is buried along the highway, eight miles east of Uniontown.

His lonely grave is marked by a monument erected by Britain's proud Coldstream Guards, many of whom lie in unmarked graves along the highway.

It was on this route that Washington, in 1785, advocated the construction of a National Highway.

More than a quarter of a century passed, however, until Congress in 1806 passed a bill directing the construction of a road from the navigable waters of the Atlantic Ocean to the Ohio River.

The bill was signed by President Thomas Jefferson on March 29, 1806.

Began At Lot 1

The Corps of Engineers, now engaged in the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood protection program, surveyed and supervised the construction of the National Road.

It began near the present site of Washington's cabin, at Lot No. 1 of the City of Cumberland, located in Riverside Park.

For many years—the years of its greatest glory — it was known as the Cumberland Road.

The great road was opened to Wheeling, W. Va., by 1818.

It wore out faster than it could be built and repaired, but it served as the route for the many thousands of pioneers who passed through the Narrows on their way to open the West.

The road was later extended toward St. Louis by an 1820 act of Congress.

The present location of U. S. Route 40 was set by the Bureau of Public Roads when the national highway system was set up.

Preserve Landmarks

The State of Maryland, in recent years, has been taking meritorious steps to preserve points of great historical interest along the highway.

Typical was the $10,000 provided by the 1956 General Assembly for the purchase of the old Toll Gate House, six miles west of here.

Built during the construction of the National Road, the brick structure is the last remaining toll gate house of its kind along the route in Maryland.

The State of Maryland also has plans to establish a roadside park to mark another unique structure.

This is the old stone arch bridge across the Casselman River, near Grantsville, which is being restored by the state.

Biggest In U. S.

The historic bridge was arched, when built by the Corps of Engineers, to allow the passage of boats along the proposed extension of the C & O Canal, but that once-great waterway never got farther west than Cumberland.

At the time of its construction in 1813, the Route 40 landmark was the largest single span bridge in America.

Was "Appian Way"

The pike and the National Road were busy — old timers recall as many as "52 six-horse wagons" could be seen at one time and "4,000 head of cattle quartered at the same place" along the road.

For 34 years, from 1818 when the Cumberland Road was opened to traffic, until 1853, when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reached the Ohio River, what is now Route 40 was the "Appian Way" of America.

WELL, HONEY, WE'RE OFF—With a full-length duster to cover milady's pretty clothes, our 1908 couple starts off for a drive to visit the home folks on a pretty summer day while interested spectators watch to see if the gasless buggy will run.

Community School Camping Program Sweeps Nation

By ROBERT E. VOGES

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Thousands of children are getting acquainted with nature first hand—on school time too.

This is all coming about through a program of community school camping, pioneered in Michigan and sweeping across the nation.

Dr. Julian W. Smith, now professor of outdoor education at Michigan State University, was principal of Lakeview High School at Battle Creek, Mich., in 1940 when W. K. Kellogg Foundation there invited three area schools to use some camps for experiments in child health.

Dr. Smith was sold on the idea from the start. He later became assistant superintendent in charge of health, physical education and recreation in the Michigan Department of Public Instruction and moved from there to MSU.

"Get the kids outdoors," he says. "It makes better citizens and people of them. They learn something they'll value all their lives."

The program mushroomed despite the war. In 1945 it was given a fresh shot in the arm by enactment of a state law permitting school districts to purchase and operate camps as part of the regular school curriculum.

The program has boomed in Michigan from a handful of schools to more than 90 a year sending out classes for a week or two of camping.

The Michigan operation is to take a classroom at a time by school bus for a week or so of outdoor adventuring.

Two or more teachers watch over the children. The State Conversation Department generally furnishes a visiting outdoor expert. A school nurse might go along.

No money is spent on fancy recreational equipment. The woods, fields, streams and lakes are the classroom and the playground.

Dr. Smith recently broadened his field to make it national in scope.

They are clockwise from top Horace Resley, city clerk; P. D. Getzendanner, councilman; N. P. J. Scheermesser, councilman; J. D. Bopst, councilman; Albert A. Egolf, councilman; and W. Milnor Roberts, councilman. Mayor Jacob B. Humbird is in the center.

Singapore Move To Independence Is Uncertain

By MURRAY FROMSON

SINGAPORE (AP) — The man in the British-style "bush" jacket looked out over a sea of faces and spread his arms as if delivering an invocation.

"Merdeka!" he yelled, and 30,000 Malays, Chinese, Indians, Indonesians and Eurasians responded by repeating the clarion call of Singapore's independence movement.

As the crowd subsided for one brief moment, the man in the jacket, David Saul Marshall, turned to an aide and with boyish enthusiasm exclaimed: "Isn't this wonderful? Isn't this inspiring?"

"Down With Colonialism"

Then he faced the crowd again and in a high-pitched British accent started on his favorite subject:

"Down with Colonialism! British rule must end! We want independence (merdeka) now! Freedom and justice are our rights!"

The crowd roared again.

"Atta boy, Davey," called out one admirer to the leader of Singapore's Labor Front government.

Singapore's different racial groups, usually divided among themselves, are at least somewhat united by a lust for freedom.

Even so, responsible authorities here fear the possibility of serious race riots in the coming months. There are 860,000 Chinese here as against 115,000 Malays and 90,000 Indians and Pakistanis and none of them have any love for each other.

Herein lies the story of Singapore and of Marshall, the elected leader in the present campaign to end 137 years of British rule in this strategic Southeast Asia outport at the foot of the Malay Peninsula.

Everything here is a possibility. Nothing is a certainty.

Marshall calls his British critics "Colonel Blimps." They, in turn, describe him as an opportunist who should have stuck to the practice of law.

Was Criminal Lawyer

It was as a criminal lawyer that Marshall first gained prominence in Singapore. He was born here 48 years ago, the son of a prosperous Jewish merchant. He was stricken with tuberculosis in 1926 and went to Switzerland, where he recovered.

He traveled widely in Europe before returning to Singapore to become an auto salesman. Later he worked his way through London University, where he studied law, by waiting on tables and giving chess lessons.

He was a Japanese prisoner of war for nearly four years during the war. After V-J Day he resumed his law practice and soon became one of this colony's top criminal lawyers.

The big issue centers around the question of how many people in Singapore really want independence.

It's Authentic

The two major English language daily newspapers — one British-owned, the other Chinese-owned — in Singapore have been tearing into Marshall and his independence movement for months.

Questioned about the authenticity of nationalist feeling here, Marshall turns vehement.

"No responsible official fails to see that the large mass of the people want independence now," he roars. "The British have thrown up a large smoke-screen, but the fears are of a minority of the people."

But the fact remains Marshall has not called a referendum to test the people's sentiments. He cites a lack of time and funds as the reasons for not holding one.

Many responsible citizens fear coercion from the Communist element which is strong, vocal and well organized despite the fact it is outlawed here. The Communists are among the chief backers of independence and are generally recognized as the behind-the-scenes leaders in Singapore's past riots.

McNeill's Raid

field, and after 11 days were exchanged on conditions that these men of Captain J. H. McNeill's placed in the cells at Fort McHenry should be released and treated as prisoners of war. The generals were courteously treated, though they were compelled to ride at breakneck speed the first day and night a distance of 90 miles. Great was the consternation and bewilderment in Cumberland on the morning of the 21st."

Tribute From Lee

A fitting tribute from a great leader in the waning moments when the South was crushed, was this commuique:

"Headquarters,
Army of Northern Virginia
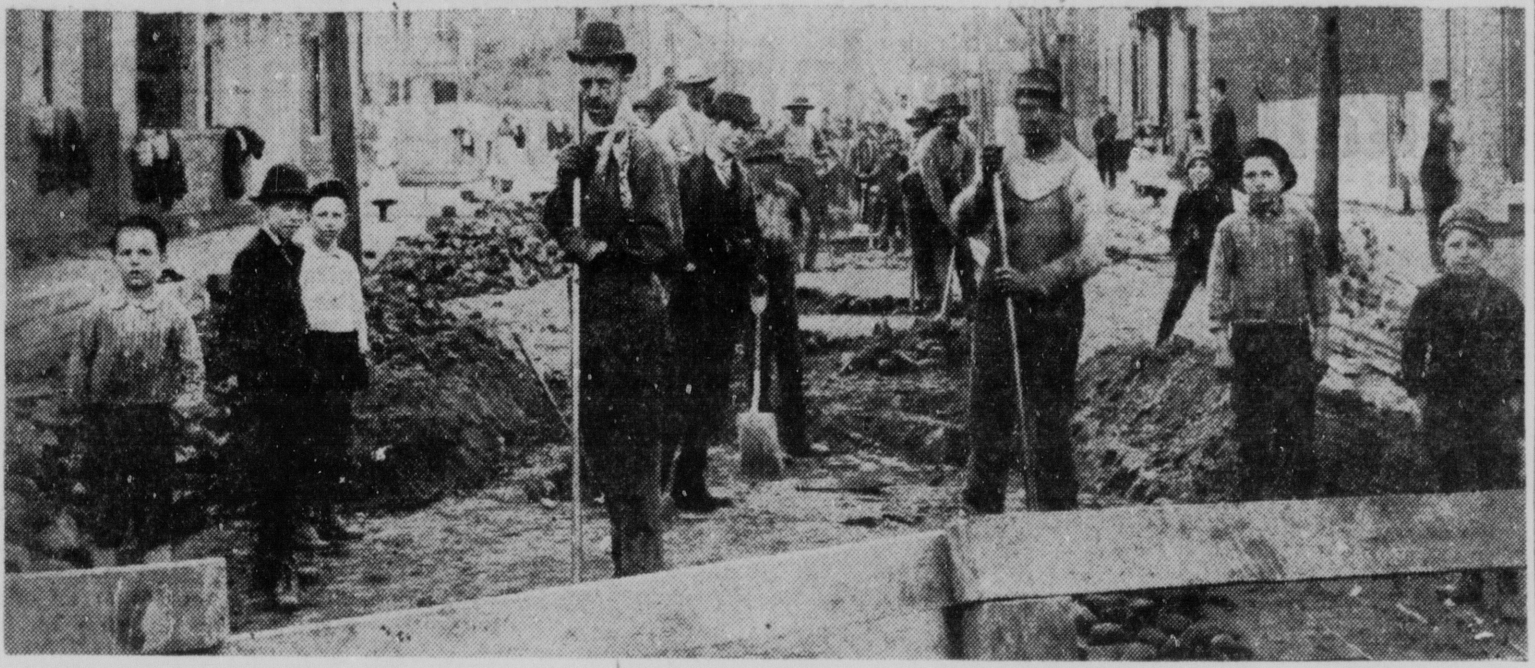
"February 24, 1865

"Hon. John C. Breckenridge,
Secretary of War:

"General Early reports that Lt. McNeill, with 30 men, on the morning of the 21st entered Cumberland, captured and brought out Generals Crook and Kelly, the adjutant general of the Department, two privates, and the headquarters flag, without firing a gun, though a considerable force is stationed in the vicinity.

"Lt. McNeill and party deserve much credit for this bold exploit. These prisoners will reach Staunton today.

"R. E. LEE"



STREET GETS FACE LIFTING—Youngsters crowd around, adults pause to watch and city employes give North Centre Street a face lifting job some 50 years ago. Workmen with picks and shovels remove the street's cobblestones to smooth out the surface. Workmen's coats and dinner buckets can be seen along the fence at the left.

C&O Canal Helped Weld Infant Nation Into World Industrial Power

This weekend, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and a party of fellow-hikers will observe the anniversary of their celebrated 1954 jaunt from Cumberland to Washington which focused national attention on the history and the future of the old C&O Canal.

Douglas proposed the now-famous hike to convince two Washington newsmen who favored a parkway along the canal that the old waterway should instead be restored as a scenic retreat from busy 20th Century life.

This week's reunion of the hikers at Fort Frederick State Park will have similar overtones of history and progress. The Department of Interior announced recently it would build a parkway from Hancock to North Branch without damaging the old canal, and would at the same time restore parts of the canal as a national park.

Two Centuries Of History

Those who attend the reunion will have two centuries of history spread out before them in Fort Frederick, whose story is closely intertwined with that of the canal and of the Potomac River.

It goes back to the 1750s, when imaginative young George Washington, sent to frontier Cumberland to help protect the Ohio Valley interests of Britain's colonies from the French, realized the potential of the river and immediately began making plans about what to do with it.

In 1754 Washington envisioned a project to make the Potomac navigable to a point west of Cumberland, then connect it to the Ohio by means of roads over the mountains. This, felt young Colonel Washington, would secure Virginia's place in the Ohio against France.

But before any of these ambitious projects could be started, things began going badly for the British colonies on the military scene. Braddock's defeat in his Fort Duquesne campaign prompted Maryland to build Fort Frederick in 1756 to protect its settlers from Indian attacks.

Braddock's tragically unsuccessful expedition did, however, leave behind it an improved wagon road over the mountains which later was to become the basis of the National Pike.

Competing Route

Soon after, in 1758, the Forbes expedition from Bedford (then Raystown), Pa., captured Fort Duquesne and opened a new competing route toward the Ohio country.

By 1763 the Treaty of Paris had ended the French and Indian War and King George was trying to hold back expansion into the Ohio to keep order on the frontier. The king's wishes, however, were largely ignored, and several new companies soon displaced the old Ohio Company, which had fallen into royal disfavor.

Washington went on planning, but soon was interrupted by the Revolution, which left him no time for canal building.

Almost immediately after the war, however, Washington began working for the organization of the Potomack Company, which finally was chartered in 1785 with Washington as the president. James Rumsey, who later was to gain fame with his steamboat experiments on the Potomac, was chief engineer.

By 1802 the Potomack Company had removed many obstructions from the bed of the Potomac and built five short skirting canals around the major falls. From then until 1831 river boats used the river and its skirting canals to make the dangerous journey between Cumberland Georgetown.

Soon the Potomack Company had become a model for similar undertakings in several states, sparking a movement toward canal and river work that boomed during most of the 19th Century.

Water Transport Superior

Meanwhile, Congress in 1806 authorized construction of the National Pike from Cumberland to Wheeling, W. Va. When the road was completed and opened in 1818 it gave the internal economy of the young nation a tremendous shot in the arm by easing the flow of settlers and goods between the East and the frontier.

But general opinion was that water transport was far superior to land travel, and canals soon were being built all over New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Onto the Maryland scene came the Chesapeake and Ohio Company, which proposed to join the Ohio River at Pittsburgh with tidewater on the Potomac at Georgetown with a 341-mile canal.

The new company replaced the Potomack Company in 1825, when it was granted charters from the federal government and the states of Maryland and Virginia.

But Baltimore, lacking an east-west river connection and fearing the new canal would drain off the big Chesapeake port trade, chartered the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to compete with the canal.

Not until 1828 had the C&O Company raised enough money to start work on the canal. While President John Quincy Adams was breaking ground for the canal at Washington on July 4, 1828, Charles Carroll was turning up the first spadeful of earth at Baltimore for the B&O Railroad. The race to Cumberland was on.

Right-Of-Way Disputed

It was to be a long, drawn-out contest, full of heartbreaking engineering setbacks and legal squabbles like the three-year delay at Point of Rocks because of a dispute over the narrow right-of-way.

After six years of hard digging, in 1834, the canal and the railroad had finally reached Harpers Ferry, only 60 miles above Washington. The worst was yet to come.

In the same year the canal company had a stroke of luck and managed to complete the next 40 miles to Williamsport, but soon bogged down with one delay after another in the face of mounting costs. By 1839, five years later, the canal was only as far west as Hancock.

The railroad, meanwhile, was having its own troubles, and finally suspended work completely after having resumed building west from Harpers Ferry. Struggling against terrific odds, the B&O finally pushed its way through to Cumberland in 1842 and kept right on heading west.

The canal finally came straggling into Cumberland in 1850, after the B&O had been operating for eight years and was less than three years away from completing its line to the Ohio.

Plenty Of Business

But although the railroad got to Cumberland first, there was still plenty of business left for the canal. Both companies settled down to running their operations, learning the business as they went, and concentrating on keeping the goods moving fast enough to satisfy the ever-growing demand.

Then came the War of 1861-65. The economic resources of the nation — both North and South — were so diverted from the peacetime expansion that there was no opportunity to keep up with the necessary railroad and canal repairs. By the end of the war, both the waterway and the rail line were in badly dilapidated condition.

With the end of the war came an unprecedented boom for both the B&O and the C&O, thanks to the rapid development of the Western Maryland coal fields as part of the Industrial Revolution in America.

The boom lasted into the middle 70s, and things looked so rosy for awhile that there was even talk of extending the canal to its originally planned terminus on the Ohio.

But the Panic of 1873 soon caught up with both carriers, and the long depression which followed killed the prosperity of the postwar period. Coal trade dropped 50 per cent, and showed only a small revival in the 1880s.

Beginning Of End

The Baltimore and Ohio somehow weathered the storm, but for the Chesapeake and Ohio it was the beginning of the end.

Bitter competition with the railroad for what was left of the coal business brought cutthroat rate wars, which knocked the canal's income down by as much as 60 per cent.

Then came the disastrous flood of 1877, which wiped out the waterway and left the company heavily in debt. Revenues weren't high enough to get the company back on its feet, and bankruptcy was only as far away as the next flood.

Arthur P. Gorman, president of the canal, got the General Assembly to help with legislative assistance, but more floods in 1886 and 1889 left the company completely broke.

When the bankruptcy proceedings were over, an ironic twist left the canal's old enemy, the Baltimore and Ohio, as principal bondholder.

The B&O naturally had no inclination to get the canal back into operation, until court proceedings forced the move. But the canal never again was able to compete with the B&O on a satisfactory basis.

Victim Of Progress

Then came the Western Maryland Railway, and rivalry between the B&O and the new railway developed into such a hard-fought competition that the canal soon wound up on the sidelines, victim of three-quarters of a century of progress it had helped inaugurate.

Even the 1917-1918 increase in demand for coal because of World War I didn't provide enough business to get the canal out of the financial woods, and by this time the old waterway was kept open only because court rulings demanded it.

Early in 1924, one of the Potomac's worst floods dealt the now antiquated waterway the final blow. Receivers argued that there wasn't enough business left to justify repairing the canal, and it was permitted to go quietly out of existence.

Most of the regional and business historians who have done post-mortems on the canal say it failed for several reasons — primarily that its failure ever to reach its original destination on the Ohio left it in the position of getting too little return from local business for the huge investment it represented.

Not Equal To Floods

The financial problems of the second half of the 19th Century, coupled with political interference, corruption and resulting lack of public confidence also hurt the canal seriously.

But the answer in the long run was that the outmoded canal no longer could keep up with rapid technological improvements in railroading. And it wasn't equal to the Potomac's frequent floods.

With its final abandonment 32 years ago ended an era which had seen Cumberland take a direct hand in the winning of the frontier and the economic and industrial expansion of an infant nation into a world power.

Marshall calls his British critics "Colonel Blimps." They, in turn, describe him as an opportunist who should have stuck to the practice of law.

Was Criminal Lawyer

It was as a criminal lawyer that Marshall first gained prominence in Singapore. He was born here 48 years ago, the son of a prosperous Jewish merchant. He was stricken with tuberculosis in 1926 and went to Switzerland, where he recovered.

He traveled widely in Europe before returning to Singapore to become an auto salesman. Later he worked his way through London University, where he studied law, by waiting on tables and giving chess lessons.

He was a Japanese prisoner of war for nearly four years during the war. After V-J Day he resumed his law practice and soon became one of this colony's top criminal lawyers.

The big issue centers around the question of how many people in Singapore really want independence.

It's Authentic

The two major English language daily newspapers — one British-owned, the other Chinese-owned — in Singapore have been tearing into Marshall and his independence movement for months.

Questioned about the authenticity of nationalist feeling here, Marshall turns vehement.

"No responsible official fails to see that the large mass of the people want independence now," he roars. "The British have thrown up a large smoke-screen, but the fears are of a minority of the people."

But the fact remains Marshall has not called a referendum to test the people's sentiments. He cites a lack of time and funds as the reasons for not holding one.

Many responsible citizens fear coercion from the Communist element which is strong, vocal and well organized despite the fact it is outlawed here. The Communists are among the chief backers of independence and are generally recognized as the behind-the-scenes leaders in Singapore's past riots.

field, and after 11 days were exchanged on conditions that these men of Captain J. H. McNeill's placed in the cells at Fort McHenry should be released and treated as prisoners of war. The generals were courteously treated, though they were compelled to ride at breakneck speed the first day and night a distance of 90 miles. Great was the consternation and bewilderment in Cumberland on the morning of the 21st."

Tribute From Lee

A fitting tribute from a great leader in the waning moments when the South was crushed, was this commuique:

"Headquarters,
Army of Northern Virginia

"Hon. John C. Breckenridge,
Secretary of War:

"General Early reports that Lt. McNeill, with 30 men, on the morning of the 21st entered Cumberland, captured and brought out Generals Crook and Kelly, the adjutant general of the Department, two privates, and the headquarters flag, without firing a gun, though a considerable force is stationed in the vicinity.

"Lt. McNeill and party deserve much credit for this bold exploit. These prisoners will reach Staunton today.

"R. E. LEE"

C&O Canal Helped Weld Infant Nation Into World Industrial Power

This weekend, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and a party of fellow-hikers will observe the anniversary of their celebrated 1954 jaunt from Cumberland to Washington which focused national attention on the history and the future of the old C&O Canal.

Douglas proposed the now-famous hike to convince two Washington newsmen who favored a parkway along the canal that the old waterway should instead be restored as a scenic retreat from busy 20th Century life.

This week's reunion of the hikers at Fort Frederick State Park will have similar overtones of history and progress. The Department of Interior announced recently it would build a parkway from Hancock to North Branch without damaging the old canal, and would at the same time restore parts of the canal as a national park.

Two Centuries Of History

Those who attend the reunion will have two centuries of history spread out before them in Fort Frederick, whose story is closely intertwined with that of the canal and of the Potomac River.

It goes back to the 1750s, when imaginative young George Washington, sent to frontier Cumberland to help protect the Ohio Valley interests of Britain's colonies from the French, realized the potential of the river and immediately began making plans about what to do with it.

In 1754 Washington envisioned a project to make the Potomac navigable to a point west of Cumberland, then connect it to the Ohio by means of roads over the mountains. This, felt young Colonel Washington, would secure Virginia's place in the Ohio against France.

But before any of these ambitious projects could be started, things began going badly for the British colonies on the military scene. Braddock's defeat in his Fort Duquesne campaign prompted Maryland to build Fort Frederick in 1756 to protect its settlers from Indian attacks.

Braddock's tragically unsuccessful expedition did, however, leave behind it an improved wagon road over the mountains which later was to become the basis of the National Pike.

Competing Route

Soon after, in 1758, the Forbes expedition from Bedford (then Raystown), Pa., captured Fort Duquesne and opened a new competing route toward the Ohio country.

By 1763 the Treaty of Paris had ended the French and Indian War and King George was trying to hold back expansion into the Ohio to keep order on the frontier. The king's wishes, however, were largely ignored, and several new companies soon displaced the old Ohio Company, which had fallen into royal disfavor.

Washington went on planning, but soon was interrupted by the Revolution, which left him no time for canal building.

Almost immediately after the war, however, Washington began working for the organization of the Potomack Company, which finally was chartered in 1785 with Washington as the president. James Rumsey, who later was to gain fame with his steamboat experiments on the Potomac, was chief engineer.

By 1802 the Potomack Company had removed many obstructions from the bed of the Potomac and built five short skirting canals around the major falls. From then until 1831 river boats used the river and its skirting canals to make the dangerous journey between Cumberland Georgetown.

Soon the Potomack Company had become a model for similar undertakings in several states, sparking a movement toward canal and river work that boomed during most of the 19th Century.

Water Transport Superior

Meanwhile, Congress in 1806 authorized construction of the National Pike from Cumberland to Wheeling, W. Va. When the road was completed and opened in 1818 it gave the internal economy of the young nation a tremendous shot in the arm by easing the flow of settlers and goods between the East and the frontier.

But general opinion was that water transport was far superior to land travel, and canals soon were being built all over New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Onto the Maryland scene came the Chesapeake and Ohio Company, which proposed to join the Ohio River at Pittsburgh with tidewater on the Potomac at Georgetown with a 341-mile canal.

The new company replaced the Potomack Company in 1825, when it was granted charters from the federal government and the states of Maryland and Virginia.

But Baltimore, lacking an east-west river connection and fearing the new canal would drain off the big Chesapeake port trade, chartered the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to compete with the canal.

Not until 1828 had the C&O Company raised enough money to start work on the canal. While President John Quincy Adams was breaking ground for the canal at Washington on July 4, 1828, Charles Carroll was turning up the first spadeful of earth at Baltimore for the B&O Railroad. The race to Cumberland was on.

Right-Of-Way Disputed

It was to be a long, drawn-out contest, full of heartbreaking engineering setbacks and legal squabbles like the three-year delay at Point of Rocks because of a dispute over the narrow right-of-way.

After six years of hard digging, in 1834, the canal and the railroad had finally reached Harpers Ferry, only 60 miles above Washington. The worst was yet to come.

In the same year the canal company had a stroke of luck and managed to complete the next 40 miles to Williamsport, but soon bogged down with one delay after another in the face of mounting costs. By 1839, five years later, the canal was only as far west as Hancock.

The railroad, meanwhile, was having its own troubles, and finally suspended work completely after having resumed building west from Harpers Ferry. Struggling against terrific odds, the B&O finally pushed its way through to Cumberland in 1842 and kept right on heading west.

The canal finally came straggling into Cumberland in 1850, after the B&O had been operating for eight years and was less than three years away from completing its line to the Ohio.

Plenty Of Business

But although the railroad got to Cumberland first, there was still plenty of business left for the canal. Both companies settled down to running their operations, learning the business as they went, and concentrating on keeping the goods moving fast enough to satisfy the ever-growing demand.

Then came the War of 1861-65. The economic resources of the nation — both North and South — were so diverted from the peacetime expansion that there was no opportunity to keep up with the necessary railroad and canal repairs. By the end of the war, both the waterway and the rail line were in badly dilapidated condition.

With the end of the war came an unprecedented boom for both the B&O and the C&O, thanks to the rapid development of the Western Maryland coal fields as part of the Industrial Revolution in America.

The boom lasted into the middle 70s, and things looked so rosy for awhile that there was even talk of extending the canal to its originally planned terminus on the Ohio.

But the Panic of 1873 soon caught up with both carriers, and the long depression which followed killed the prosperity of the postwar period. Coal trade dropped 50 per cent, and showed only a small revival in the 1880s.

Beginning Of End

The Baltimore and Ohio somehow weathered the storm, but for the Chesapeake and Ohio it was the beginning of the end.

Bitter competition with the railroad for what was left of the coal business brought cutthroat rate wars, which knocked the canal's income down by as much as 60 per cent.

Then came the disastrous flood of 1877, which wiped out the waterway and left the company heavily in debt. Revenues weren't high enough to get the company back on its feet, and bankruptcy was only as far away as the next flood.

Arthur P. Gorman, president of the canal, got the General Assembly to help with legislative assistance, but more floods in 1886 and 1889 left the company completely broke.

When the bankruptcy proceedings were over, an ironic twist left the canal's old enemy, the Baltimore and Ohio, as principal bondholder.

The B&O naturally had no inclination to get the canal back into operation, until court proceedings forced the move. But the canal never again was able to compete with the B&O on a satisfactory basis.

Victim Of Progress

Then came the Western Maryland Railway, and rivalry between the B&O and the new railway developed into such a hard-fought competition that the canal soon wound up on the sidelines, victim of three-quarters of a century of progress it had helped inaugurate.

Even the 1917-1918 increase in demand for coal because of World War I didn't provide enough business to get the canal out of the financial woods, and by this time the old waterway was kept open only because court rulings demanded it.

Early in 1924, one of the Potomac's worst floods dealt the now antiquated waterway the final blow. Receivers argued that there wasn't enough business left to justify repairing the canal, and it was permitted to go quietly out of existence.

Most of the regional and business historians who have done post-mortems on the canal say it failed for several reasons — primarily that its failure ever to reach its original destination on the Ohio left it in the position of getting too little return from local business for the huge investment it represented.

Not Equal To Floods

The financial problems of the second half of the 19th Century, coupled with political interference, corruption and resulting lack of public confidence also hurt the canal seriously.

But the answer in the long run was that the outmoded canal no longer could keep up with rapid technological improvements in railroading. And it wasn't equal to the Potomac's frequent floods.

With its final abandonment 32 years ago ended an era which had seen Cumberland take a direct hand in the winning of the frontier and the economic and industrial expansion of an infant nation into a world power.

Germans Following Ike's Lead, Get Interested In Golfing

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — President Eisenhower involuntarily may have boosted the popularity of golf in Germany, where it was mostly regarded as a sport "for the rich and old."

A German golf official said that news stories and pictures about the president playing golf before and after his heart attack stimulated interest here in the sport.

"Maybe it will help us to get more people, especially young ones, to take up the game," he said.

There are only 36 golf courses in West Germany, a nation of 50 million people. The majority of the courses are nine-hole layouts. Only 15,000 Germans reportedly own golf clubs. In Frankfurt, a city of 670,000, there is only one club. Its membership is 300. Of these, 160 are Americans.

The 18-hole course here was used solely by the U. S. Army until recently when it was turned back to the Germans.

The Frankfurt club announced that German youngsters may play free of charge on its course in order to increase interest in the game among the younger set. Club professionals will give the youths free lessons.

The club said that an international open golf championship here Aug. 14-22 will help stir up more interest in the game.

No one seems to know exactly why golf has never been a popular sport in Germany. One reason is that there are no public links. Club memberships are expensive. A businessman said "to German sportsmen golf just doesn't seem to look like a sport somehow."

Accident Causes Same As Usual

The throttle and the bottle were the big reasons why a record 609 persons were killed in traffic accidents last Christmas. That is the conclusion just in, of the National Safety Council after a study of the details of accidents that occurred during the Christmas Holidays.

Nationally, 75 per cent of the accidents happened during the dark hours. More of the accidents occurred between 6 p. m. and 9 p. m. than any other three-hour period.

The National Safety Council said that speed and drinking had an effect during the Christmas weekend almost three times greater than normal. Driving too fast for conditions or in excess of the speed limit was a factor in 85 per cent. Drinking drivers were involved in 55 per cent of the fatal mishaps, although normally they are involved in less than 20 per cent. Those percentages are based on reports which definitely stated whether or not speed and drinking were factors.

Despite the heavy influence of speed and drinking, chiefly to blame for boosting the Christmas toll 50 per cent higher than on other December weekends, the council found that accident types and people involved were much the same as usual.

Other facts in the report are:

1. The most common type of accident was collision between two or more cars. Next in order were non-collision, pedestrian and fixed object collisions.

2. In 90 per cent of the accidents only one person was killed. The most serious accident killed four persons.

3. Rural accidents were fewer than normal in relation to urban accidents.

4. The ages of drivers was not much different from the normal pattern. Driver ages in the Christmas study ranged from 13 to 87. Six were under 16, and six over 75.

5. Males were driving in 94 per cent of the fatal accidents, only slightly higher than the annual average of 92 per cent.

6. The most common driver action contributing to fatal accidents was driving on wrong side of road or in center of road. Failure to observe a signal or stop sign was second. In only four of the fatal accidents was a mechanical failure or tire blowout mentioned.

7. Pedestrian victims were principally older people—4 out of 10 were 76 years of age or older. In one third of the cases, the pedestrian contributed to the accident by crossing between intersections, stepping from behind a parked car, or walking on a roadway.

These Days

Ike's Heart

A number of us were discussing our coronaries. Some were smoking big Havanas; others were not even smoking an innocent pipe. Each doctor has his own opinion on that particular subject. These were all active men whose names are fairly well known to the public. All of them, including me, had had heart attacks at various times ranging from 15 years ago to a few months ago.

Of course, not all heart attacks are alike. Some are triggered by the failure of some other organ such as the gall bladder. Some are due to causes that might almost be described as mysterious. It is not one of those cause and effect illnesses, although some attribute it to obesity, others to smoking too much, others to stresses and strains. The statistical data is inadequate and inconclusive and will probably remain so because it is not of very great value to discover why a pipe rusts unless it is possible to substitute a rustless kind. Those who believe that cholesterol is the rust may discover one day how to eliminate it and surgeons might be able to pull out a rusted artery and insert a substitute.

The real job is not these amazing discoveries but rather to learn to live an active, full life without further damage to the heart. In this, the doctor can, at best, play a very small part. It is up to the patient himself.

This brings me to Ike and I do not write as a partisan. In 1952, I preferred Robert A. Taft to Ike Eisenhower and I still think Taft might have done well, but then he died of a cancer. Those who attack Eisenhower because of his health are, to me, too sure of themselves. Anybody can die at anytime of anything. A man might catch a cold, delivering a speech, and die of pneumonia in a few days. The fact is that Eisenhower, like my coronary colleagues, has survived an attack and has learned to live with a heart that has a scar on it.

Some people take the heart too seriously. A scar on the heart is not a chronic disease; it is a breakage, a physical defect that has to heal over. If the patient survives it, he most likely has plenty of reserve in the heart to take care of all his needs. Certainly a President of the United States is not an Olympic runner nor are the stresses and strains of that job as terrifying as those of a pugilist, a comedian on television, or a fireman walking into a blazing building to rescue a fainted woman. All one needs is a sense of proportion and a little wisdom. Presidents of the United States at 60 usually do not chase blondes in their 20s, which may be a bit dangerous for a cardiac.

It is now 15 weeks since I had my attack and although I am not wholly healed, I feel pretty good and am doing about as much work as ever. I cannot however stay up all night in a saloon listening to words of wisdom. An editor once said that I did wrong not to read second or third-rate novels and minor poets but to go to cocktail parties and dinners. I spent a long night once with a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States in Toots Shor's discussing great matters. It would have been impossible to meet him under more favorable circumstances in his office or at a Washington dinner party.

I know that I was a sicker person than Ike because I had a complication that comes from eating good food. I know Ike could not have had that complication because of his published diet.

If a citizen wants to vote against Ike because of the farm bill veto or because he dislikes the role of Sherman Adams or Jim Hagerty, that is his right and privilege. But when opposing candidates make a fuss because the President had a coronary, then, they are bum sports and generally don't know what they are talking about. Suppose he had had shingles or asthma or some such thing, would they have made an issue of it? The fact is most of us are still scared by our hearts, when what we should really worry about is over-eating rich foods. Diabetes is really more troublesome than a coronary that does not kill immediately.

Little Progress Made Toward Peace Since Pledge At River Elbe Crossing

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—It was just 11 years ago this week—noon, April 25, 1945—that a patrol of American riflemen pushed through the no-man's land between the forward American and Russian lines and linked up with a Russian patrol on the east bank of the River Elbe.

On that blood-soaked river bank with the artillery-shattered bodies of German women and children around them, the Americans met a Russian patrol, embraced, offered a toast to friendship, and vowed that the futile tragedy of war which took the lives of noncombatant women and children strewn around them, would never happen again.

That day was one to be remembered. For not only did American-Russian forces join together on that occasion, but the United Nations organization held its first meeting in San Francisco that day —to consummate the pledge of those Russian and American patrols.

A lot has happened in the 11 years since then.

A general named Eisenhower and a Russian marshal named Zhukov later met in Berlin and tried to carry out the spirit of that River Elbe pledge. They worked out a fair degree of cooperation between American and Russian troops.

Ike In Moscow

The general named Eisenhower went to Moscow and told in his book, "Crusade in Europe," how for five hours he had stood on the tomb of Lenin watching a sports parade in Red Square.

"None of us had ever witnessed anything remotely similar," he reported. "Every kind of folk dance, mass exercise, acrobatic feat, athletic exhibition was executed with flawless precision, and apparently with greatest enthusiasm. The band, said to number a thousand pieces, played continuously during the five-hour show . . . The generalissimo (Stalin) appeared to enjoy every minute of the show. He invited me to his side, and we conversed intermittently during the entire period."

"Overshadowing all goals for us Americans," the general named Eisenhower wrote, "was the contribution we locally might make toward establishing a working partnership between the United States and Russia."

Unquestionably he meant what he said. That was the spirit of the times.

Ike Is Accused

The years passed. Times changed. The pictures of Eisenhower and Zhukov sitting together were published by his political enemies to show he was pro-Communist. Nothing, of course, could have been further from the truth.

Times changed again. The pendulum of fate swung back, influenced by the death of a dictator, by public opinion, by diplomatic frustration.

A President named Eisenhower once again met his co-commander named Zhukov, this time in Geneva. Not much was scored in tangible diplomatic achievement, but much was scored in creating a better atmosphere.

The President named Eisenhower did a fine job personally. His magnetism, his warmth, the fact that he went all the way to Geneva, melted the myth that the United States was a nation of warmongers. But the diplomats, the generals, and the admirals got into the act and helped to kill some of the success. Also, it takes time to heal the wounds of war, the poison of propaganda—and the man named Eisenhower wanted to remain only four days abroad.

Since Geneva

A lot has happened in the nine months since Geneva. The man whom Eisenhower stood beside for five hours on Lenin's tomb in 1945 is no longer a national hero. His body may even be removed from that tomb. The new leaders who now detract him have been touring Yugoslavia, India, Burma, England . . . Forty American senators and congressmen last year toured Russia . . . The American ambassador to Russia has made a vitally important report.

Probably more has happened in these short nine months — that might change the shape of the world—than at any other single period since the first nine months following April 25, 1945, the day when a patrol of American riflemen crossed the River Elbe at noon and mingled with their Russian comrades amid the blood-soaked bodies of German women and children.

Among these important events is the report of the U. S. ambassador, Chip Bohlen. What he reported last week I do not know. But I do know that previously he reported two developments or trends which could change our relations with Russia. They are:

1. The Russian people are sold on peace. They are so sold on peace that the Kremlin would have difficulty reversing this sentiment.

To a considerable extent the Kremlin, purposely or otherwise, has been responsible for selling this idea; because it has told the Russian people we are warmongers so repeatedly that, conversely, the Russian people believe the Soviet Government is for peace. Since Geneva, when the pictures of Bulganin and Ike were prominently shown around Russia, the Russian people also believe the U. S. A. is for peace.

This has been the report of the U. S. ambassador, a shrewd expert on Russia. It is substantiated by many other Americans who have visited Russia lately.

2. Ambassador Bohlen has reported, with reservations, that it's possible the Kremlin leaders have really come to believe what they say—namely, that another world war would mean the end of civilization.

His reservations are made because it's obviously impossible to tell what is going on in the mind of the Kremlin.

However, if this is true—and some of the actions of the Kremlin leaders appear to bear it out—then the United States may be in for a long period of precarious peace; precarious because it will be a continuation of the cold war, and because the battle of ideas, propaganda, and trade will continue.

This kind of period, though difficult, also carries hope—hope that the initial joy of those who gathered on the east bank of the River Elbe may finally be fulfilled. Because, though difficult, it does carry hope, I should like to report further on some of these problems in an early column.

'Ban Bomb' Cry Starts When U. S. Readies Test

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — This is an expression of deepest sympathy for the average reader of the news dispatches in American newspapers. Small wonder he is bewildered and can't tell sometimes when he is being fed propaganda that delights the Communists. For some public men are apparently duped into doing exactly what the Soviets want America to do.

For several months Moscow, through its agents and stooges throughout the world, has been urging a ban on tests of H-bombs and A-bombs. Some scientists, impressed by what they thought was a danger of "fall-out," conscientiously argued for such a prohibition. Other scientists said there was no danger of "fall-out" from the tests thus far made and that it's dangerous only when big bombs are actually exploded — and these usually have been tried out in mid-ocean.

Delay Could Be Fatal

But, while Soviet Russia has been urging other countries to abandon nuclear tests, she has been doing a lot of testing herself. It is admitted that some chicken-hearted and timid scientists high up in government during the Truman regime actually delayed the development of the H-bomb for many years and thereby Soviet Russia was given a chance to catch up. Why they delayed is still a matter of controversy, and there is no proof that anything disloyal happened — it was a case of emotionalism rather than military reasoning. A delay in tests while the enemy carries on its experimentation could be fatal to America.

Last Saturday Adlai Stevenson made a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in which he tackled this delicate subject head on. He said:

"I believe we should give prompt and earnest consideration to stopping further tests of the hydrogen bomb, as Commissioner Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission recently proposed. As a layman, I question the sense in multiplying and enlarging weapons of a destructive power already almost incomprehensible. Of course, I would call upon other nations to follow our lead, and if they don't and persist in further tests, we will know about it and we can reconsider our policy."

Mr. Stevenson does not say how many precious months he would wait, if he were president, before he let our scientists and our manufacturers of H-bombs go ahead again. His argument is that America should stop and then wait and see. There is some doubt whether any system of verification of what the enemy would be doing while America held off would be foolproof. President Eisenhower has been trying for months to get the Soviets to agree to a mutually acceptable air-inspection plan but to no avail.

News Ticker Report

So, to take a look at the news ticker of Monday:

At 9.26 a. m., the Communist party boss, Khrushchev, told British business men that the Soviet Union is building a guided missile with an atomic war head.

At 10.08 a. m. Senator Kefauver said he "saw no particular good in having further H-bomb tests."

At 12.28 p. m., Mr. Stevenson was asked if he believed Soviet Russia would go along with his suggestion that both sides stop testing deadly atomic weapons. "They've given every indication of it," he said.

At 1.23 p. m., the Senate got into a debate on the subject, and Senator Kuchel, Republican, of California, said that some of the people who are proposing an end to the U.S. tests are "good, but mistaken." Senator Bridges, Republican, said "these people who are taken in by some of the things that are going on should have their heads examined."

At 3.09 p. m., Senator Kefauver said he doesn't believe this country should halt testing of hydrogen bombs unless Russia does. He added: "I think that anything we do along that line should be reciprocal. I wouldn't want this country to stop testing if they (the Russians) are going to keep on testing."

Then what's all the shouting about? Why propose, as Mr. Stevenson did, That America take the initiative in banning nuclear tests? Mr. Stevenson says he took his cue from Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission. But a careful reading of Mr. Murray's statement of April 12 doesn't show that the latter wants to stop the tests without reference to what Russia may do. He said:

"We must beware of the false idealism lurking in the Soviet slogan, 'Ban the bomb.' In the discussions and negotiations looking to disarmament, it would be sheer folly to be maneuvered into making a blanket renunciation of the use of all types of nuclear weapons."

Confusing Situation

At the end of the day, this correspondent saw at 4.44 p. m., an item on the news ticker which read:

"SINGAPORE—Four British destroyers and a frigate will take part in British atomic tests scheduled to be held soon off Australia's Monte Bello Island."

Also, just a few weeks ago Sir Anthony Eden told Parliament he saw no reason why Britain should stop testing super-bombs.

It's curious, but just before America prepares for a big test—there's one coming soon in the Pacific — the propaganda to ban the bomb always spreads throughout the world, and many well-meaning and loyal Americans take up the cry. It's a bit confusing.

Baering Down On The News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Southern Democrats are paging Senator Byrd to pack the banner for a third party. There hasn't been such a write-in since the postscript on the wall.

Only thing worrying Senator Byrd is how to keep Kefauver out of his primaries.

If it's for the Byrds you can bet Estes will be there.

If memory doesn't stutter the third parties started when the Dixiecrats promenaded loose from FDR's farm policy. If Franklin didn't like you he farmed you out.

It's a political carry-over on yesterday's books but can be altered to suit any new tenant.

Mr. Byrd has been governor, senator and other nutritious sinecures. But he always got 'em through a second party.

Many Recent Studies Aim At Preventing Suicide

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

In recent years, many studies have been done on suicide prevention. Psychiatrists and psychologists have combed the field for clues to detect possible suicides so that the toll of these 20,000 annual unnecessary deaths can be reduced. These persons are emotionally disturbed and calling in a psychiatrist may make the difference between life and death.

The majority are abnormally depressed or beset with anxieties; others are alcoholics. Mental patients of the paranoid type also are potential self-murders. These are the insane who live in terror of being followed and harmed by enemies or exteminated by lethal rays. They seek death as the way out of their troubles.

But individuals with a suicidal tendency often escape detection because it is not always easy to spot them. A group of Los Angeles psychologists found that 75 per cent of persons who took their own life had previously threatened or attempted to commit suicide.

This means that their threats and attempts must be taken seriously. In addition, half of those who went through with it did so within 90 days after leaving the hospital. In other words, these men and women should be watched carefully for at least three months after they leave the institution, presumably cured.

What about suicidal letters or notes? Drs. Edwin S. Shneidman and Norman L. Farberow, of the Veterans Administration Neuropsychiatric Hospital in Los Angeles County, performed an experiment in which "Thirty-three male, Protestant, married, native born, genuine suicide note writers were watched man for man by age and occupation with 33 nonsuicidal, simulated note writers."

This technique was used because people who contemplate self-destruction but fail to go through with it usually destroy telltale notes. As a result, control letters had to be obtained from men who were willing to engage in the test. It was difficult to differentiate many of the make-believe letters from the real McCoy.

The fictitious note writer thought up many reasons for his pretended state of guilt, tension, and unhappiness. He also was able to sense the relief so many persons obtain when they know the end is at hand. But they goofed in one direction. The genuine suicide note included many more detailed instructions about what was to be done after death.

These letters read like the commands of a dying king or powerful industrialist. This unalitic feeliof s industrialist. This unrealistic feeling of omnipotence was not duplicated by the simulated suicidal notes. The real suicide reflected his confused and frustrated state in his farewell message.

Laying Biggest Egg

By Bob Considine

LONDON (INS)—Charlie Chaplin and the Red Dean of Canterbury Dr. Hewlett Johnson got together last night at Russian Ambassador Jacob Malik's reception for "B. & K." and discussed animatedly a subject apparently very dear to their hearts—the pratfall.

"I shall always look back with delight upon those wonderful falls that you used to take on your bottom," enthused the towering churchman.

Chaplin, plainly pleased, replied: "I'm still doing them. I'm just starting a new picture."

The two famed fellow travelers agreed also on the stature of the late Mahatma Gandhi and reminisced about their youth. The Red Dean informed Chaplin he began life as an apprenticed engineer; Chaplin said he had begun as a printers devil. In answer to a warm invitation to visit him in Switzerland, the Dean told Chaplin he would do his best.

Picking Up Pieces

They concluded with other happy reminiscenses of a common subject dearest to their hearts—the pratfall.

Wall Street's long-held record for laying the biggest egg—established October 29, 1929—has been conclusively eclipsed by Comrades Bulganin and Khrushchev on their now badly fading trip to England.

They have flopped so badly that the remainder of the trip will be devoted to trying to pick up the pieces. They have curtailed the schedule, postponed a promised news conference, and give evidence of wishing to bolt back home and forget the whole business.

Bulganin still waves and tries to smile, but bullyboy Khrushchev has just about given up trying to play the role of genial emissary. His crude brushoff of the Laborites' polite inquiries about 200 Social Democrats being held in Communist jails was just about the last straw, coming as it did on the heels of his sword rattling at Birmingham.

The man with the difficult task of protecting the Russians during their visit to a country that is alive with exiled victims of the Kremlin's war against the dignity of man is Leonard Burt, head of the special branch of Scotland Yard.

Stocky, 61-year-old Burt is Britain's J. Edgar Hoover and Sherlock Holmes combined. The safety of the royal family and cabinet ministers is his normal job these days after a career that has ranged from outfooting Picadilly pickpockets to gaining the confession of atomic spy Dr. Alan Nunn May.

Nikita S. Khrushchev is a fragrant plug-ugly with a dossier that would chill the most hardened criminal.

He didn't learn to read and write until he was 15. His first break was when Stalin's second wife became interested in him and sent him to the Stalin Industrial Academy. In the mid-30s, he was an organizer of Red Square parades and trumped up pro-Stalin demonstrations.

In 1938, he was given the job of wiping out nationalism in the Ukraine. He ordered at least 3,000 party officials shot or sent to Siberia. Stalin was so delighted he gave Khrushchev the "Order of the Red Banner of Toil."

Almost Bumped Off

The Ukrainians barely failed to bump him off in 1939. Two companions were killed near him in his railway car when a bomb exploded.

He reported more than a million Poles into Soviet Union slave labor camps between 1939 and 1940. There is reason to believe he had a hand in the massacre of Polish officers in the Katyn Forest and elsewhere.

Back in the Ukraine, he won the title of the "Ukraine's executioner" for the ruthless way he dealt with those suspected of having been friendly with the Germans during the latter's occupation.

He was briefly out of favor in 1950 because one of his pet agricultural plans backfired. But he was strong enough at the 19th party congress in 1952 to read an important paper dealing with party reforms.

He initiated the purge of Lavrenti Beria after Stalin's death and now is dedicated to purging Stalin from the memory of a people who were told at gunpoint that he was god.

Germans Following Ike's Lead, Get Interested In Golfing

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — President Eisenhower involuntarily may have boosted the popularity of golf in Germany, where it was mostly regarded as a sport "for the rich and old."

A German golf official said that news stories and pictures about the president playing golf before and after his heart attack stimulated interest here in the sport.

"Maybe it will help us to get more people, especially young ones, to take up the game," he said.

There are only 36 golf courses in West Germany, a nation of 50 million people. The majority of the courses are nine-hole layouts. Only 15,000 Germans reportedly own golf clubs. In Frankfurt, a city of 670,000, there is only one club. Its membership is 300. Of these, 160 are Americans.

The 18-hole course here was used solely by the U. S. Army until recently when it was turned back to the Germans.

The Frankfurt club announced that German youngsters may play free of charge on its course in order to increase interest in the game among the younger set. Club professionals will give the youths free lessons.

The club said that an international open golf championship here Aug. 14-22 will help stir up more interest in the game.

No one seems to know exactly why golf has never been a popular sport in Germany. One reason is that there are no public links. Club memberships are expensive. A businessman said "to German sportsmen golf just doesn't seem to look like a sport somehow."

Accident Causes Same As Usual

The throttle and the bottle were the big reasons why a record 609 persons were killed in traffic accidents last Christmas. That is the conclusion just in, of the National Safety Council after a study of the details of accidents that occurred during the Christmas Holidays.

Nationally, 75 per cent of the accidents happened during the dark hours. More of the accidents occurred between 6 p. m. and 9 p. m. than any other three-hour period.

The National Safety Council said that speed and drinking had an effect during the Christmas weekend almost three times greater than normal. Driving too fast for conditions or in excess of the speed limit was a factor in 85 per cent. Drinking drivers were involved in 55 per cent of the fatal mishaps, although normally they are involved in less than 20 per cent. Those percentages are based on reports which definitely stated whether or not speed and drinking were factors.

Despite the heavy influence of speed and drinking, chiefly to blame for boosting the Christmas toll 50 per cent higher than on other December weekends, the council found that accident types and people involved were much the same as usual.

Other facts in the report are:

1. The most common type of accident was collision between two or more cars. Next in order were non-collision, pedestrian and fixed object collisions.

2. In 90 per cent of the accidents only one person was killed. The most serious accident killed four persons.

3. Rural accidents were fewer than normal in relation to urban accidents.

4. The ages of drivers was not much different from the normal pattern. Driver ages in the Christmas study ranged from 13 to 87. Six were under 16, and six over 75.

5. Males were driving in 94 per cent of the fatal accidents, only slightly higher than the annual average of 92 per cent.

6. The most common driver action contributing to fatal accidents was driving on wrong side of road or in center of road. Failure to observe a signal or stop sign was second. In only four of the fatal accidents was a mechanical failure or tire blowout mentioned.

7. Pedestrian victims were principally older people—4 out of 10 were 76 years of age or older. In one third of the cases, the pedestrian contributed to the accident by crossing between intersections, stepping from behind a parked car, or walking on a roadway.

These Days

Ike's Heart

A number of us were discussing our coronaries. Some were smoking big Havanas; others were not even smoking an innocent pipe. Each doctor has his own opinion on that particular subject. These were all active men whose names are fairly well known to the public. All of them, including me, had had heart attacks at various times ranging from 15 years ago to a few months ago.

Of course, not all heart attacks are alike. Some are triggered by the failure of some other organ such as the gall bladder. Some are due to causes that might almost be described as mysterious. It is not one of those cause and effect illnesses, although some attribute it to obesity, others to smoking too much, others to stresses and strains. The statistical data is inadequate and inconclusive and will probably remain so because it is not of very great value to discover why a pipe rusts unless it is possible to substitute a rustless kind. Those who believe that cholesterol is the rust may discover one day how to eliminate it and surgeons might be able to pull out a rusted artery and insert a substitute.

The real job is not these amazing discoveries but rather to learn to live an active, full life without further damage to the heart. In this, the doctor can, at best, play a very small part. It is up to the patient himself.

This brings me to Ike and I do not write as a partisan. In 1952, I preferred Robert A. Taft to Ike Eisenhower and I still think Taft might have done well, but then he died of a cancer. Those who attack Eisenhower because of his health are, to me, too sure of themselves. Anybody can die at anytime of anything. A man might catch a cold, delivering a speech, and die of pneumonia in a few days. The fact is that Eisenhower, like my coronary colleagues, has survived an attack and has learned to live with a heart that has a scar on it.

Some people take the heart too seriously. A scar on the heart is not a chronic disease; it is a breakage, a physical defect that has to heal over. If the patient survives it, he most likely has plenty of reserve in the heart to take care of all his needs. Certainly a President of the United States is not an Olympic runner nor are the stresses and strains of that job as terrifying as those of a pugilist, a comedian on television, or a fireman walking into a blazing building to rescue a fainted woman. All one needs is a sense of proportion and a little wisdom. Presidents of the United States at 60 usually do not chase blondes in their 20s, which may be a bit dangerous for a cardiac.

It is now 15 weeks since I had my attack and although I am not wholly healed, I feel pretty good and am doing about as much work as ever. I cannot however stay up all night in a saloon listening to words of wisdom. An editor once said that I did wrong not to read second or third-rate novels and minor poets but to go to cocktail parties and dinners. I spent a long night once with a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States in Toots Shor's discussing great matters. It would have been impossible to meet him under more favorable circumstances in his office or at a Washington dinner party.

I know that I was a sicker person than Ike because I had a complication that comes from eating good food. I know Ike could not have had that complication because of his published diet.

If a citizen wants to vote against Ike because of the farm bill veto or because he dislikes the role of Sherman Adams or Jim Hagerty, that is his right and privilege. But when opposing candidates make a fuss because the President had a coronary, then, they are bum sports and generally don't know what they are talking about. Suppose he had had shingles or asthma or some such thing, would they have made an issue of it? The fact is most of us are still scared by our hearts, when what we should really worry about is over-eating rich foods. Diabetes is really more troublesome than a coronary that does not kill immediately.

Little Progress Made Toward Peace Since Pledge At River Elbe Crossing

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—It was just 11 years ago this week—noon, April 25, 1945—that a patrol of American riflemen pushed through the no-man's land between the forward American and Russian lines and linked up with a Russian patrol on the east bank of the River Elbe.

On that blood-soaked river bank with the artillery-shattered bodies of German women and children around them, the Americans met a Russian patrol, embraced, offered a toast to friendship, and vowed that the futile tragedy of war which took the lives of noncombatant women and children strewn around them, would never happen again.

That day was one to be remembered. For not only did American-Russian forces join together on that occasion, but the United Nations organization held its first meeting in San Francisco that day —to consummate the pledge of those Russian and American patrols.

A lot has happened in the 11 years since then.

A general named Eisenhower and a Russian marshal named Zhukov later met in Berlin and tried to carry out the spirit of that River Elbe pledge. They worked out a fair degree of cooperation between American and Russian troops.

Ike In Moscow

The general named Eisenhower went to Moscow and told in his book, "Crusade in Europe," how for five hours he had stood on the tomb of Lenin watching a sports parade in Red Square.

"None of us had ever witnessed anything remotely similar," he reported. "Every kind of folk dance, mass exercise, acrobatic feat, athletic exhibition was executed with flawless precision, and apparently with greatest enthusiasm. The band, said to number a thousand pieces, played continuously during the five-hour show . . . The generalissimo (Stalin) appeared to enjoy every minute of the show. He invited me to his side, and we conversed intermittently during the entire period."

"Overshadowing all goals for us Americans," the general named Eisenhower wrote, "was the contribution we locally might make toward establishing a working partnership between the United States and Russia."

Unquestionably he meant what he said. That was the spirit of the times.

Ike Is Accused

The years passed. Times changed. The pictures of Eisenhower and Zhukov sitting together were published by his political enemies to show he was pro-Communist. Nothing, of course, could have been further from the truth.

Times changed again. The pendulum of fate swung back, influenced by the death of a dictator, by public opinion, by diplomatic frustration.

A President named Eisenhower once again met his co-commander named Zhukov, this time in Geneva. Not much was scored in tangible diplomatic achievement, but much was scored in creating a better atmosphere.

The President named Eisenhower did a fine job personally. His magnetism, his warmth, the fact that he went all the way to Geneva, melted the myth that the United States was a nation of warmongers. But the diplomats, the generals, and the admirals got into the act and helped to kill some of the success. Also, it takes time to heal the wounds of war, the poison of propaganda—and the man named Eisenhower wanted to remain only four days abroad.

Since Geneva

A lot has happened in the nine months since Geneva. The man whom Eisenhower stood beside for five hours on Lenin's tomb in 1945 is no longer a national hero. His body may even be removed from that tomb. The new leaders who now detract him have been touring Yugoslavia, India, Burma, England . . . Forty American senators and congressmen last year toured Russia . . . The American ambassador to Russia has made a vitally important report.

Probably more has happened in these short nine months — that might change the shape of the world—than at any other single period since the first nine months following April 25, 1945, the day when a patrol of American riflemen crossed the River Elbe at noon and mingled with their Russian comrades amid the blood-soaked bodies of German women and children.

Among these important events is the report of the U. S. ambassador, Chip Bohlen. What he reported last week I do not know. But I do know that previously he reported two developments or trends which could change our relations with Russia. They are:

1. The Russian people are sold on peace. They are so sold on peace that the Kremlin would have difficulty reversing this sentiment.

To a considerable extent the Kremlin, purposely or otherwise, has been responsible for selling this idea; because it has told the Russian people we are warmongers so repeatedly that, conversely, the Russian people believe the Soviet Government is for peace. Since Geneva, when the pictures of Bulganin and Ike were prominently shown around Russia, the Russian people also believe the U. S. A. is for peace.

This has been the report of the U. S. ambassador, a shrewd expert on Russia. It is substantiated by many other Americans who have visited Russia lately.

2. Ambassador Bohlen has reported, with reservations, that it's possible the Kremlin leaders have really come to believe what they say—namely, that another world war would mean the end of civilization.

His reservations are made because it's obviously impossible to tell what is going on in the mind of the Kremlin.

However, if this is true—and some of the actions of the Kremlin leaders appear to bear it out—then the United States may be in for a long period of precarious peace; precarious because it will be a continuation of the cold war, and because the battle of ideas, propaganda, and trade will continue.

This kind of period, though difficult, also carries hope—hope that the initial joy of those who gathered on the east bank of the River Elbe may finally be fulfilled. Because, though difficult, it does carry hope. I should like to report further on some of these problems in an early column.

'Ban Bomb' Cry Starts When U. S. Readies Test

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — This is an expression of deepest sympathy for the average reader of the news dispatches in American newspapers. Small wonder he is bewildered and can't tell sometimes when he is being fed propaganda that delights the Communists. For some public men are apparently duped into doing exactly what the Soviets want America to do.

For several months Moscow, through its agents and stooges throughout the world, has been urging a ban on tests of H-bombs and A-bombs. Some scientists, impressed by what they thought was a danger of "fall-out," conscientiously argued for such a prohibition. Other scientists said there was no danger of "fall-out" from the tests thus far made and that it's dangerous only when big bombs are actually exploded — and these usually have been tried out in mid-ocean.

Delay Could Be Fatal

But, while Soviet Russia has been urging other countries to abandon nuclear tests, she has been doing a lot of testing herself. It is admitted that some chicken-hearted and timid scientists high up in government during the Truman regime actually delayed the development of the H-bomb for many years and thereby Soviet Russia was given a chance to catch up. Why they delayed is still a matter of controversy, and there is no proof that anything disloyal happened — it was a case of emotionalism rather than military reasoning. A delay in tests while the enemy carries on its experimentation could be fatal to America.

Last Saturday Adlai Stevenson made a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in which he tackled this delicate subject head on. He said:

"I believe we should give prompt and earnest consideration to stopping further tests of the hydrogen bomb, as Commissioner Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission recently proposed. As a layman, I question the sense in multiplying and enlarging weapons of a destructive power already almost incomprehensible. Of course, I would call upon other nations to follow our lead, and if they don't and persist in further tests, we will know about it and we can reconsider our policy."

Mr. Stevenson does not say how many precious months he would wait, if he were president, before he let our scientists and our manufacturers of H-bombs go ahead again. His argument is that America should stop and then wait and see. There is some doubt whether any system of verification of what the enemy would be doing while America held off would be foolproof. President Eisenhower has been trying for months to get the Soviets to agree to a mutually acceptable air-inspection plan but to no avail.

News Ticker Report

So, to take a look at the news ticker of Monday:

At 9.26 a. m., the Communist party boss, Khrushchev, told British business men that the Soviet Union is building a guided missile with an atomic war head.

At 10.08 a. m. Senator Kefauver said he "saw no particular good in having further H-bomb tests."

At 12.28 p. m., Mr. Stevenson was asked if he believed Soviet Russia would go along with his suggestion that both sides stop testing deadly atomic weapons. "They've given every indication of it," he said.

At 1.23 p. m., the Senate got into a debate on the subject, and Senator Kuchel, Republican, of California, said that some of the people who are proposing an end to the U.S. tests are "good, but mistaken." Senator Bridges, Republican, said "these people who are taken in by some of the things that are going on should have their heads examined."

At 3.09 p. m., Senator Kefauver said he doesn't believe this country should halt testing of hydrogen bombs unless Russia does. He added: "I think that anything we do along that line should be reciprocal. I wouldn't want this country to stop testing if they (the Russians) are going to keep on testing."

Then what's all the shouting about? Why propose, as Mr. Stevenson did, That America take the initiative in banning nuclear tests? Mr. Stevenson says he took his cue from Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission. But a careful reading of Mr. Murray's statement of April 12 doesn't show that the latter wants to stop the tests without reference to what Russia may do. He said:

"We must beware of the false idealism lurking in the Soviet slogan, 'Ban the bomb.' In the discussions and negotiations looking to disarmament, it would be sheer folly to be maneuvered into making a blanket renunciation of the use of all types of nuclear weapons."

Confusing Situation

At the end of the day, this correspondent saw at 4.44 p. m., an item on the news ticker which read:

"SINGAPORE—Four British destroyers and a frigate will take part in British atomic tests scheduled to be held soon off Australia's Monte Bello Island."

Also, just a few weeks ago Sir Anthony Eden told Parliament he saw no reason why Britain should stop testing super-bombs.

It's curious, but just before America prepares for a big test—there's one coming soon in the Pacific — the propaganda to ban the bomb always spreads throughout the world, and many well-meaning and loyal Americans take up the cry. It's a bit confusing.

Baering Down On The News

Southern Democrats are paging Senator Byrd to pack the banner for a third party. There hasn't been such a write-in since the postscript on the wall.

Only thing worrying Senator Byrd is how to keep Kefauver out of his primaries.

If it's for the Byrds you can bet Estes will be there.

If memory doesn't stutter the third parties started when the Dixiecrats promenaded loose from FDR's farm policy. If Franklin didn't like you he farmed you out.

It's a political carry-over on yesterday's books but can be altered to suit any new tenant.

Many Recent Studies Aim At Preventing Suicide

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

In recent years, many studies have been done on suicide prevention. Psychiatrists and psychologists have combed the field for clues to detect possible suicides so that the toll of these 20,000 annual unnecessary deaths can be reduced. These persons are emotionally disturbed and calling in a psychiatrist may make the difference between life and death.

The majority are abnormally depressed or beset with anxieties; others are alcoholics. Mental patients of the paranoid type also are potential self-murders. These are the insane who live in terror of being followed and harmed by enemies or exteminated by lethal rays. They seek death as the way out of their troubles.

But individuals with a suicidal tendency often escape detection because it is not always easy to spot them. A group of Los Angeles psychologists found that 75 per cent of persons who took their own life had previously threatened or attempted to commit suicide.

This means that their threats and attempts must be taken seriously. In addition, half of those who went through with it did so within 90 days after leaving the hospital. In other words, these men and women should be watched carefully for at least three months after they leave the institution, presumably cured.

What about suicidal letters or notes? Drs. Edwin S. Shneidman and Norman L. Farberow, of the Veterans Administration Neuropsychiatric Hospital in Los Angeles County, performed an experiment in which "Thirty-three male, Protestant, married, native born, genuine suicide note writers were watched man for man by age and occupation with 33 nonsuicidal, simulated note writers."

This technique was used because people who contemplate self-destruction but fail to go through with it usually destroy telltale notes. As a result, control letters had to be obtained from men who were willing to engage in the test. It was difficult to differentiate many of the make-believe letters from the real McCoy.

The fictitious note writer thought up many reasons for his pretended state of guilt, tension, and unhappiness. He also was able to sense the relief so many persons obtain when they know the end is at hand. But they goofed in one direction. The genuine suicide note included many more detailed instructions about what was to be done after death.

These letters read like the commands of a dying king or powerful industrialist. This unalitic feeliof s industrialist. This unrealistic feeling of omnipotence was not duplicated by the simulated suicidal notes. The real suicide reflected his confused and frustrated state in his farewell message.

M. R. writes: Is treatment of bursitis by ultra-sound waves accepted by reputable medical men?

REPLY

Yes, because ultra-sonic treatment is a reputable type of physical therapy.

The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine. "Trouble" consists of ulcer, inflammation, polyps, cancer, diverticulum, obstruction, or kinking.

CANCER IN CHILDREN

Mrs. E. F. writes: What are the most frequent types of malignancies in children?

REPLY

One recent survey gave leukemia, brain tumors, kidney and adrenal tumors, and lymphosarcoma as the leading types of cancer in children. Lukemia, which heads the list, is included by authorities who regard the disease as "cancer of the blood." On the other hand, many physicians do not consider it a cancerous disease.

Laying Biggest Egg

By Bob Considine

LONDON (INS)—Charlie Chaplin and the Red Dean of Canterbury Dr. Hewlett Johnson got together last night at Russian Ambassador Jacob Malik's reception for "B. & K." and discussed animatedly a subject apparently very dear to their hearts—the pratfall.

"I shall always look back with delight upon those wonderful falls that you used to take on your bottom," enthused the towering churchman.

Chaplin, plainly pleased, replied: "I'm still doing them. I'm just starting a new picture."

The two famed fellow travelers agreed also on the stature of the late Mahatma Gandhi and reminisced about their youth. The Red Dean informed Chaplin he began life as an apprenticed engineer; Chaplin said he had begun as a printers devil. In answer to a warm invitation to visit him in Switzerland, the Dean told Chaplin he would do his best.

Picking Up Pieces

They concluded with other happy reminiscenses of a common subject dearest to their hearts—the pratfall.

Wall Street's long-held record for laying the biggest egg—established October 29, 1929—has been conclusively eclipsed by Comrades Bulganin and Khrushchev on their now badly fading trip to England.

They have flopped so badly that the remainder of the trip will be devoted to trying to pick up the pieces. They have curtailed the schedule, postponed a promised news conference, and give evidence of wishing to bolt back home and forget the whole business.

Bulganin still waves and tries to smile, but bullyboy Khrushchev has just about given up trying to play the role of genial emissary. His crude brushoff of the Laborites' polite inquiries about 200 Social Democrats being held in Communist jails was just about the last straw, coming as it did on the heels of his sword rattling at Birmingham.

The man with the difficult task of protecting the Russians during their visit to a country that is alive with exiled victims of the Kremlin's war against the dignity of man is Leonard Burt, head of the special branch of Scotland Yard.

Stocky, 61-year-old Burt is Britain's J. Edgar Hoover and Sherlock Holmes combined. The safety of the royal family and cabinet ministers is his normal job these days after a career that has ranged from outfooting Picadilly pickpockets to gaining the confession of atomic spy Dr. Alan Nunn May.

Nikita S. Khrushchev is a fragrant plug-ugly with a dossier that would chill the most hardened criminal.

He didn't learn to read and write until he was 15. His first break was when Stalin's second wife became interested in him and sent him to the Stalin Industrial Academy. In the mid-30s, he was an organizer of Red Square parades and trumped up pro-Stalin demonstrations.

In 1938, he was given the job of wiping out nationalism in the Ukraine. He ordered at least 3,000 party officials shot or sent to Siberia. Stalin was so delighted he gave Khrushchev the "Order of the Red Banner of Toil."

Almost Bumped Off

The Ukrainians barely failed to bump him off in 1939. Two companions were killed near him in his railway car when a bomb exploded.

He reported more than a million Poles into Soviet Union slave labor camps between 1939 and 1940. There is reason to believe he had a hand in the massacre of Polish officers in the Katyn Forest and elsewhere.

Back in the Ukraine, he won the title of the "Ukraine's executioner" for the ruthless way he dealt with those suspected of having been friendly with the Germans during the latter's occupation.

He was briefly out of favor in 1950 because one of his pet agricultural plans backfired. But he was strong enough at the 19th party congress in 1952 to read an important paper dealing with party reforms.

He initiated the purge of Lavrenti Beria after Stalin's death and now is dedicated to purging Stalin from the memory of a people who were told at gunpoint that he was god.

Distilling, Brewing Old Industries Here

The manufacture of alcoholic everages has been an important ctivity in Allegany County ever ince the county was founded in ne days shortly after the American Revolution.

Prohibition brought an end to he distilleries of Allegany County, ne foremost of which was the ames Clark Distilling Company LaVale, maker of Braddock rye hisky which was a favorite as ar away as Boston, Mass.

A number of small-scale breweries developed in the era after the ivil War but most of them were ropping by the wayside by the arn of the century.

This city's two present-day breweries, steady industries in the community, survived the Prohibition ra by selling ice and soft drinks, ncluding near beer. Both have nade considerable strides since he repeal of the 18th Amendment.

Staple Product

A History of Allegany County vritten by James W. Thomas and udge T. J. C. Williams explains hat whisky was one of the staple roducts of Frederick County and ll the country near the Blue Ridge Mountains and westward which in he early days had no facilities for ransportation of their grain to narket.

Wheat was ground into flour and arried in covered wagons to seaport towns at heavy expense, but orn and rye were not of sufficient alue to justify the expensive method of transportation.

Corn and rye were converted ino whisky and shipment of these rops was made in this less bulky ashion.

When Congress put a tax of from even to 18 cents a gallon on whisky, according to its proof, in 794, a number of the backwoods listillers, especially in western Pennsylvania, protested this as an ppressive and tyrannical measure.

President George Washington inally calmed the Whisky Rebellion when he came to Cumberland October 18, 1794, to review the roops. He had made requisitions on the governors of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey for 15,000 troops.

Used "George Washingtons"

The 1810 census shows that Frederick County had 140 distilleries

The development of breweries and distilleries in Allegany County can be traced in part through city and county directories on file at he Cumberland Free Public Library.

For instance, the 1873 city directory has advertisements for two breweries. At that time Cumberland had a population of about producing 145,000 gallons of whisky a year. In the western counties whisky was manufactured proportionately and on an even greater scale, according to the Thomas and Williams history of Allegany County.

For many years in the 19th Century there was a fashion of whisky bottles in the likeness of Washington. Nearly every man in those days had his "George Washington" which he took to the nearest grocery store to be filled. On Saturdays a young grocery clerk was kept busy from morning to night filling "George Washingtons" from a barrel until frequently the boy would fall over drunk from the fumes.

Down to the time when the C&O Canal and the National Turnpike were constructed, the amount of whisky to be dealt out was a matter of contract with the laborers. There was a "Jigger Boss" who made constant rounds among the men with his "jigger," a small tin can, dealing out whisky. Men working on the canal agreed with contractors to receive 18 jiggers and a "chance at the jug" each day. At the close of the day each laborer would have the privilege of drinking from the jug all that he could take in a single draught. 11,300. H. Gerdeman and Company was advertised as a manufacturer of mineral waters, porter ale, lager beer, tonic beer, ginger ale and syrups at 277 North Mechanic Street.

The other brewer of 1873 was John Himmler and Brother, identified as brewers of lager and common beer at 310 North Mechanic Street.

By 1876, the business section of the city directory listed five brewers. They were Mrs. Sophia Beck, 37 Valley Street; John Himmler and Brother, still at 310 North Mechanic Street; Paul Ritter on Paca Street; Gustav Stuklauser at 174 North Mechanic Street, and G. H. Zink on Centre Street near the viaduct. Gerdeman was not listed.

The 1877-78 county-wide directory listed 12 brewers in Allegany County and one distiller, John Himmler, whose address then was the head of North Mechanic Street.

Clark Distillery Starts

Brewers of 1877-78 were J. F. Beck, Little Valley Road at Corner of Walnut Street; Michael Fesenmier, Lindnerville; George Himmler and Brother, 310 North Mechanic Street; Gustav Stuklauser (the spelling was different from that in the previous directory), Knox near Centre Street; Washington Brewery, Paca Street, between Lee and Smallwood; George Schramm, Barton; George H. Eisfeller and John Mayer, both of Frostburg; Henry Hanekamp and Conrad Hoehing, both of Lonaconing; Peter Henkle, Mt. Savage, and Frederick Schule, Westernport.

TIME OUT—John Nimick pauses for refreshment at Lindner's Saloon on Mill Street many years ago. Bartender is owner Thomas F. Lindner and the establishment was located at what is now 36 Bedford Street.

The James Clark Distilling Company began operations shortly after this time in the buildings which now house the Cumberland Glass Company and the Zimerla auto shop in LaVale.

Clark's money and the brewing knowledge of Michael L. Fesenmier and Andrew J. Fesenmier, who had operated a small brewery in Lindnerville since about 1877, were combined in the formation of the Cumberland Brewing Company. This firm had its first meeting of the incorporators on January 16, 1890, in what is known today as the Clark-Keating Building in honor of two of the six men who attended that meeting.

The incorporators were James Clark, William A. Buchholtz, John Keating, Dr. Isman L. Eiseman, Andrew J. Fesenmier and Michael L. Fesenmier. They elected Clark president, Dr. Eiseman secretary-treasurer, and Buchholtz general manager. The Fesenmiers were the brewmasters.

Used Old Cotton Plant

Operations were started at the present location in what had been an old cotton plant, brewery officials report. An advertisement in an 1893 Cumberland newspaper stated that the Cumberland Brewing Company is now brewing its famous brands of Reingold, Erlanger and Export beer. Orders left at the James Clark and Company store on Baltimore Street will receive prompt attention, the advertisement said.

That same issue advertised that Himmler's Pioneer Whisky was available at J. J. Stump and Company, 20-22 Bedford Street. The same paper also carried an advertisement from the Keely Institute in Hagerstown which promised treatment of liquor, morphine, opium, cocaine and tobacco habits.

The Himmler distillery must have ceased operations in the last decade of the 19th Century because the city directory of 1901-02 lists only the Clark distillery.

As has been stated earlier, the Cumberland Brewing Company managed to continue operation during the Prohibition era by manufacturing near beer and ice. Today its products are sold in an area including large sections of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia and smaller portions of Virginia and Ohio.

Present-day officers of the Cumberland Brewing Company are G. William Bibby, president; J. H. Stitely, vice president; I. N. Evans, secretary-treasurer; James H. Walburn, assistant secretary-treasurer; Carl Daum, brewmaster, and Matthew A. Mors, assistant brewmaster.

This city's other brewery of today, the Queen City Brewing Company, had its inception about 1900 when Warren C. White, a prominent local business man, started action to erect a brewery making a German-type beer.

Incorporated In 1901

The German Brewing Company, as it was incorporated in March 1901, had as its first master brewer Henry C. Neumann, a native of Germany who came here from Orange County, N. Y.

In August 1902 the Evening Times published a state industrial edition which had the following comment to make about the German Brewing Company:

"In Germany and in parts of this country where purely German communities reside beer is made that is healthful and refreshing. Whole families drink the beer and suffer no ill results, while in other

Frostburg's History Closely Tied To Development Of Coal Fields

FROSTBURG—Coal, known also as "black diamonds," has had a long and varied history in Frostburg and has played a great part in its economic life. In its early days, Frostburg, sitting astride the great National Pike, became one of the favorite stopping places for the drivers, salesmen and other travelers on the stage coaches, but it was not until the coal mining industry began that it grew to any size.

The first coal mines in Maryland were in the Frostburg area with the early coal being wagoned to Cumberland for use there in the glass works. Other mines were opened in Eckhart and at the "Frost" mines. With the completion of the railroad to Cumberland in 1842 and the canal in 1850, coal began to move out of the area at a more rapid rate and new pits were opened as the demand increased.

Frost The Pioneer

Meshack Frost, the founder of the city, is considered the pioneer of the coal production trade in this section. He was owner of 881 acres of coal land and his brother, Josiah Frost, the owner of 474 acres. The first coal company organized in Frostburg was by the Frosts in 1845 and incorporated as the Frostburg Coal Company with a capital of $500,000.

With the construction of a narrow gauge tram road from the mines of Frostburg to Mt. Savage where it connected with the Mt. Savage railroad running into Cumberland, further impetus was given to the coal industry.

After the opening of many small mines in the area, the Borden Mining Company began the developing of its property which lay mainly in the valley between Frostburg and Mt. Savage.

Railroad Expanded

Early companies operating out of Frostburg 100 years ago were: the Frostburg Mining Company which was sold to the Consolidated Coal Company in 1864; the Allegany Mining Company; Maryland Mining Company; Washington Coal Company; Borden Mining Company; Withers Mining Company; Parker Vein Company and the Chesapeake Coal Company.

With the building of the Mt. Savage and Cumberland Railroad to Frostburg in the 1850s and the extension in the 1860s to Piedmont, the town took on new life and began to grow anew.

From 1842 to 1911, recorded coal shipped out of the area was 136 million tons. The Consolidation Coal Company alone between 1900 and 1911 shipped 22½ million tons. The largest year's output was 2,326,299 tons in 1910.

During this period of growth, the mines were where practically every youth expected some day to work. It was not uncommon for a boy of 12 years of age to leave school and begin working in the mines alongside his father or brothers. In those days a man's "turn" or day's loading was two cars or approximately four tons at 45 cents a ton. The youth was expected to load a half turn. Most miners living in Frostburg would leave home at 6 a. m. and return around 6 p. m.

When a young man remained at home, his entire pay was turned over to his parents until he reached the age of 21; then he began to pay "board."

In 1912, when Frostburg celebrated it's 100th birthday, the coal industry was in its "hey day." With the coming of W.W.I. 1914 to 1918, coal output remained high, but with the building and growth of the automobile industry and other manufacturing companies youths no longer looked to the mines.

Gas, oil and electricity cut deeply into the use of coal and today the large operations in the George's Creek area are only a memory. Strip mining, worked out veins, increased costs and other reasons contributed to reduce the number of miners in the pits.

MINERS GET TOGETHER—This group of hardy miners gathers together for a friendly chat before entering the mines in the Georges Creek area. Many of the miners can be seen holding large dinner buckets which they carried to tide them over at lunch time when working days were long and full. The boy on the left is about 12 years old.

Miners Relax →

Charles Cathcart and John Thomas are shown in a rare moment of relaxation from their work as coal miners in the summer of 1920. Both men worked at the No. 11 mine of Consolidation Coal Company.

Distilling, Brewing Old Industries Here

The manufacture of alcoholic everages has been an important ctivity in Allegany County ever ince the county was founded in e days shortly after the Ameri-an Revolution.

Prohibition brought an end to e distilleries of Allegany County, e foremost of which was the ames Clark Distilling Company LaVale, maker of Braddock rye hisky which was a favorite as ar away as Boston, Mass.

A number of small-scale brewries developed in the era after the ivil War but most of them were ropping by the wayside by the arn of the century.

This city's two present-day brewries, steady industries in the comnunity, survived the Prohibition ra by selling ice and soft drinks, ncluding near beer. Both have nade considerable strides since he repeal of the 18th Amendment.

Staple Product

A History of Allegany County ritten by James W. Thomas and udge T. J. C. Williams explains hat whisky was one of the staple roducts of Frederick County and ll the country near the Blue Ridge Mountains and westward which in he early days had no facilities for ransportation of their grain to market.

Wheat was ground into flour and arried in covered wagons to seaort towns at heavy expense, but orn and rye were not of sufficient value to justify the expensive method of transportation.

Corn and rye were converted into whisky and shipment of these crops was made in this less bulky fashion.

When Congress put a tax of from even to 18 cents a gallon on whisky, according to its proof, in 1794, a number of the backwoods distillers, especially in western Pennsylvania, protested this as an oppressive and tyrannical measure.

President George Washington finally calmed the Whisky Rebellion when he came to Cumberland October 18, 1794, to review the troops. He had made requisitions on the governors of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey for 15,000 troops.

Used "George Washingtons"

The 1810 census shows that Frederick County had 140 distilleries

The development of breweries and distilleries in Allegany County can be traced in part through city and county directories on file at the Cumberland Free Public Library.

For instance, the 1873 city directory has advertisements for two breweries. At that time Cumberland had a population of about producing 145,000 gallons of whisky a year. In the western counties whisky was manufactured proportionately and on an even greater scale, according to the Thomas and Williams history of Allegany County.

For many years in the 19th Century there was a fashion of whisky bottles in the likeness of Washington. Nearly every man in those days had his "George Washington" which he took to the nearest grocery store to be filled. On Saturdays a young grocery clerk was kept busy from morning to night filling "George Washingtons" from a barrel until frequently the boy would fall over drunk from the fumes.

Down to the time when the C&O Canal and the National Turnpike were constructed, the amount of whisky to be dealt out was a matter of contract with the laborers. There was a "Jigger Boss" who made constant rounds among the men with his "jigger," a small tin can, dealing out whisky. Men working on the canal agreed with contractors to receive 18 jiggers and a "chance at the jug" each day. At the close of the day each laborer would have the privilege of drinking from the jug all that he could take in a single draught.

City Loyalties Were Divided

ter a few hours, left, joined by a few Cumberland men who decided to throw their hats in with the Confederacy.

Then follows, in Cumberland history, the locally famous Battle of Folck's Mill on Baltimore, Pike. Gen. B. F. Kelly, commander of the Union's Department of West Virginia, who had made his headquarters in Cumberland, had a contingent of regular soldiers stationed here, aided by three companies of local volunteers under the command of Gen. C. M. Thruston.

On July 31, 1863, Gen. Kelly had taken a regiment of infantry and some artillery pieces out Baltimore Pike and stationed them in sight of the enemy at Folck's Mill. Gen. Thruston's local volunteers were stationed on Williams Road.

Least Bloody Battle

Gen. Kelly started the battle with a shell whizzing in the direction of the Confederates, who had marched on Cumberland from Hancock. The Southerners sent back other shells and the artillery exchange continued until dark. The enemy then moved south, crossing the Potomac River at Green Spring. Thus ended, the famous battle of Folck's Mill, which was probably one of the least bloody of the war. It was reported, but not verified, that two Confederates were killed.

At Green Spring, the Confederates under Generals McClausland ([illegible]e burner of Chambersburg, Pa.) and Ransom took an iron-clad B&O locomotive, cars that were protected by a small artillery piece, and the blockhouse with 80 men.

On August 3, a day after the Battle of Folck's Mill, the Southern generals sent in a demand for the surrender of Cumberland.

But General Kelly said "No" and gave the order to his men to prepare for battle. This demand turned out to be Confederate strategy to keep the Union forces close to Cumberland so the Southerners could go unhindered back across the Potomac.

With the exception of the famous Crook and Kelly episode, Cumberland remained during the rest of the Civil War as an important Federal center.

In 1862, a hospital had been established at Clarysville with one of the buildings being what is now Clarysville Inn.

In October of that year, the hospitals were transferred to Cumberland to be located in the Belvedere Hall, the old Presbyterian Church and the mill on South Mechanic Street.

These remained as important reception centers for wounded soldiers being carried both east and west on the Baltimore and Ohio.

As the battleground moved to the deep South after Gettysburg, Cumberlanders felt more secure.

Except for harassment by Confederate rangers, the city held to the uneventful wartime routine.

After the war, the Cumberland men who had fought for the Blue and the Gray came back to their homes. For a time, the bitterness was exemplified by fist fights, arguments and feuds, but time healed the wounds and minds and soon things were back to normal.

Distilling Brewing

quarters not so much of good can be said. The German Brewing Company has very wisely gone back to the old German idea of a delightful and healthful brew and only uses hops and malt."

First officers of that brewery were White, president and general manager; Michael Morgan, vice president; E. Butler Carpenter, secretary; F. A. Blaul, treasurer, and Conrad Miller, Thomas F. [illegible]ouse and Herman M. Siefers, [illegible]ectors; James Conway, sales manager; William P. Rizer, bookkeeper, cashier and office manager, and Neumann, brewmaster. The last named continued as brewmaster until his death in 1941.

Today the products of the Queen City Brewing Company are distributed in parts of Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia and even as far away as Florida. Present-day officers are F. Brooke Whiting, president; George F. Hazelwood, executive vice president; William L. Wilson, vice president; Arch M. Hutcheson, secretary-treasurer; L. N. Duncan, brewmaster, and W. Carl White, son of the brewery founder, sales manager.

FROSTBURG—Coal, known also as "black diamonds," has had a long and varied history in Frostburg and has played a great part in its economic life. In its early days, Frostburg, sitting astride the great National Pike, became one of the favorite stopping places for the drivers, salesmen and other travelers on the stage coaches, but it was not until the coal mining industry began that it grew to any size.

The first coal mines in Maryland were in the Frostburg area with the early coal being wagoned to Cumberland for use there in the glass works. Other mines were opened in Eckhart and at the "Frost" mines. With the completion of the railroad to Cumberland in 1842 and the canal in 1850, coal began to move out of the area at a more rapid rate and new pits were opened as the demand increased.

Frost The Pioneer

Meshack Frost, the founder of the city, is considered the pioneer of the coal production trade in this section. He was owner of 881 acres of coal land and his brother, Josiah Frost, the owner of 474 acres. The first coal company organized in Frostburg was by the Frosts in 1845 and incorporated as the Frostburg Coal Company with a capital of $500,000.

With the construction of a narrow gauge tram road from the mines of Frostburg to Mt. Savage where it connected with the Mt. Savage railroad running into Cumberland, further impetus was given to the coal industry.

After the opening of many small mines in the area, the Borden Mining Company began the developing of its property which lay mainly in the valley between Frostburg and Mt. Savage.

Railroad Expanded

Early companies operating out of Frostburg 100 years ago were: the Frostburg Mining Company which was sold to the Consolidated Coal Company in 1864; the Allegany Mining Company; Maryland Mining Company; Washington Coal Company; Borden Mining Company; Withers Mining Company; Parker Vein Company and the Chesapeake Coal Company.

With the building of the Mt. Savage and Cumberland Railroad to Frostburg in the 1850s and the extension in the 1860s to Piedmont, the town took on new life and began to grow anew.

From 1842 to 1911, recorded coal shipped out of the area was 136 million tons. The Consolidation Coal Company alone between 1900 and 1911 shipped 22½ million tons. The largest year's output was 2,326,299 tons in 1910.

During this period of growth, the mines were where practically every youth expected some day to work. It was not uncommon for a boy of 12 years of age to leave school and begin working in the mines alongside his father or brothers. In those days a man's "turn" or day's loading was two cars or approximately four tons at 45 cents a ton. The youth was expected to load a half turn. Most miners living in Frostburg would leave home at 6 a. m. and return around 6 p. m.

When a young man remained at home, his entire pay was turned over to his parents until he reached the age of 21; then he began to pay "board."

In 1912, when Frostburg celebrated it's 100th birthday, the coal industry was in its "hey day." With the coming of W.W.I. 1914 to 1918, coal output remained high, but with the building and growth of the automobile industry and other manufacturing companies youths no longer looked to the mines.

Gas, oil and electricity cut deeply into the use of coal and today the large operations in the George's Creek area are only a memory. Strip mining, worked out veins, increased costs and other reasons contributed to reduce the number of miners in the pits.

MINERS GET TOGETHER—This group of hardy miners gathers together for a friendly chat before entering the mines in the Georges Creek area. Many of the miners can be seen holding large dinner buckets which they carried to tide them over at lunch time when working days were long and full. The boy on the left is about 12 years old.

Miners Relax →

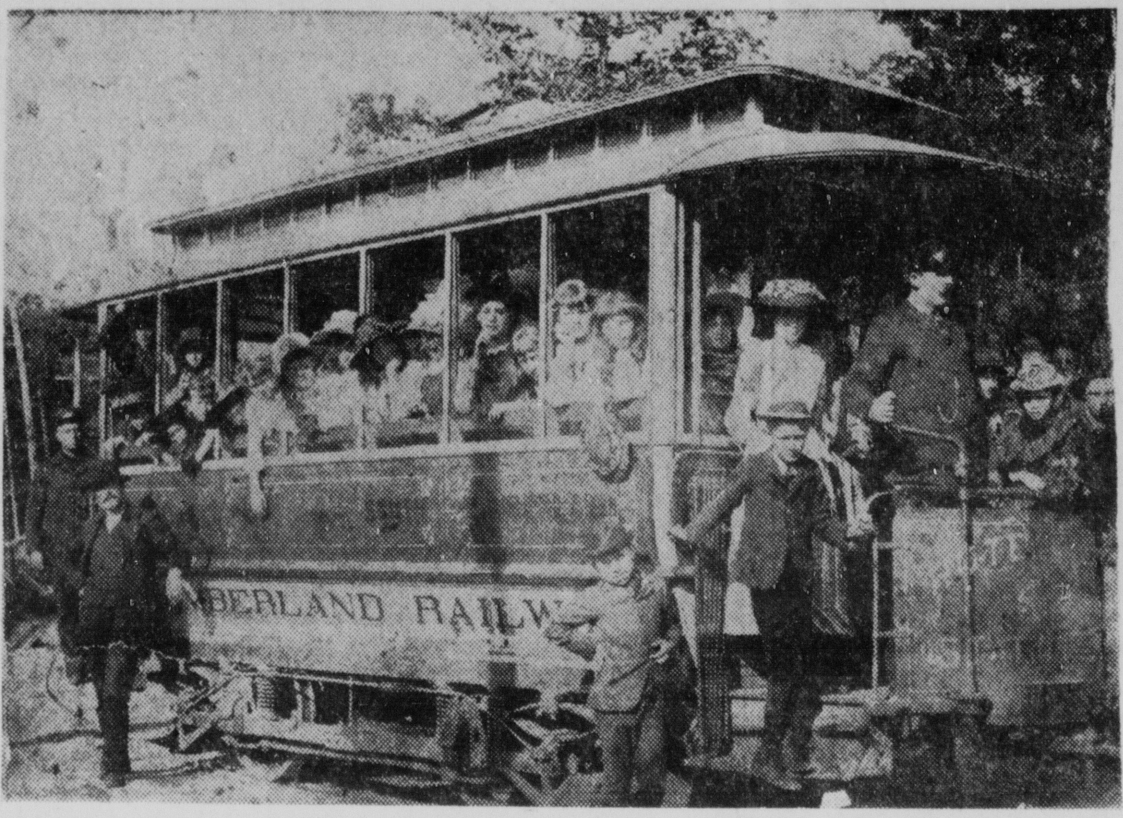
County's Transportation Has Quaint And Interesting Background

Electric Streetcar Closely Allied With City's Growth



OFF ON SUNDAY EXCURSION—This gala crowd of youngsters appears ready to leave on a gala Sunday afternoon excursion on the Cumberland Railway streetcar 50 years ago. The line then ran from South Cumberland to Narrows Park. Motorman is Alfred Troxell and the conductor is Edward Logsdon.

Known far and wide as an important transportation center, and one that has established through the years an enviable record both in peace time and war, no account of Cumberland's progress would be complete without recalling its own internal transportation systems.

Long before the days of the modern, streamlined, ultra super duper multi-horsepowered gasoline buggies and horseless carriages, transportation in and about Cumberland was important.

Long before the present days of crowded streets, not enough parking and the high price of gasoline, auto parts and license tags, residents of Cumberland had transportation problems.

But looking back over the years, and delving a mite into some of the unrecorded history, Cumberland seems to have met its internal transportation problem fairly well and fairly profitably on the most part.

Tied Together

The Cumberland transportation system, the old electric street cars, was tied in so closely with the electric power development here, that it is almost impossible to tell the story of the one without dwelling at length on the story of the other.

Oldsters here, and some youngsters, recall that there were, some two or three decades ago, two electric railway systems operating in the city and adjacent area. Had it not been for the rapid development of the automobile, it is quite possible both systems, with many modern innovations, would still be in operation.

According to Henry W. Price, manager of the Potomac Edison Company here, and perhaps the best local authority on the subject of early and present day electrification, the introduction of electric illumination in Cumberland marked perhaps the third installation in the United States, under the original Edison incandescent lamp patents.

Research by Mr. Price shows that these incandescent lamp patents were held by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York and it was necessary for those interested here to obtain a license, on a royalty basis, in order to use the Edison system.

So, in February 1884, The Edison Electric Illuminating Company was incorporated for the specific purpose of supplying lighting service to the city of Cumberland. Thus, the way was paved for electric lights, electric power, electric street railway systems, and all the present day advantages of electrification.

It was only a couple of years (in about 1882) before the incorporation of the company here, that the Pearl Street Station in New York was placed in operation. That was the first Edison plant placed in service.

Cost $32,500

The contract for the local plant was given to Frank S. Marr and S. E. Slaymaker of Sunbury, Pa., and covered a 1,500 light plant.

Records show the general details of this first local station included a power house of brick construction to be 27 feet wide by 66 feet deep and approximately 18 feet high. This plant was erected on Union Street where the present steam plant is now located. It also included two return tubular boilers of 70 horsepower each; two Arminger & Sims simple engines, one 60 horsepower and one 80 horsepower; with provision to have the two engines belted to four bi-polar Edison generators of a total capacity of 1,600 ten candlepower lamps. The contract price for this first installation, which also included some office furniture, is recorded as $32,500.

Wires were strung through a limited area in the center of the city adjacent to the plant and the lighting of houses in that small area began.

During this same period, it is recalled, and continuing for several years, the city's streets were lighted with gas in the business section and by kerosene lamps in the residential sections. One of the duties of city police officers who patrolled the city in those days was to fill and tend the kerosene lamps.

Today, when science talks about harnessing power from the sun and sending rockets to the moon, they aren't being as modern as they think. Because in the early days of electrification here, the city fathers and the Edison Illuminating Company agreed by contract that the city government would have the power company illuminate the streets on all but moonlight nights. When the moon was out it was depended upon to perform the lighting function.

Some Ready To Quit

The early days of the power company were fraught with problems and trials and tribulations experienced by most of the great industries of the nation. There were times when the stockholders felt that the difficulties and enormously increased expenses made the whole project appear to be a failure.

In the early minutes of one of the meetings of the directors, it is shown that the manager was instructed to notify one of the pioneer customers that unless he paid his light bill within 10 days his service would be discontinued. Mr. Price chuckles, "This was probably the forerunner of our present day sticker used on delinquent domestic light bills."

In 1880 and 1891 interest began to grow in the possibility of an electric railway system here. The Cumberland Electric Railway Company was incorporated early in 1891, for the purpose of operating electric street cars in the city of Cumberland. To handle such a large potential customer, the power company realized it would be necessary to expand the generating station. Plans were made to add a 100 horsepower boiler.

Late in 1895, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company leased the Cumberland Electric Railway for 10 years. Enlarging the plan and serving an increasingly wider area, more generating capacity became necessary and two additional boilers were installed along with a new switchboard, and additional generator and much other equipment.

Started Heating System

Back in those days, flood waters were an occasional if not frequent problem, just as they have been in recent years. In downtown Cumberland, many buildings did not have cellars or basements, and those that did had to dispense with central heating systems because of floods. In 1900 a central steam heating plant was installed on Union Street by the power company and steam was piped to buildings in the downtown area for heating purposes. Many of them are still served today. The company spent another $25,000 at the same time to enlarge the steam generating station.

In those days, electric energy was sold on a flat rate basis, but in 1906 the company began installing meters.

In the meantime, the street car system was rolling right along and gave promise of a bright future.

Actually the first tracks were laid, the first overhead lines were strung and the first cars operated on a route from Baltimore Street running northward on Centre Street to the Narrows. The first service on this line ran August 26, 1890.

Two years later, the company extended its lines to serve the West Side, running from Centre Street westward on Baltimore Street out Greene Street to Lee Street and thence to Fayette Street ending at Rose Hill cemetery. Service started on this line late in 1892.

Two South Cumberland Lines

Need for service to South Cumberland became evident and in 1898, street cars began running eastward on Baltimore Street to Park Street to Central Avenue (then called Ann Street), to Maryland Avenue to Virginia Avenue.

A second route to South Cumberland was planned later with track laid and trolley wire strung southward on Centre Street to Williams to Wineow to Thomas to Second Streets, then junctioning at Virginia Avenue with the original South End line. This second South Cumberland route went into operation April 3, 1914.

On October 3, 1917, service was instituted over still another route, this one running from Lee Street on Greene Street to the Dingle.

As cars completed a run to South Cumberland or to the Dingle, or to Rose Hill cemetery, the motorman always took his operating tools and lever control back to the other end of the car. The conductor had the task of lowering the trolley in the back of the car, walking to the opposite end and raising the trolley on that end to the trolley line. This reversed the car without turning it around. A wire and steel frame on each end of the car served as a "cow-catcher" or bumper. These too had to be lowered and raised, as the route was reversed.

Only at Narrows Park, the area's most popular and best patronized recreation area, could the cars turn around. At this point there was a circular track and a very nice waiting station for the convenience of the patrons.

Prices Go Up

As time went on, business grew and the system was successful. The advent of the auto and continued improvements in cars began to make inroads on passenger traffic. Fares jumped from a nickle a ride to seven cents and later to a dime.

There were interesting features of a ride on a street car. The old cars had long benches parallel to the car on either side. Passengers sat facing each other and could not look out of the window behind them without getting a crick in the neck. In the later years of the system, however, several new and "modern" coaches were purchased, with seats crossways, like a passenger coach. These were put in service on the Dingle line, and for a long time proved very popular.

There was a crossing mishap at the Western Maryland Railway crossing at Baltimore Street on one occasion, when a train hit a trolley car. The company inaugurated a rule that the conductor ter a few hours, left, joined by a few Cumberland men who decided to throw their hats in with the Confederacy.

Then follows, in Cumberland history, the locally famous Battle of Folck's Mill on Baltimore, Pike. Gen. B. F. Kelly, commander of the Union's Department of West Virginia, who had made his headquarters in Cumberland, had a contingent of regular soldiers stationed here, aided by three companies of local volunteers under the command of Gen. C. M. Thruston.

On July 31, 1863, Gen. Kelly had taken a regiment of infantry and some artillery pieces out Baltimore Pike and stationed them in sight of the enemy at Folck's Mill. Gen. Thruston's local volunteers were stationed on Williams Road.

Least Bloody Battle

Gen. Kelly started the battle with a shell whizzing in the direction of the Confederates, who had marched on Cumberland from Hancock. The Southerners sent back other shells and the artillery exchange continued until dark. The enemy then moved south, crossing the Potomac River at Green Spring. Thus ended, the famous battle of Folck's Mill, which was probably one of the least bloody of the war. It was reported, but not verified, that two Confederates were killed.

At Green Spring, the Confederates under Generals McClausland (the burner of Chambersburg, Pa.) and Ransom took an iron-clad B&O locomotive, cars that were protected by a small artillery piece, and the blockhouse with 80 men.

On August 3, a day after the Battle of Folck's Mill, the Southern generals sent in a demand for the surrender of Cumberland.

But General Kelly said "No" and gave the order to his men to prepare for battle. This demand turned out to be Confederate strategy to keep the Union forces close to Cumberland so the Southerners could go unhindered back across the Potomac.

With the exception of the famous Crook and Kelly episode, Cumberland remained during the rest of the Civil War as an important Federal center.

In 1862, a hospital had been established at Clarysville with one of the buildings being what is now Clarysville Inn.

In October of that year, the hospitals were transferred to Cumberland to be located in the Belvedere Hall, the old Presbyterian Church and the mill on South Mechanic Street.

These remained as important reception centers for wounded soldiers being carried both east and west on the Baltimore and Ohio.

As the battleground moved to the deep South after Gettysburg, Cumberlanders felt more secure.

Except for harassment by Confederate rangers, the city held to the uneventful wartime routine.

After the war, the Cumberland men who had fought for the Blue and the Gray came back to their homes. For a time, the bitterness was exemplified by fist fights, arguments and feuds, but time healed the wounds and minds and soon things were back to normal.

quarters not so much of good can be said. The German Brewing Company has very wisely gone back to the old German idea of a delightful and healthful brew and only uses hops and malt."

First officers of that brewery were White, president and general manager; Michael Morgan, vice president; E. Butler Carpenter, secretary; F. A. Blaul, treasurer, and Conrad Miller, Thomas F. S[illegible]ouse and Herman M. Siefers, directors; James Conway, sales manager; William P. Rizer, bookkeeper, cashier and office manager, and Neumann, brewmaster. The last named continued as brewmaster until his death in 1941.

Today the products of the Queen City Brewing Company are distributed in parts of Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia and even as far away as Florida. Present-day officers are F. Brooke Whiting, president; George F. Hazelwood, executive vice president; William L. Wilson, vice president; Arch M. Hutcheson, secretary-treasurer; L. N. Duncan, brewmaster, and W. Carl White, son of the brewery founder, sales manager.

County's Transportation Has Quaint And Interesting Background

Electric Streetcar Closely Allied With City's Growth

Known far and wide as an important transportation center, and one that has established through the years an enviable record both in peace time and war, no account of Cumberland's progress would be complete without recalling its own internal transportation systems.

Long before the days of the modern, streamlined, ultra super duper multi-horsepowered gasoline buggies and horseless carriages, transportation in and about Cumberland was important.

Long before the present days of crowded streets, not enough parking and the high price of gasoline, auto parts and license tags, residents of Cumberland had transportation problems.

But looking back over the years, and delving a mite into some of the unrecorded history, Cumberland seems to have met its internal transportation problem fairly well and fairly profitably on the most part.

Tied Together

The Cumberland transportation system, the old electric street cars, was tied in so closely with the electric power development here, that it is almost impossible to tell the story of the one without dwelling at length on the story of the other.

Oldsters here, and some youngsters, recall that there were, some two or three decades ago, two electric railway systems operating in the city and adjacent area. Had it not been for the rapid development of the automobile, it is quite possible both systems, with many modern innovations, would still be in operation.

According to Henry W. Price, manager of the Potomac Edison Company here, and perhaps the best local authority on the subject of early and present day electrification, the introduction of electric illumination in Cumberland marked perhaps the third installation in the United States, under the original Edison incandescent lamp patents.

Research by Mr. Price shows that these incandescent lamp patents were held by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York and it was necessary for those interested here to obtain a license, on a royalty basis, in order to use the Edison system.

So, in February 1884, The Edison Electric Illuminating Company was incorporated for the specific purpose of supplying lighting service to the city of Cumberland. Thus, the way was paved for electric lights, electric power, electric street railway systems, and all the present day advantages of electrification.

It was only a couple of years (in about 1882) before the incorporation of the company here, that the Pearl Street Station in New York was placed in operation. That was the first Edison plant placed in service.

Cost $32,500

The contract for the local plant was given to Frank S. Marr and S. E. Slaymaker of Sunbury, Pa., and covered a 1,500 light plant.

Records show the general details of this first local station included a power house of brick construction to be 27 feet wide by 66 feet deep and approximately 18 feet high. This plant was erected on Union Street where the present steam plant is now located. It also included two return tubular boilers of 70 horsepower each; two Arminger & Sims simple engines, one 60 horsepower and one 80 horsepower; with provision to have the two engines belted to four bi-polar Edison generators of a total capacity of 1,600 ten candlepower lamps. The contract price for this first installation, which also included some office furniture, is recorded as $32,500.

Wires were strung through a limited area in the center of the city adjacent to the plant and the lighting of houses in that small area began.

During this same period, it is recalled, and continuing for several years, the city's streets were lighted with gas in the business section and by kerosene lamps in the residential sections. One of the duties of city police officers who patrolled the city in those days was to fill and tend the kerosene lamps.

Today, when science talks about harnessing power from the sun and sending rockets to the moon, they aren't being as modern as they think. Because in the early days of electrification here, the city fathers and the Edison Illuminating Company agreed by contract that the city government would have the power company illuminate the streets on all but moonlight nights. When the moon was out it was depended upon to perform the lighting function.

Some Ready To Quit

The early days of the power company were fraught with problems and trials and tribulations experienced by most of the great industries of the nation. There were times when the stockholders felt that the difficulties and enormously increased expenses made the whole project appear to be a failure.

In the early minutes of one of the meetings of the directors, it is shown that the manager was instructed to notify one of the pioneer customers that unless he paid his light bill within 10 days his service would be discontinued. Mr. Price chuckles, "This was probably the forerunner of our present day sticker used on delinquent domestic light bills."

In 1880 and 1891 interest began to grow in the possibility of an electric railway system here. The Cumberland Electric Railway Company was incorporated early in 1891, for the purpose of operating electric street cars in the city of Cumberland. To handle such a large potential customer, the power company realized it would be necessary to expand the generating station. Plans were made to add a 100 horsepower boiler.

Late in 1895, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company leased the Cumberland Electric Railway for 10 years. Enlarging the plan and serving an increasingly wider area, more generating capacity became necessary and two additional boilers were installed along with a new switchboard, and additional generator and much other equipment.

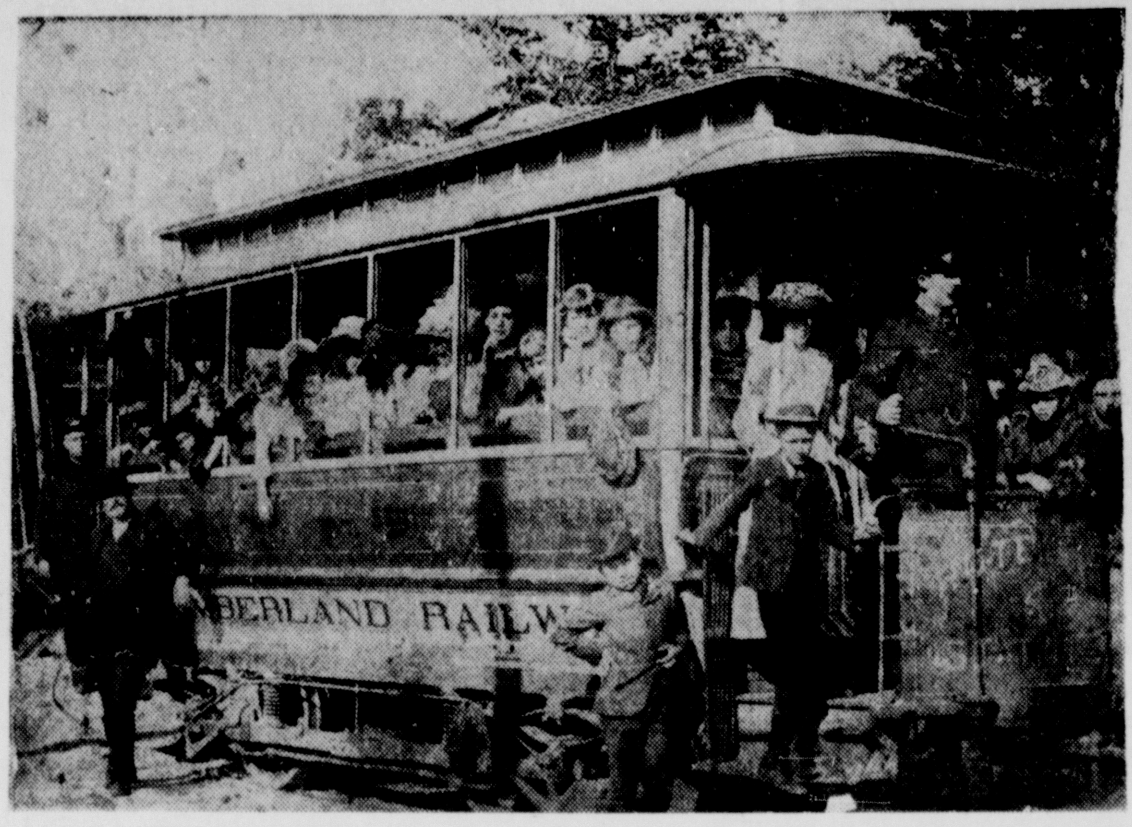
Started Heating System

Back in those days, flood waters were an occasional if not frequent problem, just as they have been in recent years. In downtown Cumberland, many buildings did not have cellars or basements, and those that did had to dispense with central heating systems because of floods. In 1900 a central steam heating plant was installed on Union Street by the power company and steam was piped to buildings in the downtown area for heating purposes. Many of them are still served today. The company spent another $25,000 at the same time to enlarge the steam generating station.

In those days, electric energy was sold on a flat rate basis, but in 1906 the company began installing meters.

In the meantime, the street car system was rolling right along and gave promise of a bright future.

Actually the first tracks were laid, the first overhead lines were strung and the first cars operated on a route from Baltimore Street running northward on Centre Street to the Narrows. The first service on this line ran August 26, 1890.



OFF ON SUNDAY EXCURSION—This gala crowd of youngsters appears ready to leave on a gala Sunday afternoon excursion on the Cumberland Railway streetcar 50 years ago. The line then ran from South Cumberland to Narrows Park. Motorman is Alfred Troxell and the conductor is Edward Logsdon.

Two years later, the company extended its lines to serve the West Side, running from Centre Street westward on Baltimore Street out Greene Street to Lee Street and thence to Fayette Street ending at Rose Hill cemetery. Service started on this line late in 1892.

Two South Cumberland Lines

Need for service to South Cumberland became evident and in 1898, street cars began running eastward on Baltimore Street to Park Street to Central Avenue (then called Ann Street), to Maryland Avenue to Virginia Avenue.

A second route to South Cumberland was planned later with track laid and trolley wire strung southward on Centre Street to Williams to Wineow to Thomas to Second Streets, then junctioning at Virginia Avenue with the original South End line. This second South Cumberland route went into operation April 3, 1914.

On October 3, 1917, service was instituted over still another route, this one running from Lee Street on Greene Street to the Dingle.

As cars completed a run to South Cumberland or to the Dingle, or to Rose Hill cemetery, the motorman always took his operating tools and lever control back to the other end of the car. The conductor had the task of lowering the trolley in the back of the car, walking to the opposite end and raising the trolley on that end to the trolley line. This reversed the car without turning it around. A wire and steel frame on each end of the car served as a "cow-catcher" or bumper. These too had to be lowered and raised, as the route was reversed.

Only at Narrows Park, the area's most popular and best patronized recreation area, could the cars turn around. At this point there was a circular track and a very nice waiting station for the convenience of the patrons.

Prices Go Up

As time went on, business grew and the system was successful. The advent of the auto and continued improvements in cars began to make inroads on passenger traffic. Fares jumped from a nickle a ride to seven cents and later to a dime.

There were interesting features of a ride on a street car. The old cars had long benches parallel to the car on either side. Passengers sat facing each other and could not look out of the window behind them without getting a crick in the neck. In the later years of the system, however, several new and "modern" coaches were purchased, with seats crossways, like a passenger coach. These were put in service on the Dingle line, and for a long time proved very popular.

There was a crossing mishap at the Western Maryland Railway crossing at Baltimore Street on one occasion, when a train hit a trolley car. The company inaugurated a rule that the conductor

Coal And Glass Among Earliest Industries In Western Maryland

Coal and glass were among the major industries in Cumberland during pioneer days.

When area mines were first opened in their infancy, there was no railroad or canal on which to transport the fuel to market.

It found its way there via the Potomac River which had been navigated to some extent by boats especially provided for the purpose, and had been improved by the Potomac Navigation Company of which George Washington at one time was the foremost leader.

Coal was brought in wagons from pits near Frostburg and dumped along the shore of the Potomac on West Side where the water works were located.

As far back as 1817 the Georges Creek bituminous coal region, 11 miles from Cumberland, was the shipping point for large quantities of fuel considered the finest in the world for steaming purposes.

The glass industry here had its beginning as early as 1816. In that year Roger and Thomas Perry erected a glass factory after finding suitable sand near the Narrows.

The enterprise, however, did not prosper and, after a trial of about three years, it was abandoned.

Similar glass firms came and went with the passing of the years.

In 1921, an endeavor was made by former employes of the Wellington Glass Company on North Mechanic Street to erect a modern factory at that site.

Today, Cumberland is looking forward to the new $34,000,000 Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company plant nearing completion at Mexico Farms. The factory will be one of the most modern in the world.

The other day the writer witnessed a rubber bridge game featuring four life masters, all prominent experts of New York. In such games, the all around skill of the contestants is generally of such excellence that the results of a particular session rest largely on the luck of the cards. There exists, however, additionally, a tendency for the players to try to outmaneuver their opponents rather than to play for absolute par on each hand. From this psychological battle occasionally a bizarre result ensues, as occurred in the accompanying hand. This tale is of a catastrophe such as most bridge players periodically encounter, but it is a matter of some cheer to know that the best of players occasionally also bite the dust.

North-South were playing the preemptive, or weak, two bid. After two passes South opened with two spades. When this bid got back to East, he decided to defend the part score, and bid two notrump. North doubled, East passed, not keen about playing two notrump, but relying on West to take out if his hand was not suitable for a passed partner. (I think he should have made an S.O.S. redouble.) South also had some qualms about the situation, but trusted North. West felt he had more taking tricks than his previous silence indicated, and also passed.

South opened the queen of hearts, which held the trick, and continued with the jack, which was won in dummy. Declarer played a small diamond to the ace, and led the jack of clubs, won by North's queen. A spade was returned, and South peeled off seven spade tricks, which, with the king of hearts and ace of clubs, defeated the declarer six tricks, or 1700.

East could have salvaged two tricks by a first round diamond finesse, but the result would still have been bad. I think the major fault of the hand was West's. He should not have risked playing two notrump doubled opposite a passed partner. A bid of three diamonds (down two) would have led to a normal result. North-South can make four spades.

Rail, Motor Stocks Help To Brace Leaning Market

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP)—Moderate demand for railroads and motors helped to brace the stock market today, but at the close it was thoroughly mixed and leaning lower.

Corporate news continued to pour in, and many stocks certainly were influenced on an individual basis.

There was no over-riding news to influence the market as a whole, however, and it showed it.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 10 cents at $187.90. That was a result of a loss of 50 cents in the industrial component, a gain of 50 cents in the rails, while the utilities backed backed down 30 cents.

There was only 1,160 individual issues traded, narrowest market in nearly eight weeks. There was a fairly close division between the 426 gainers and 500 losers.

Pennsylvania Railroad was the day's most active issue up ¾ at 27 on 58,700 shares. Directors raised the dividend to 35 cents from 25 cents quarterly. The railroad is the number one dividend payer listed on the New York Stock Exchange — a payment every year since 1848.

General Motors was second most active off ½ at 43⅝. Other motors were higher, but GM headed down as a Senate sub-committee looking into anti-trust aspects of business focused on the big motor maker because it is so large.

Coal And Glass Among Earliest Industries In Western Maryland

Coal and glass were among the major industries in Cumberland during pioneer days.

When area mines were first opened in their infancy, there was no railroad or canal on which to transport the fuel to market.

It found its way there via the Potomac River which had been navigated to some extent by boats especially provided for the purpose, and had been improved by the Potomac Navigation Company of which George Washington at one time was the foremost leader.

Coal was brought in wagons from pits near Frostburg and dumped along the shore of the Potomac on West Side where the water works were located.

As far back as 1817 the Georges Creek bituminous coal region, 11 miles from Cumberland, was the shipping point for large quantities of fuel considered the finest in the world for steaming purposes.

The glass industry here had its beginning as early as 1816. In that year Roger and Thomas Perry erected a glass factory after finding suitable sand near the Narrows.

The enterprise, however, did not prosper and, after a trial of about three years, it was abandoned.

Similar glass firms came and went with the passing of the years.

In 1921, an endeavor was made by former employes of the Wellington Glass Company on North Mechanic Street to erect a modern factory at that site.

Today, Cumberland is looking forward to the new $34,000,000 Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company plant nearing completion at Mexico Farms. The factory will be one of the most modern in the world.

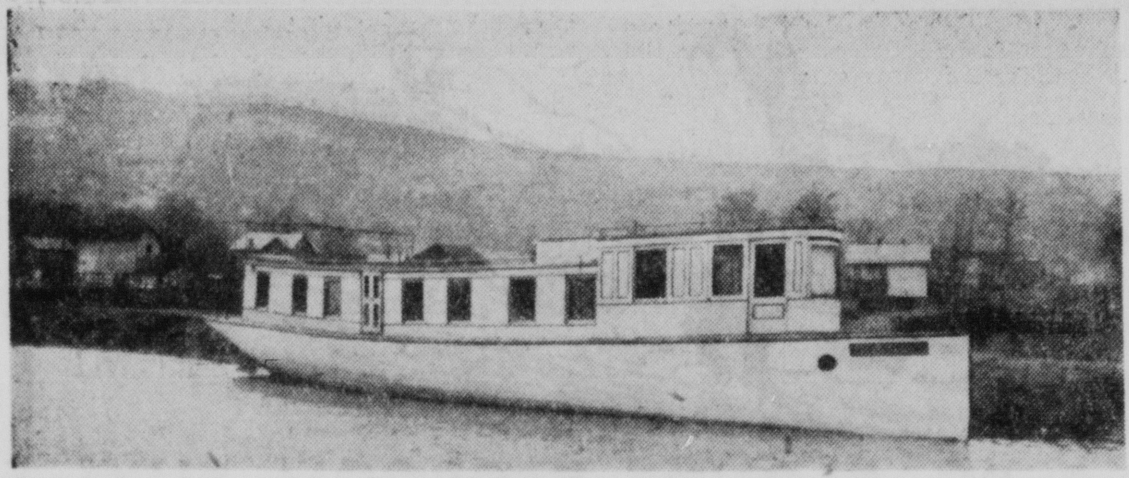
TRAINMEN PARADE—Members of Lodge 440, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, are shown with their float, caboose drawn by horses, in the 1907 Labor Day Parade.



CANAL PAY BOAT—This is the C&O Canal Company pay boat which was stranded in Cumberland after a flood about 40 years ago. Named the Candoc, it was washed ashore from the canal below Cumberland and was purchased by a local man who used it as an excursion boat on the C&O for many years. The boat later burned in a fire at the end of Offutt Street.

Streetcars Served City For Decades

would dismount from the car, run ahead and make sure the crossing was clear, wave the motorman a hand signal to bring the car across, and then climb aboard again.

This practice was followed until it became more dangerous for the conductor, since he had to dodge the auto traffic, than it was for anyone else. Every time he stepped off the car, he was in danger of being clipped by an auto, and there was probably no train coming anyway. Later, a building on the north side of Baltimore Street, which fairly hugged the tracks at this point was purchased and removed, thus providing a better view for all travelers.

As business fell off due to competition from private cars, the company inaugurated many economies. It was found that one man could serve as both motorman and conductor, and for many years, on most lines, the cars became a one-man deal.

In addition to the local street car system, there was still another street car development here that is now history.

Old C. and W. Line

In the early part of the century, the Cumberland and Westernport Electric Railway was formed and service was begun between Cumberland and Frostburg, and later Frostburg and Westernport through the Georges Creek Region.

The cars used on this route were of a heavier and larger type and were designed to carry both freight and passengers. For many years, they operated on an hourly schedule out of Cumberland. Cars plied to Frostburg, where passengers changed cars to go to Westernport or down the "creek." People coming from Westernport or the Georges Creek Region, changed at Frostburg to come to Cumberland. Fares were very nominal, yet, as in Cumberland, the system made money for years.

On holidays, special shopping days, etc., special and tighter schedules were run, and many people can remember seeing two or three street cars, and interurban cars hooked together to make a train.

The C&W used the city tracks down Centre Street (southward) to Harrison Street, where they had a switch. They maintained a freight station at Harrison Street and the B&O Railroad where cars could run all the way around the building. This structure, still standing, now houses the offices of the Baltimore and Ohio Employes Credit Union.

All of this transportation by electric cars placed an ever increasing burden upon the still youthful electric power company. The city was growing. Demand for electric energy also was increasing from domestic consumers. The company continued to expand and increase facilities.

Expansion Required

If the street rail system, and the line to Westernport did nothing else, it provided the momentum needed to keep the little power utility steadily expanding. Records show that about 1909, the company established a positive policy for making line extensions. In December of that year, a line was extended to LaVale.

In July 1912 expansion was again required and the company entered into a contract with General Electric Company covering the installation of a 1,000 kw turbine at a cost of $35,000. About this same time, the board of directors took formal action to buy a bicycle for the use of the trouble man and the meter reader.

Because the Union Street power station was becoming cramped, and lacked adequate condenser water and storage space for coal, in 1913 it was decided to build a new modern generating station. A site was selected on the Potomac River between the B&O tracks and the River. This is the present site of the Cumberland River Station. Because of the construction of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant, the B&O tracks have since been relocated.

The tracks are now between the plant and the river.

The new station cost well over $300,000 and contained two 2,000 kw turbo-generators with all other necessary boilers and equipment.

Extended To Coal Mines

In January 1915, the power company began extending transmission lines to Lonaconing. This was the first introduction of electric power into the coal mines of the area and proved an enormous benefit to the industry.

In 1919 a 5,000 kw turbo-generator was added at the River plant.

Around 1922, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company requiring larger and larger sums of capital because of its continued expansion and low rate of return, decided to sell its holdings to a newly formed Potomac Edison Company. The new company had been formed for the purpose of acquiring the Cumberland Edison Illuminating Company, the Cumberland Electric Railway Company and the Williamsport Power Company. These companies were eventually merged to form The Potomac Edison Company.

Since then expansion has been steady and rapid. The system has been modernized, with tie-ins, circuits and "pooling" of energy, so that all customers have steady, adequate and continuous service. It has been many years since area residents can recall any major interruption of electric service here.

But while the business of making and selling energy was growing and prospering, the street railway system was suffering from private car competition. Something had to be done. Every conceivable economy was effected and management spent great time and effort on the problem.

With the coming of the Kelly plant to Cumberland, the company bought and put into service its first buses. The first PE bus ran to the Kelly plant on December 17, 1924.

Experience here showed many advantages. Service was easier and faster. There was far less equipment to maintain. People seemed to like it.

Jams On Centre Street

The street cars, operating in the middle of Cumberland's streets created great traffic congestion. One of the worst situations many people can remember was driving northward on a crowded North Centre Street (a one-way thoroughfare even in those days), and meeting head-on a street car coming south. Jangled nerves and jangling bells were the major outcome. Once in awhile, the motorman would reverse the car to a cleared spot. Most of the time it was the motorist who had to give way.

But this was just one of many problems.

The company substituted buses on most of its lines in 1929 after entering into agreements with the city to abandon its right-of-way for street car tracks. The last line to be abandoned was the South Cumberland Second Street line in 1932 when buses were substituted over that route.

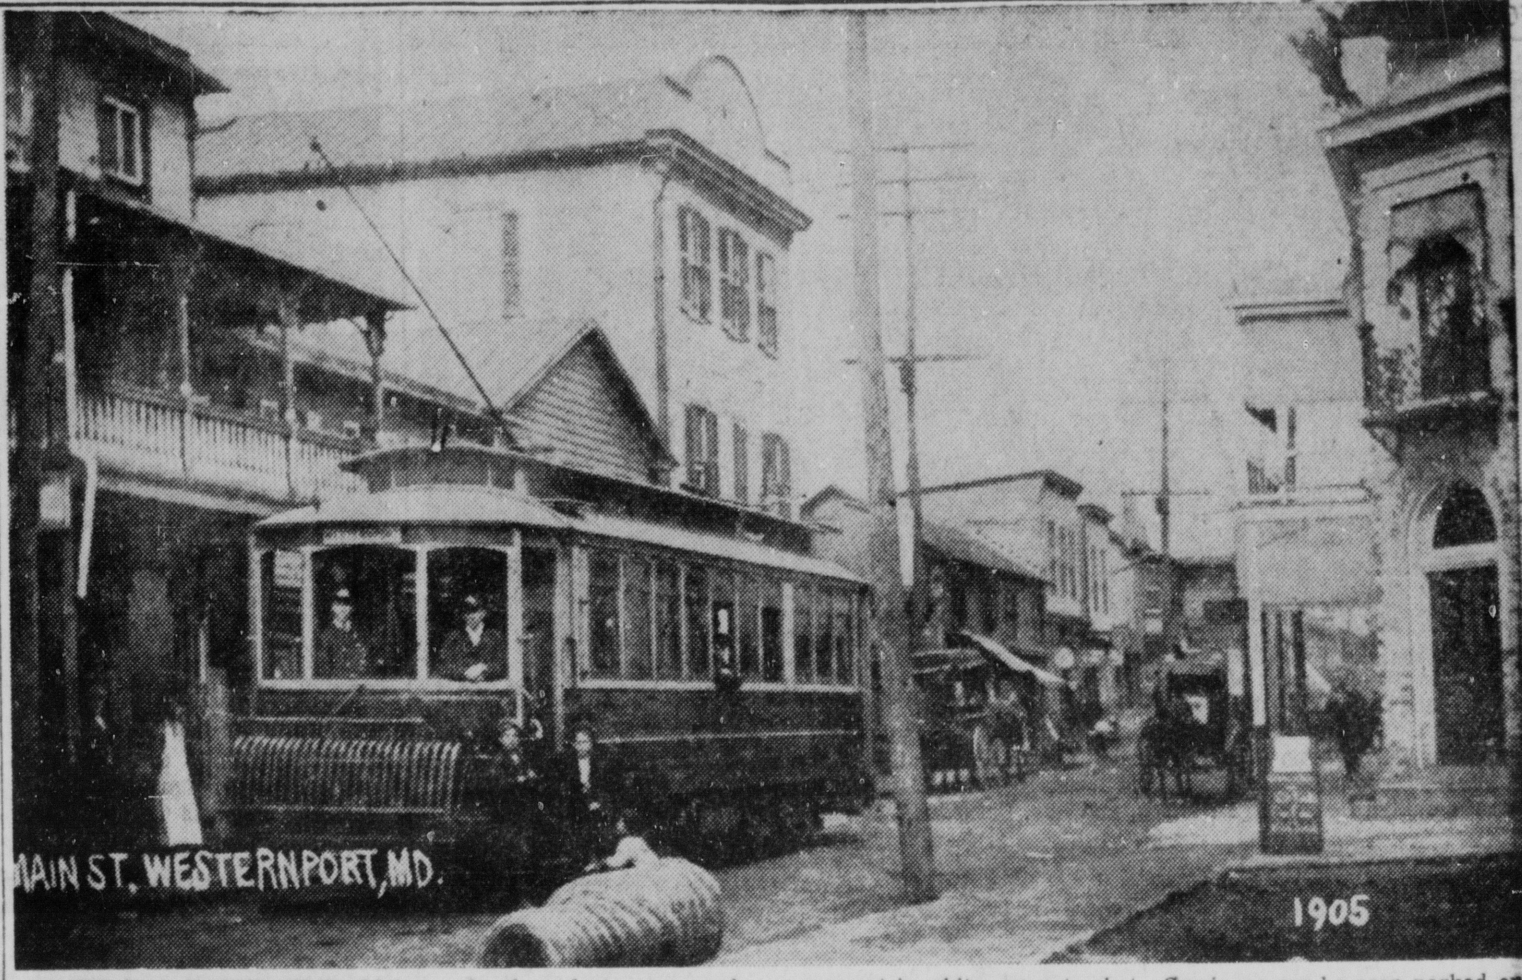
The C&W Railway went out of business as such and discontinued regular service on June 28, 1927, and changed to buses.

In 1931, the PE Company operated 26 buses in the city and immediate suburbs. That year, records show they ran 76,000 hours and traveled three quarters of a million miles.

In 1946, after the PE bought the Lashley and Anderson bus line to the Celanese plant, the company clocked 1,300,000 miles and in 1947 tallied up 1,250,000 miles. In 1946 the company's fleet of 30 buses carried a total of 6,000,000 fare-paying passengers.

As time went on, however, economic and social conditions in the community changed and passenger volume suffered. PE got out of the transportation business, and now is confining its major operations to making and supplying electric energy to anyone and everyone who calls for it.

Those who remember the thrill of their first street car ride, and those who remember the contribution to a way of life now long-since passed, can take some joy in the thought that these noisy, lumbering, and onetime blessed and cursed transportation devices not only provided desirable and economical transportation for many years, but furnished the spark which urged the founders of the city's present electrical system to grow and expand so that today, electric power is there. All you have to do is push a switch, plug it in, or, in the case of the increasingly popular electric eye, just wave your hand.



READY FOR ROUND TRIP—Motorman and conductor are ready to begin their round trip along Main Street in Westernport in 1905 as passengers peer from the windows of the streetcar and children play in the unpaved streets. Clerk in the general store stops a moment in white apron to chat. Carriages can be seen parked on either side of the street with barely room for streetcar to pass between.

Rail, Motor Stocks Help To Brace Leaning Market

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP)—Moderate demand for railroads and motors helped to brace the stock market today, but at the close it was thoroughly mixed and leaning lower.

Corporate news continued to pour in, and many stocks certainly were influenced on an individual basis.

There was no over-riding news to influence the market as a whole, however, and it showed it.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 10 cents at $187.90. That was a result of a loss of 50 cents in the industrial component, a gain of 50 cents in the rails, while the utilities backed backed down 30 cents.

There was only 1,160 individual issues traded, narrowest market in nearly eight weeks. There was a fairly close division between the 426 gainers and 500 losers.

Pennsylvania Railroad was the day's most active issue up ¾ at 27 on 58,700 shares. Directors raised the dividend to 35 cents from 25 cents quarterly. The railroad is the number one dividend payer listed on the New York Stock Exchange — a payment every year since 1848.

General Motors was second most active off ½ at 43⅝. Other motors were higher, but GM headed down as a Senate sub-committee looking into anti-trust aspects of business focused on the big motor maker because it is so large.

The other day the writer witnessed a rubber bridge game featuring four life masters, all prominent experts of New York. In such games, the all around skill of the contestants is generally of such excellence that the results of a particular session rest largely on the luck of the cards. There exists, however, additionally, a tendency for the players to try to outmaneuver their opponents rather than to play for absolute par on each hand. From this psychological battle occasionally a bizarre result ensues, as occurred in the accompanying hand. This tale is of a catastrophe such as most bridge players periodically encounter, but it is a matter of some cheer to know that the best of players occasionally also bite the dust.

North-South were playing the preemptive, or weak, two bid. After two passes South opened with two spades. When this bid got back to East, he decided to defend the part score, and bid two notrump. North doubled, East passed, not keen about playing two notrump, but relying on West to take out if his hand was not suitable for a passed partner. (I think he should have made an S.O.S. redouble.) South also had some qualms about the situation, but trusted North. West felt he had more taking tricks than his previous silence indicated, and also passed.

South opened the queen of hearts, which held the trick, and continued with the jack, which was won in dummy. Declarer played a small diamond to the ace, and led the jack of clubs, won by North's queen. A spade was returned, and South peeled off seven spade tricks, which, with the king of hearts and ace of clubs, defeated the declarer six tricks, or 1700.

East could have salvaged two tricks by a first round diamond finesse, but the result would still have been bad. I think the major fault of the hand was West's. He should not have risked playing two notrump doubled opposite a passed partner. A bid of three diamonds (down two) would have led to a normal result. North-South can make four spades.

Government May Drop Corn Control

By OVID A. MARTIN

Associated Press Farm Reporter

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—The time may not be far off when the government abandons a 25-year attempt to control the production of the nation's No. 1 crop—corn.

Among many farm leaders in and out of government a belief is growing that controls are neither successful nor necessary.

At present, the government is attempting to regulate production through a system of acreage planting allotments for farms in a designated commercial producing area comprising about 840 counties in 28 states in the Midwest, Middle Atlantic and Southeastern areas.

But during the last two crop years more than half the farmers affected have ignored the allotments and planted as much corn as they wanted. Reports from producing areas indicate that perhaps even a smaller proportion will abide by the allotments this year.

When the present crop control law was enacted in 1938, it provided not only for acreage allotments on corn but rigid marketing quotas as well. The quotas are compulsory while the acreage allotments are voluntary. Quotas provide for stiff penalty taxes on excess production as well as denial of price supports. In the case of allotments the only penalty for overplanting is loss of price supports.

It was the theory of this law—referred to at the time as the "ever-normal granary" program—that allotments should be used in normal times, quotas in times of surpluses. Quotas required, of course, the approval of at least two thirds of the growers voting in a referendum.

But the quotas were never invoked—partly because corn supplies never became excessively large and partly because officials believed they would be difficult to administer.

In 1954, upon recommendation of President Eisenhower, Congress amended the law to eliminate authority for quotas on corn. The President said they would be hard to administer and were not essential.

Now that the bulk of the corn growers show by their operations that they don't care for the allotments, there is a distinct possibility that the administration may recommend—assuming, of course, that it is voted another term in November—that the allotment system for corn be dropped.

One reason why farmers have ignored corn allotments is that they ask growers to reduce production more than they want to. Many corn producers grow corn for livestock feed on their farms and consequently are not interested in whether they are eligible for the price supports to which compliance with allotments would entitle them.

The allotments are based on a production formula in the law which is designed to keep corn supplies pretty well in line with needs, plus a reserve capable of meeting needs for a three to four month period.

Russia Paid More

NEW DELHI, April 25 (AP)—The chief Russian technician at the Bilhai steel mill being built with Soviet help is paid more than the Indian general manager. An Iron and Steel Ministry spokesman told Parliament India is paying the Russian 4,500 rupees ($945) a month and the top Indian 3,500 rupees ($735).

Electricity At Front

SEOUL, April 25 (AP)—The age of the candle in Korea's front lines is ending, and not a single U.S. soldier is sorry to see it go. The U.S. Army has taken bids to install powerful electrical distribution plants in forward areas to bring electric lights to the front lines.

Invitation Accepted

BELGRADE, April 25 (AP)—Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister Koca Popovic has accepted an official invitation to visit Norway in return for the visit here of Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange. The two issued a communique saying international tension is relaxing.

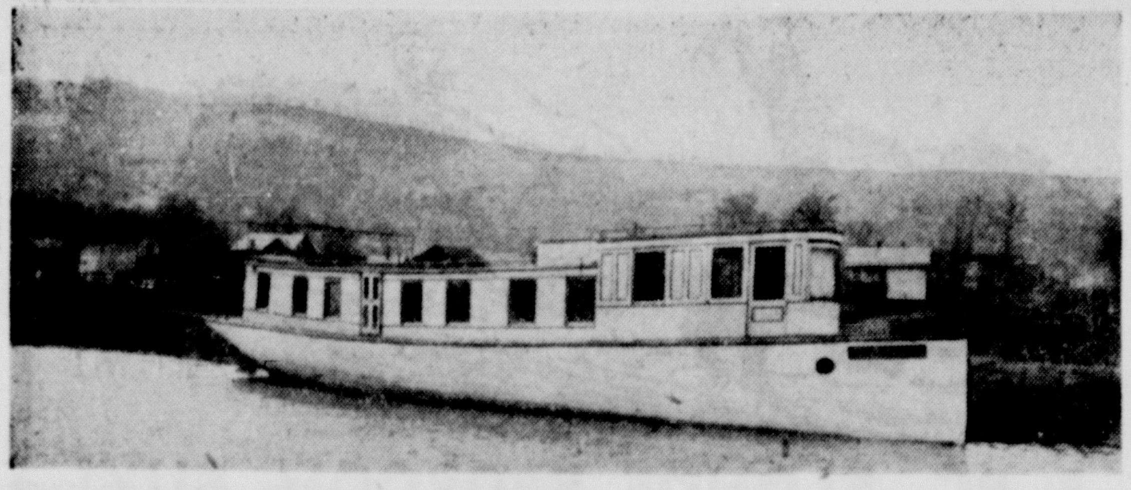
TRAINMEN PARADE—Members of Lodge 440, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, are shown with their float, caboose drawn by horses, in the 1907 Labor Day Parade.



CANAL PAY BOAT—This is the C&O Canal Company pay boat which was stranded in Cumberland after a flood about 40 years ago. Named the Candoc, it was washed ashore from the canal below Cumberland and was purchased by a local man who used it as an excursion boat on the C&O for many years. The boat later burned in a fire at the end of Offutt Street.

would dismount from the car, run ahead and make sure the crossing was clear, wave the motorman a hand signal to bring the car across, and then climb aboard again.

This practice was followed until it became more dangerous for the conductor, since he had to dodge the auto traffic, than it was for anyone else. Every time he stepped off the car, he was in danger of being clipped by an auto, and there was probably no train coming anyway. Later, a building on the north side of Baltimore Street, which fairly hugged the tracks at this point was purchased and removed, thus providing a better view for all travelers.

As business fell off due to competition from private cars, the company inaugurated many economies. It was found that one man could serve as both motorman and conductor, and for many years, on most lines, the cars became a one-man deal.

In addition to the local street car system, there was still another street car development here that is now history.

Old C. and W. Line

In the early part of the century, the Cumberland and Westernport Electric Railway was formed and service was begun between Cumberland and Frostburg, and later Frostburg and Westernport through the Georges Creek Region.

The cars used on this route were of a heavier and larger type and were designed to carry both freight and passengers. For many years, they operated on an hourly schedule out of Cumberland. Cars plied to Frostburg, where passengers changed cars to go to Westernport or down the "creek." People coming from Westernport or the Georges Creek Region, changed at Frostburg to come to Cumberland. Fares were very nominal, yet, as in Cumberland, the system made money for years.

On holidays, special shopping days, etc., special and tighter schedules were run, and many people can remember seeing two or three street cars, and interurban cars hooked together to make a train.

The C&W used the city tracks down Centre Street (southward) to Harrison Street, where they had a switch. They maintained a freight station at Harrison Street and the B&O Railroad where cars could run all the way around the building. This structure, still standing, now houses the offices of the Baltimore and Ohio Employes Credit Union.

All of this transportation by electric cars placed an ever increasing burden upon the still youthful electric power company. The city was growing. Demand for electric energy also was increasing from domestic consumers. The company continued to expand and increase facilities.

Expansion Required

If the street rail system, and the line to Westernport did nothing else, it provided the momentum needed to keep the little power utility steadily expanding. Records show that about 1909, the company established a positive policy for making line extensions. In December of that year, a line was extended to LaVale.

In July 1912 expansion was again required and the company entered into a contract with General Electric Company covering the installation of a 1,000 kw turbine at a cost of $35,000. About this same time, the board of directors took formal action to buy a bicycle for the use of the trouble man and the meter reader.

Because the Union Street power station was becoming cramped, and lacked adequate condenser water and storage space for coal, in 1913 it was decided to build a new modern generating station. A site was selected on the Potomac River between the B&O tracks and the River. This is the present site of the Cumberland River Station. Because of the construction of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant, the B&O tracks have since been relocated.

The tracks are now between the plant and the river.

Extended To Coal Mines

In January 1915, the power company began extending transmission lines to Lonaconing. This was the first introduction of electric power into the coal mines of the area and proved an enormous benefit to the industry.

In 1919 a 5,000 kw turbo-generator was added at the River plant.

Around 1922, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company requiring larger and larger sums of capital because of its continued expansion and low rate of return, decided to sell its holdings to a newly formed Potomac Edison Company. The new company had been formed for the purpose of acquiring the Cumberland Edison Illuminating Company, the Cumberland Electric Railway Company and the Williamsport Power Company. These companies were eventually merged to form The Potomac Edison Company.

Since then expansion has been steady and rapid. The system has been modernized, with tie-ins, circuits and "pooling" of energy, so that all customers have steady, adequate and continuous service. It has been many years since area residents can recall any major interruption of electric service here.

But while the business of making and selling energy was growing and prospering, the street railway system was suffering from private car competition. Something had to be done. Every conceivable economy was effected and management spent great time and effort on the problem.

With the coming of the Kelly plant to Cumberland, the company bought and put into service its first buses. The first PE bus ran to the Kelly plant on December 17, 1924.

Experience here showed many advantages. Service was easier and faster. There was far less equipment to maintain. People seemed to like it.

Jams On Centre Street

The street cars, operating in the middle of Cumberland's streets created great traffic congestion. One of the worst situations many people can remember was driving northward on a crowded North Centre Street (a one-way thoroughfare even in those days), and meeting head-on a street car coming south. Jangled nerves and jangling bells were the major outcome. Once in awhile, the motorman would reverse the car to a cleared spot. Most of the time it was the motorist who had to give way.

But this was just one of many problems.

The company substituted buses on most of its lines in 1929 after entering into agreements with the city to abandon its right-of-way for street car tracks. The last line to be abandoned was the South Cumberland Second Street line in 1932 when buses were substituted over that route.

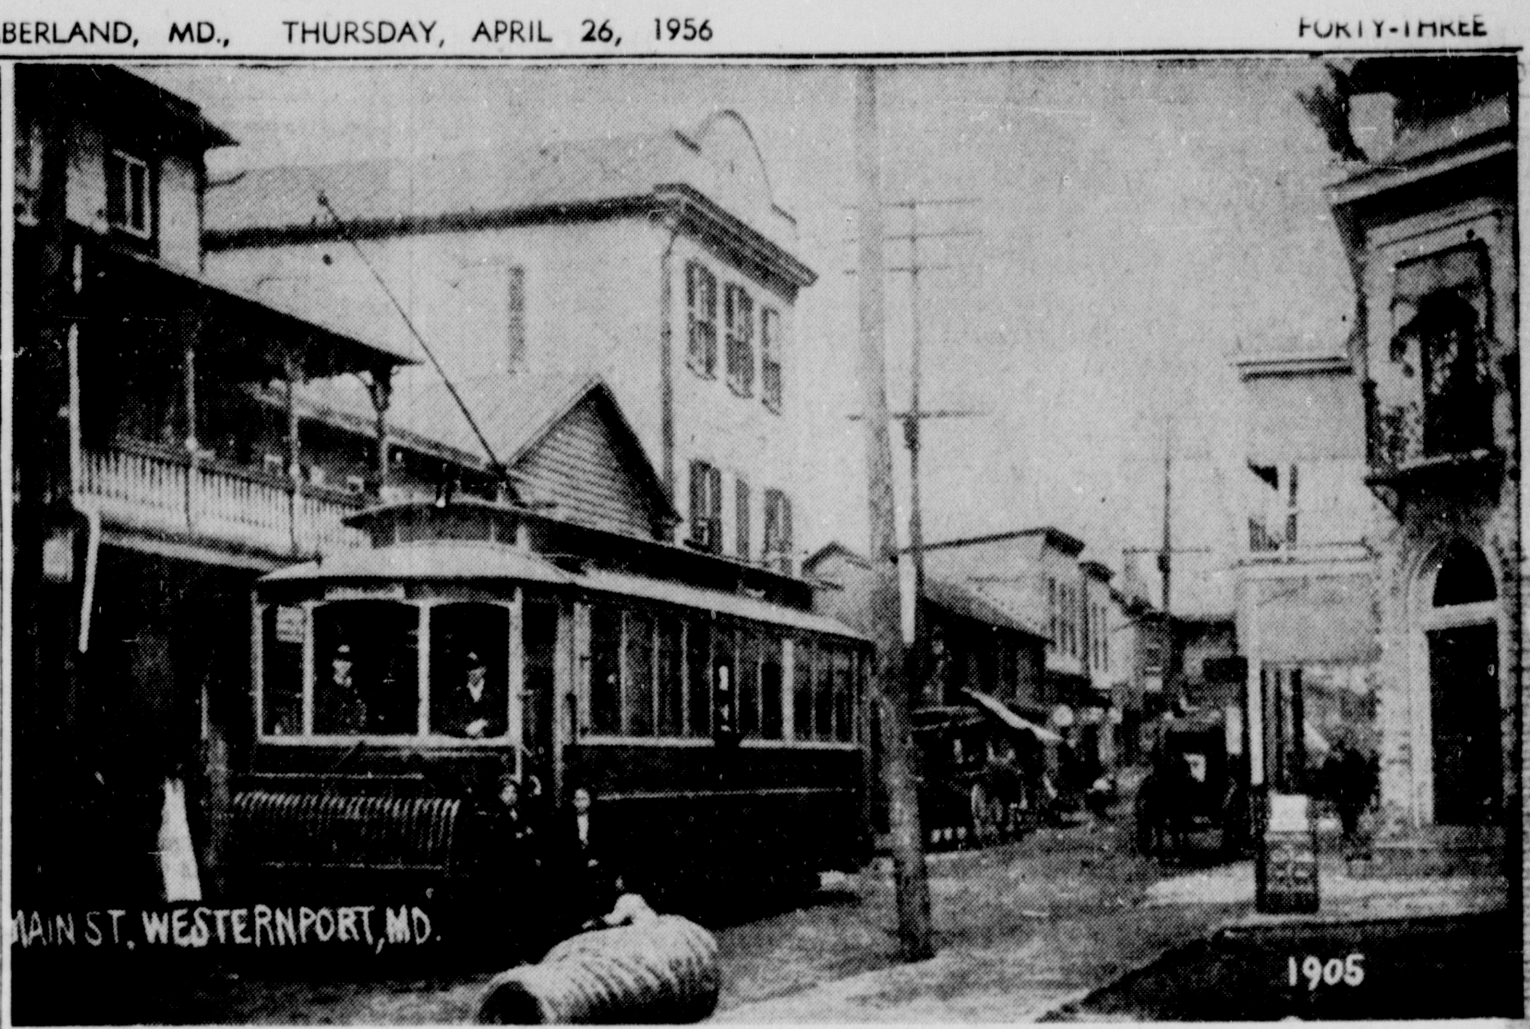
The C&W Railway went out of business as such and discontinued regular service on June 28, 1927, and changed to buses.

In 1931, the PE Company operated 26 buses in the city and immediate suburbs. That year, records show they ran 76,000 hours and traveled three quarters of a million miles.

In 1946, after the PE bought the Lashley and Anderson bus line to the Celanese plant, the company clocked 1,300,000 miles and in 1947 tallied up 1,250,000 miles. In 1946 the company's fleet of 30 buses carried a total of 6,000,000 fare-paying passengers.

As time went on, however, economic and social conditions in the community changed and passenger volume suffered. PE got out of the transportation business, and now is confining its major operations to making and supplying electric energy to anyone and everyone who calls for it.

Those who remember the thrill of their first street car ride, and those who remember the contribution to a way of life now long-since passed, can take some joy in the thought that these noisy, lumbering, and onetime blessed and cursed transportation devices not only provided desirable and economical transportation for many years, but furnished the spark which urged the founders of the city's present electrical system to grow and expand so that today, electric power is there. All you have to do is push a switch, plug it in, or, in the case of the increasingly popular electric eye, just wave your hand.



READY FOR ROUND TRIP—Motorman and conductor are ready to begin their round trip along Main Street in Westernport in 1905 as passengers peer from the windows of the streetcar and children play in the unpaved streets. Clerk in the general store stops a moment in white apron to chat. Carriages can be seen parked on either side of the street with barely room for streetcar to pass between.

Syrian Atom Exhibit

DAMASCUS, Syria, April 25 (UP)—An American-sponsored atoms for peace exhibit has been opened here. President Shukri Kuwatly in the opening speech called on world scientists "to devote atomic energy for the promotion of peace so humanity may enter its golden era."

Government May Drop Corn Control

By OVID A. MARTIN

Associated Press Farm Reporter

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—The time may not be far off when the government abandons a 25-year attempt to control the production of the nation's No. 1 crop—corn.

Among many farm leaders in and out of government a belief is growing that controls are neither successful nor necessary.

At present, the government is attempting to regulate production through a system of acreage planting allotments for farms in a designated commercial producing area comprising about 840 counties in 28 states in the Midwest, Middle Atlantic and Southeastern areas.

But during the last two crop years more than half the farmers affected have ignored the allotments and planted as much corn as they wanted. Reports from producing areas indicate that perhaps even a smaller proportion will abide by the allotments this year.

When the present crop control law was enacted in 1938, it provided not only for acreage allotments on corn but rigid marketing quotas as well. The quotas are compulsory while the acreage allotments are voluntary. Quotas provide for stiff penalty taxes on excess production as well as denial of price supports. In the case of allotments the only penalty for overplanting is loss of price supports.

It was the theory of this law—referred to at the time as the "ever-normal granary" program—that allotments should be used in normal times, quotas in times of surpluses. Quotas required, of course, the approval of at least two thirds of the growers voting in a referendum.

But the quotas were never invoked—partly because corn supplies never became excessively large and partly because officials believed they would be difficult to administer.

In 1954, upon recommendation of President Eisenhower, Congress amended the law to eliminate authority for quotas on corn. The President said they would be hard to administer and were not essential.

Now that the bulk of the corn growers show by their operations that they don't care for the allotments, there is a distinct possibility that the administration may recommend—assuming, of course, that it is voted another term in November—that the allotment system for corn be dropped.

One reason why farmers have ignored corn allotments is that they ask growers to reduce production more than they want to. Many corn producers grow corn for livestock feed on their farms and consequently are not interested in whether they are eligible for the price supports to which compliance with allotments would entitle them.

The allotments are based on a production formula in the law which is designed to keep corn supplies pretty well in line with needs, plus a reserve capable of meeting needs for a three to four month period.

Russia Paid More

NEW DELHI, April 25 (AP)—The chief Russian technician at the Bilhai steel mill being built with Soviet help is paid more than the Indian general manager. An Iron and Steel Ministry spokesman told Parliament India is paying the Russian 4,500 rupees ($945) a month and the top Indian 3,500 rupees ($735).

Electricity At Front

SEOUL, April 25 (AP)—The age of the candle in Korea's front lines is ending, and not a single U.S. soldier is sorry to see it go. The U.S. Army has taken bids to install powerful electrical distribution plants in forward areas to bring electric lights to the front lines.

Invitation Accepted

BELGRADE, April 25 (AP)—Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister Koca Popovic has accepted an official invitation to visit Norway in return for the visit here of Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange. The two issued a communique saying international tension is relaxing.

Cumberland Was Designated Allegany County Seat On Christmas Day 1789

On Christmas Day, 1789 the General Assembly passed an act of legislation which divided Washington County, so that Allegany County would be erected, westward of the present Washington-Allegany County boundary line. Washington County, of which Cumberland had previously been a part, was erected in the historic year 1776.

The first county commissioners, appointed as part of the act, were Andrew Bruce, Even Gwynn and Joseph Cresap.

Action for the new county came as a result of the growth of the region, the increased population which resulted from this natural trading center provided by the junction of the Potomac River and Wills Creek, the importance of Cumberland as a military center, and the vision which later led to the development of innumerable natural resources.

In addition to all these factors, Congress had decreed that all men who had served in the Colonial forces during the Revolutionary War should receive rewards of tracts of land, based upon the rank they held in service. These lots, laid out in 50-acre tracts, and located "west of Fort Cumberland" were designated as "a reward for privates and officers of the Maryland line, according to rank."

Most servicemen of the day staked claims for this land. Some kept it for development, some sold it to traders of the day, and others just hung on to it and it remained in families for generations.

However, this "land rush" did contribute to the growth, the development and the future economy of the region. It contributed to a change of planning and thinking by the pioneers, and they saw the possibility of development.

Ten years after Allegany County had been erected, a report showed that a survey had been completed by Frances Deekens, a surveyor selected for the work. The survey showed that Allegany County had 4,165 lots laid out and 322 families had 636 of them. Most of these had been military lots.

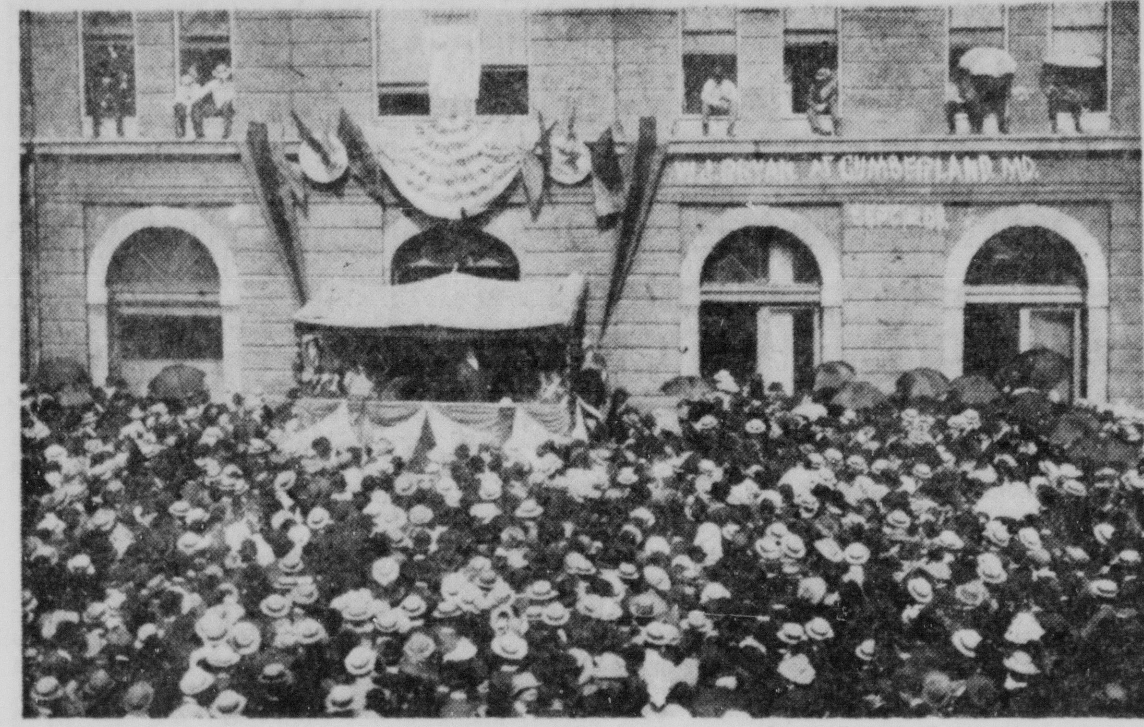
OLD NARROWS FOOT BRIDGE—This old foot bridge took pedestrians from U. S. Route 40 at the entrance to the Narrows up from the streetcar stop over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks to Piedmont Avenue on Wills Mountain. The street car line went from Cumberland, along the national highway, through the Narrows to Frostburg then.



SILVER-TONGUED ORATOR—William Jennings Bryan, orator, secretary of state and enemy of alcohol and the gold standard, is barely visible here as a white shirt-front under the canopy when he spoke in Cumberland in 1908. In Cumberland, as everywhere, people thronged to hear the great speaker and sometime presidential candidate. Note listeners sitting on second-story windowsills, holding umbrellas against the September sun.

'Senior Citizens Month'

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP) — A citywide program calling for special consideration of people 60 years of age and older is being planned for the month of May. Mayor Robert F. Wagner will proclaim it "Senior Citizens Month" and a large variety of organizations and groups have already promised their participation.

Ohio Company Was Pioneer Business Of Cumberland

Pioneer "business" in Cumberland dates back to 1749 when the British government awarded a charter and 500,000 acres to a trading firm known as the Ohio Company.

The object was ultimate colonization, but its immediate purpose was to engage in an extensive fur trade with Indians.

To that end the company employed Christopher Gist, a fearless woodsman, as its agent and built a magazine and storehouse on the west side of Wills Creek near its junction with the Potomac River. Goods valued at $4,000 were ordered.

In two years the business became so extensive and lucrative the firm erected a second building on the opposite side of the Potomac.

The first market house here was established by legislative enactment in 1795. It stood on Mechanic Street along the banks of Wills Creek.

Thus began an extensive development program.

When the Cumberland Road to the west and the Baltimore Road to the east were completed in 1821, there was a magic touch of new life in the "Queen City of the Alleghenies."

After erupting for 75 days the Italian vocano Stromboli has subsided. Just fresh out of gas?

Cumberland Was Designated Allegany County Seat On Christmas Day 1789

On Christmas Day, 1789 the General Assembly passed an act of legislation which divided Washington County, so that Allegany County would be erected, westward of the present Washington-Allegany County boundary line. Washington County, of which Cumberland had previously been a part, was erected in the historic year 1776.

The first county commissioners, appointed as part of the act, were Andrew Bruce, Even Gwynn and Joseph Cresap.

Action for the new county came as a result of the growth of the region, the increased population which resulted from this natural trading center provided by the junction of the Potomac River and Wills Creek, the importance of Cumberland as a military center, and the vision which later led to the development of innumerable natural resources.

In addition to all these factors, Congress had decreed that all men who had served in the Colonial forces during the Revolutionary War should receive rewards of tracts of land, based upon the rank they held in service. These lots, laid out in 50-acre tracts, and located "west of Fort Cumberland" were designated as "a reward for privates and officers of the Maryland line, according to rank."

Most servicemen of the day staked claims for this land. Some kept it for development, some sold it to traders of the day, and others just hung on to it and it remained in families for generations.

However, this "land rush" did contribute to the growth, the development and the future economy of the region. It contributed to a change of planning and thinking by the pioneers, and they saw the possibility of development.

Ten years after Allegany County had been erected, a report showed that a survey had been completed by Frances Deekens, a surveyor selected for the work. The survey showed that Allegany County had 4,165 lots laid out and 322 families had 636 of them. Most of these had been military lots.

KHS Band Gets Superior Rating At Festival

Unit Ranks Among Best In State

KEYSER — The Keyser High School band, under direction of Nunzie Barbera, has added more laurels to its position among high school bands of the area, by receiving official notification that it received a superior rating at the band festival in Martinsburg last Saturday. This is the first time in six years the local band was entered as a Class A band and received a superior rating.

The band played three numbers, the first, a march, "Champion of Champions," which was a warm-up number, and was not judged. For the required selection, the band played "Scheherazade" which is a Class A number. Judged for tone, the unit received "A"-plus; intonation, "B;" interpretation, "A;" phrasing, "A"-plus; Rhythm, "A"-plus; technique, "A;" fluency, "A"-plus; general effect, "A;" stage deportment, "A;" Instrumentation, "A;" and selection, "A."

The third number, which was the local band's own selection, was an "Apple Valley Overture," and an "A" rating was given on this number.

Approximately 20 bands participated in the festival. This year, instead of a guest service or professional band, a concert was presented by an all-festival band, composed of members of the various bands attending. Five students from Keyser High School who were selected were Rita Barbara, Thomas Boyce, Ronald Franklin, Janice Fisher and Vaughn Messer.

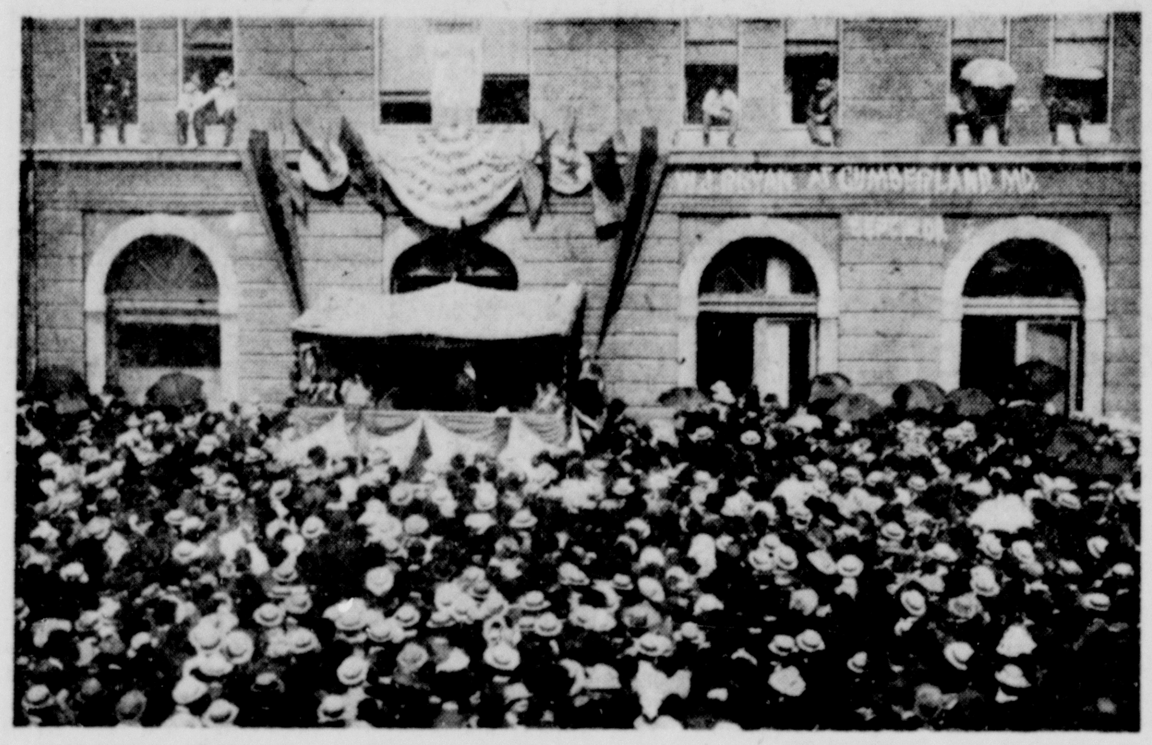
OLD NARROWS FOOT BRIDGE—This old foot bridge took pedestrians from U. S. Route 40 at the entrance to the Narrows up from the streetcar stop over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks to Piedmont Avenue on Wills Mountain. The street car line went from Cumberland, along the national highway, through the Narrows to Frostburg then.



W. J. BRYAN AT CUMBERLAND MD.

SILVER-TONGUED ORATOR—William Jennings Bryan, orator, secretary of state and enemy of alcohol and the gold standard, is barely visible here as a white shirt-front under the canopy when he spoke in Cumberland in 1908. In Cumberland, as everywhere, people thronged to hear the great speaker and sometime presidential candidate. Note listeners sitting on second-story windowsills, holding umbrellas against the September sun.

'Senior Citizens Month'

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP) — A citywide program calling for special consideration of people 60 years of age and older is being planned for the month of May. Mayor Robert F. Wagner will proclaim it "Senior Citizens Month" and a large variety of organizations and groups have already promised their participation.

Ohio Company Was Pioneer Business Of Cumberland

Pioneer "business" in Cumberland dates back to 1749 when the British government awarded a charter and 500,000 acres to a trading firm known as the Ohio Company.

The object was ultimate colonization, but its immediate purpose was to engage in an extensive fur trade with Indians.

To that end the company employed Christopher Gist, a fearless woodsman, as its agent and built a magazine and storehouse on the west side of Wills Creek near its junction with the Potomac River. Goods valued at $4,000 were ordered.

In two years the business became so extensive and lucrative the firm erected a second building on the opposite side of the Potomac.

The first market house here was established by legislative enactment in 1795. It stood on Mechanic Street along the banks of Wills Creek.

Thus began an extensive development program.

When the Cumberland Road to the west and the Baltimore Road to the east were completed in 1821, there was a magic touch of new life in the "Queen City of the Alleghenies."

After erupting for 75 days the Italian vocano Stromboli has subsided. Just fresh out of gas?

Plans Ready For Hardy Co. Dial System

REA Approves First Phase Of Project

MOOREFIELD—Vance Mathias, president of the Hardy Telephone Company, announced that plans for the construction of the dial exchange at Lost River have been approved by officials of the Rural Electrification Administration and the contract will be let this week. The plans were submitted by the L. E. Wooton & Co., consulting engineers of Raleigh, N. C.

In addition to the plans for the dial exchange the details for construction of the lines will be submitted for approval to the REA within 10 days and the contract for the construction of these lines will be let shortly after approval.

Work should start on the government financed county-wide telephone system early in the summer and should be completed by fall, Mathias predicts.

Ralph J. Bean, attorney for the cooperative, said the number of membership applications is sufficient to guarantee the operation of the new telephone system but that several prospective members have not paid $40 equity fee. He urged these members to send a check to Robert L. Baker, treasurer, at Fabius or to Vance Mathias, president, at Mathias.

The telephone lines on the proposed project will follow the present power lines for the most part, it is indicated.

Group Reviews South Fork Flood Plans

FRANKLIN, W. Va.—Plans for an extensive flood control project for the South Fork river in Pendleton and Hardy counties were discussed at a meeting at Moorefield.

A considerable amount of preliminary work has been done by the Army Corps of Engineers which recommended flood control measures for the area. A map was presented showing the approximate location of retaining dams to be constructed in the watershed.

Fourteen of the 20 proposed dams would be constructed in Pendleton County. About one-third of the total drainage area would be behind these structures and it is felt that these dams would impound sufficient run-off to cut the flood flow in the South Fork by one-third.

Moorefield, through the Town Council, is the present sponsor of the flood control project. This body feels that Pendleton and Hardy counties should be joint sponsors.

Two representative farmers from each county were named to explain the plan to the county courts. Names in Pendleton were Olin Adamson and Richard Homan.

Attending the meeting from Pendleton were N. M. Rexrode, George Dyer and Kennie Rexrode, all of Fort Seybert; County Agent John Hamer and Silas Compton, supervisor and Glen H. DePue of the Soil Conservation Service.

A demonstration on "Low Calories from the Sea" was given by Mrs. William Bond and plans were made to attend the homemakers annual spring tour in Moorefield.

July Fourth Air Show Plan Is Completed

Moorefield CAP Sponsors Event

MOOREFIELD—The Moorefield squadron of the Civil Air Patrol held a banquet Wednesday night at the Moose Home for cadets and senior members of the squadron. A total of 54 were present to hear the report on plans for the July 4th Air Show at Moorefield Municipal Airport.

William C. Goetz, commanding officer of the CAP squadron, reported that the US Air Force would have a fly-by of jet planes for the show and that two helicopters would be on the field. A static display of two trucks would also be here. A feature attraction will be a delayed parachute jump from 10,000 feet by Ray Coffman. At 1 p. m. the 167th Fighter Interceptor Squadron will fly by in F-51 interceptors.

Cooperating in the celebration will be the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company with fire apparatus. The Moorefield National Guard unit agreed to assist in traffic direction. The State Road Commission will grade the entrance and exit roads and are lending snow fence to surround the exhibits. P. E. Thrush and Son will have an ambulance on the field and the M. A. Bean Motor Company will have gas trucks, jeeps and a wrecker on the field.

William F. Toohey will act as master of ceremonies and will announce the events. All plane owners within a radius of 300 miles have been invited to attend the fly-in breakfast for visiting pilots and guests.

At the close of the business session at the banquet, two movies were shown, "Civil Air Patrol," depicting a typical CAP unit at the University of Maryland and "Jet Tests," a 30-minute explanatory movie on jets.

Goetz expressed his thanks on behalf of the squadron to Mrs. Harry Harman, Mrs. Freddie Smith and Mrs. M. H. Maxwell for aiding with the banquet and to Dr. M. H. Maxwell and Dr. A. L. Love for their services in examining the cadets.

The cadet drill team in uniform will attend the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester April 27. The cadets have been drilled by State Trooper Don Burner.

Hardy County Voters List On Decrease

MOOREFIELD — The number of registered voters in Hardy County has decreased by 104 since the 1954 elections according to the report tabulated by Clerk R. M. Gamble this week. Democratic registrations increased 132 to 4225 from the 1954 figure of 4093. The Republican registration decreased by 195 to 1533 from the 1954 total of 1728.

Independent or other parties show only 25 registrants this year, down from the 66 figure of the August 1954 total.

One reason for the decline in total registration was the elimination of many voters who from prolonged absence, death or other reasons are no longer eligible to vote in the county.

KHS Band Gets Superior Rating At Festival

Unit Ranks Among Best In State

KEYSER — The Keyser High School band, under direction of Nunzie Barbera, has added more laurels to its position among high school bands of the area, by receiving official notification that it received a superior rating at the band festival in Martinsburg last Saturday. This is the first time in six years the local band was entered as a Class A band and received a superior rating.

The band played three numbers, the first, a march, "Champion of Champions," which was a warm-up number, and was not judged. For the required selection, the band played "Scheherazade" which is a Class A number. Judged for tone, the unit received "A"-plus; intonation, "B;" interpretation, "A;" phrasing, "A"-plus; Rhythm, "A"-plus; technique, "A;" fluency, "A"-plus; general effect, "A;" stage deportment, "A;" Instrumentation, "A;" and selection, "A."

The third number, which was the local band's own selection, was an "Apple Valley Overture," and an "A" rating was given on this number.

Approximately 20 bands participated in the festival. This year, instead of a guest service or professional band, a concert was presented by an all-festival band, composed of members of the various bands attending. Five students from Keyser High School who were selected were Rita Barbara, Thomas Boyce, Ronald Franklin, Janice Fisher and Vaughn Messer.

Plans Ready For Hardy Co. Dial System

REA Approves First Phase Of Project

MOOREFIELD—Vance Mathias, president of the Hardy Telephone Company, announced that plans for the construction of the dial exchange at Lost River have been approved by officials of the Rural Electrification Administration and the contract will be let this week. The plans were submitted by the L. E. Wooton & Co., consulting engineers of Raleigh, N. C.

In addition to the plans for the dial exchange the details for construction of the lines will be submitted for approval to the REA within 10 days and the contract for the construction of these lines will be let shortly after approval.

Work should start on the government financed county-wide telephone system early in the summer and should be completed by fall, Mathias predicts.

Ralph J. Bean, attorney for the cooperative, said the number of membership applications is sufficient to guarantee the operation of the new telephone system but that several prospective members have not paid $40 equity fee. He urged these members to send a check to Robert L. Baker, treasurer, at Fabius or to Vance Mathias, president, at Mathias.

The telephone lines on the proposed project will follow the present power lines for the most part, it is indicated.

Group Reviews South Fork Flood Plans

FRANKLIN, W. Va.—Plans for an extensive flood control project for the South Fork river in Pendleton and Hardy counties were discussed at a meeting at Moorefield.

A considerable amount of preliminary work has been done by the Army Corps of Engineers which recommended flood control measures for the area. A map was presented showing the approximate location of retaining dams to be constructed in the watershed.

Fourteen of the 20 proposed dams would be constructed in Pendleton County. About one-third of the total drainage area would be behind these structures and it is felt that these dams would impound sufficient run-off to cut the flood flow in the South Fork by one-third.

Moorefield, through the Town Council, is the present sponsor of the flood control project. This body feels that Pendleton and Hardy counties should be joint sponsors.

Two representative farmers from each county were named to explain the plan to the county courts. Names in Pendleton were Olin Adamson and Richard Homan.

Attending the meeting from Pendleton were N. M. Rexrode, George Dyer and Kennie Rexrode, all of Fort Seybert; County Agent John Hamer and Silas Compton, supervisor and Glen H. DePue of the Soil Conservation Service.

FROSTBURG—A regular meeting of Shaft Homemakers Club was held a recent evening at the home of Mrs. Robert Cutter, with Mrs. Russell Keister as co-hostess. The meeting was opened by singing the hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today," following the Lord's Prayer and flag salute. Mrs. Raymond Kamauf presided.

Roll call was answered with "What do You Want Emphasized in the 1957 Program." The club recently attended a food demonstration on meal preparation given by Miss Katherine Close at the service department of the Potomac Edison Company. Mrs. Raymond Kamauf received the completed dinner as a prize.

A demonstration on "Low Calories from the Sea" was given by Mrs. William Bond and plans were made to attend the homemakers annual spring tour in Moorefield.

Delegates to the RWSC at College Park were chosen by Mrs. Hugh Kirkwood and Mrs. Robert Cutter. Alternates are Mrs. George Tennant and Mrs. George Wade.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. William Bond, Mrs. James I. Riggleman as cohostess. An auction sale will be held.

Plans Breakfast

Moorefield CAP Sponsors Event

MOOREFIELD—The Moorefield squadron of the Civil Air Patrol held a banquet Wednesday night at the Moose Home for cadets and senior members of the squadron. A total of 54 were present to hear the report on plans for the July 4th Air Show at Moorefield Municipal Airport.

William C. Goetz, commanding officer of the CAP squadron, reported that the US Air Force would have a fly-by of jet planes for the show and that two helicopters would be on the field. A static display of two trucks would also be here. A feature attraction will be a delayed parachute jump from 10,000 feet by Ray Coffman. At 1 p. m. the 167th Fighter Interceptor Squadron will fly by in F-51 interceptors.

Cooperating in the celebration will be the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company with fire apparatus. The Moorefield National Guard unit agreed to assist in traffic direction. The State Road Commission will grade the entrance and exit roads and are lending snow fence eo surround the exhibits. P. E. Thrush and Son will have an ambulance on the field and the M. A. Bean Motor Company will have gas trucks, jeeps and a wrecker on the field.

William F. Toohey will act as master of ceremonies and will announce the events. All plane owners within a radius of 300 miles have been invited to attend the fly-in breakfast for visiting pilots and guests.

At the close of the business session at the banquet, two movies were shown, "Civil Air Patrol," depicting a typical CAP unit at the University of Maryland and "Jet Tests," a 30-minute explanatory movie on jets.

Goetz expressed his thanks on behalf of the squadron to Mrs. Harry Harman, Mrs. Freddie Smith and Mrs. M. H. Maxwell for aiding with the banquet and to Dr. M. H. Maxwell and Dr. A. L. Love for their services in examining the cadets.

The cadet drill team in uniform will attend the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester April 27. The cadets have been drilled by State Trooper Don Burner.

Hardy County Voters List On Decrease

MOOREFIELD — The number of registered voters in Hardy County has decreased by 104 since the 1954 elections according to the report tabulated by Clerk R. M. Gamble this week. Democratic registrations increased 132 to 4225 from the 1954 figure of 4093. The Republican registration decreased by 195 to 1533 from the 1954 total of 1728.

Independent or other parties show only 25 registrants this year, down from the 66 figure of the August 1954 total.

One reason for the decline in total registration was the elimination of many voters who from prolonged absence, death or other reasons are no longer eligible to vote in the county.

Although Adolf Hitler had to wear glasses to read ordinary print, he refused to wear them in public.

Yankees Win Fifth Straight; Washington Defeats Boston

Ford Scores Over Orioles At Baltimore

New York Defeats Palica, 4-2, When Willie Miranda Errs

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP) — An error by shortstop Willie Miranda on a double-play ball opened the the gates for two New York runs, and the Yankees went on to defeat the Baltimore Orioles, 4-2, before 13,753 chilled fans tonight. Gil McDougald homered for the league leadersl, who won their seventh game in eight starts behind the six-hit pitching of Whitey Ford.

Jerry Lumpe scored from second on Miranda's error and Ford moved to second. Hank Bauer followed with a triple to drive in Ford.

Ford, who now has a 13-2 lifetime record over the Orioles, had to put down a ninth inning threat when errors by Andy Carey and Phil Rizzuto put two runners on with one out.

Both runners moved up when rookie pinchhitter Tito Francona grounded out, but Ford ended the game by striking out pinchhitter Tom Gastall, a bonus player.

The Yankees scored two in the fourth off starter and loser Erv Palica when McDougald homered into the right field stands, just inside the line. Two walks and a runscoring single by Bill Skowron followed.

Joseph Beats Milo Savage

NEW ORLEANS, April 25 (AP)—Fancy boxing Charley Joseph of New Orleans took a long stride up the middleweight ladder tonight with a 10-round split decision over slugging Milo Savage of Salt Lake City, Itah. Joseph weighed 159 pounds, Savage 161.

The victory was the most important for the 23-year-old Joseph in his 35 professional fights. It was his 32nd victory against only one loss and two draws.

Savage, second ranked contender for Sugar Ray Robinson's title, waited for an opening that never came.

Joseph, ranked ninth among middleweight contenders, piled up a heavy margin in the early rounds on nifty boxing tactics and repeatedly evaded Savage's vicious rights.

Referee Roland Brown tabbed Joseph the winner, five rounds to four with one even. Judges Eddie Brown and Charles Dabney each had identical cards, 4-3-3 but they differed on the winner. The Associated Press had Joseph ahead five rounds to three with two even.

Capon Bridge Wins PVC Tilt

Scores Third Win Over Romney, 6-3

CAPON BRIDGE, W. Va., April 25—Capon Bridge, behind the four-hit pitching of righthander Bob Lovett, captured its third Potomac Valley Conference triumph with a 6-3 decision over Romney's Pioneers.

Lovett was touched for three of Romney's bingles and all the Pioneer runs in the first inning before settling down to blank the visitors the rest of the way.

Capon Bridge tallied single runs in the first and fourth innings then iced the game with a pair in the fifth and another duo in the sixth.

Bill Davis and John McCauley walked and Ken Miller was hit by a pitch to load the bases for Capon Bridge in the fifth. Then both Davis and McCauley stole home to give the victors their winning margin.

The only extra base hit of the contest was Ed Hartman's triple in the first for Romney. It was the Pioneers' fourth loop loss. The lineups:

Ramos Tames Bosox, 4-1, On Three Hits

Sievers And Jensen Hit Home Runs As Porterfield Loses

BOSTON, April 25 (AP) — Pedro Ramos, mixing a sweeping curve with his fast ball, doused the sputtering Red Sox with a fine three-hitter today as he pitched the Washington Senators to a 4-1 victory over Boston.

An old Boston nemesis in Fenway Park—Roy Sievers — tagged his first home run of the campaign and scored on a wild pitch after walking. But it was Ramos, possessing little more than speed last year, who showed the way.

The 20-year-old righthander who had a 3.88 earned run average with the Senators last season, outpitched veteran Bob Porterfield, who didn't have the stuff to win against his former teammates.

Ramos racked up eight strikeouts including three by Billy Consolo. The performance spelled the fourth straight loss for the Sox who opened the campaign with three straight triumphs.

Sievers was joined in the Washington attack by Jim Lemon, who had two doubles and a walk and scored once.

Trio W.Va. State Racing Group Work Without Pay

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 25 (AP)—The three members of the State Racing Commission decided today to work without pay for the remainder of the fiscal year as part of a solution to a harassing financial dilemma.

At the same time, they cut the salaries of certain track officials and sharply curtailed the agency's budget for traveling expenses as steps toward assurance that scheduled horse racing meetings could be held.

Gov. William C. Marland directed, late in March, the transfer to the commission of $6,860 from his personal contingent fund. At that time, the agency's financial troubles had cast some doubt over operations for the remainder of fiscal 1956.

Today's steps were taken as the commission prepared a schedule of expenditures it must submit to the State Budget Office before bills it already owes, and others to be incurred, can be paid.

Commission figures showed it would have about $7,500 for operating expenses through June 30 after payment of debts already outstanding. The expenditures schedule anticipates a balance of $6.44 at the fiscal year's end.

The racing commissioners themselves normally draw $25 each for each day of racing held in the state. That would mean a normal return of $1,675 each for the remainder of the fiscal year, under ordinary circumstances.

Some 60 days of racing are scheduled at the state's three tracks through June 30, counting all of a meeting which began last Saturday at Wheeling Downs. The commissioners also were not paid for the final six days of the spring meeting at Charles Town, which ended early in March.

Also still unpaid for the last six days of the Charles Town meeting are the state steward, at $75 a day; the state pari-mutuel supervisor, at $50 daily, and the $10-a-day, state-employed license clerk.

Chairman John E. Ambrose of Charles Town, clinging to a hope that additional money might be found from some source, called the reductions "tentative." Member Ralph LePore of Huntington frankly regarded them as final and representing "the only thing we can do."

Haddix Blanks Cubs

ST. LOUIS, April 25 (AP)—Harvey (The Kitten) Haddix, little lefthander of the St. Louis Cardinals, regained his form with a two-hit shutout tonight of the Chicago Cubs 6-0 and became the first Cardinal pitcher this season to complete game.

Fighting Rock Ends Careers

Don Cockell Joins A Growing List

LONDON, April 25 (AP) — Once you've fought "The Rock," chances are you're as good as finished as a prize fighter.

Don Cockell, Britain's tubby heavyweight who was knocked out by heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano last May, is the latest to join the club of men who were finished by the champ.

Cockell didn't fight for four months after the Marciano mauling. When he did venture into a ring he was stopped by Cuban Nino Valdes in three rounds.

Last night Cockell tried again. The British champ wanted to prove he still was the gladiator who fought his way to top. But once again the 27-year-old Briton crashed to defeat. It took less than two rounds for a little-known heavy called Kitione Lave from Tonga to polish off Don.

British sports writers saw the ghost of Marciano behind the Cockell defeat.

"His savage beating by Rocky Marciano had obviously left its mark," wrote Tom Phillips of the Daily Herald. "He was nothing like the man who went nearly nine rounds with Marciano," commented Gerard Walter of the New Chronicle. "Cockell was a leaden-legged caricature of the man who only 11 months ago fought with such gallantry against 'Ruthless' Marciano," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror.

Flaherty Says He Broke Rules

Fight Promoter Tells Of Violating Laws

OAKLAND, Calif., April 25 (AP)—Fight Manager Sid Flaherty, the Mr. Big of northern California boxing, frankly admitted at a California fight investigation today that he consistently violated state regulations.

In a rapid exchange with investigating counsel James Cox, Flaherty admitted he acted as copromoter in many northern California cities, that he received money not called for in the contracts, and that he often had more than the permissible three fighters on a single card.

He also agreed there had been no practical change in the operation of the California Boxing Enterprises between the time he operated it as an individual and its incorporation in 1955.

Flaherty was an exceptional witness at the northern half of the lengthy statewide investigation, where most witnesses professed a failing of memory.

Beall Wallops Flintstone Nine By 12-7 Score

Rogish Is Star In Relief Role

FROSTBURG, April 25 — Beall High's Mountaineers snapped a three - game losing streak and scored their first Bi State Conference victory here today by walloping Flintstone High's Aggies, 12-7.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the winless Aggies.

Coach Melvin Brown's Beall nine hopped off to four runs in the first frame, saw Flintstone battle back to take a 6-5 lead in the third, and then the Mountaineers finished off the visitors with three in the third, and a pair of runs in each the fourth and fifth innings. Ken Lough's double was the big blow of the Aggies' third.

Jim Thompson's triple with two aboard sparked the winning three-run rally for Beall in the third and Jim Rogish, righthanded relief ace, stopped Flintstone in the last four innings to gain the triumph.

Rogish went to the hill after Richards and Folk had given up five runs in the third and halted the Aggies with four hits and a run in the final four innings.

In the only other Bi State encounter scheduled today at Penn Avenue field in Cumberland the contest between Mt. Savage's Braves and the LaSalle Explorers was postponed because of wet grounds.

Yankees Win Fifth Straight; Washington Defeats Boston

New York Defeats Palica, 4-2, When Willie Miranda Errs

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP) — An error by shortstop Willie Miranda on a double-play ball opened the the gates for two New York runs, and the Yankees went on to defeat the Baltimore Orioles, 4-2, before 13,753 chilled fans tonight. Gil McDougald homered for the league leadersl, who won their seventh game in eight starts behind the six-hit pitching of Whitey Ford.

Jerry Lumpe scored from second on Miranda's error and Ford moved to second. Hank Bauer followed with a triple to drive in Ford.

Ford, who now has a 13-2 lifetime record over the Orioles, had to put down a ninth inning threat when errors by Andy Carey and Phil Rizzuto put two runners on with one out.

Both runners moved up when rookie pinchhitter Tito Francona grounded out, but Ford ended the game by striking out pinchhitter Tom Gastall, a bonus player.

The Yankees scored two in the fourth off starter and loser Erv Palica when McDougald homered into the right field stands, just inside the line. Two walks and a runscoring single by Bill Skowron followed.

Joseph Beats Milo Savage

NEW ORLEANS, April 25 (AP)—Fancy boxing Charley Joseph of New Orleans took a long stride up the middleweight ladder tonight with a 10-round split decision over slugging Milo Savage of Salt Lake City, Itah. Joseph weighed 159 pounds, Savage 161.

The victory was the most important for the 23-year-old Joseph in his 35 professional fights. It was his 32nd victory against only one loss and two draws.

Savage, second ranked contender for Sugar Ray Robinson's title, waited for an opening that never came.

Joseph, ranked ninth among middleweight contenders, piled up a heavy margin in the early rounds on nifty boxing tactics and repeatedly evaded Savage's vicious rights.

Referee Roland Brown tabbed Joseph the winner, five rounds to four with one even. Judges Eddie Brown and Charles Dabney each had identical cards, 4-3-3 but they differed on the winner. The Associated Press had Joseph ahead five rounds to three with two even.

CAPON BRIDGE, W. Va., April 25—Capon Bridge, behind the four-hit pitching of righthander Bob Lovett, captured its third Potomac Valley Conference triumph with a 6-3 decision over Romney's Pioneers.

Capon Bridge tallied single runs in the first and fourth innings then iced the game with a pair in the fifth and another duo in the sixth.

Bill Davis and John McCauley walked and Ken Miller was hit by a pitch to load the bases for Capon Bridge in the fifth. Then both Davis and McCauley stole home to give the victors their winning margin.

Ramos Tames Bosox, 4-1, On Three Hits

Sievers And Jensen Hit Home Runs As Porterfield Loses

BOSTON, April 25 (AP) — Pedro Ramos, mixing a sweeping curve with his fast ball, doused the sputtering Red Sox with a fine three-hitter today as he pitched the Washington Senators to a 4-1 victory over Boston.

An old Boston nemesis in Fenway Park—Roy Sievers — tagged his first home run of the campaign and scored on a wild pitch after walking. But it was Ramos, possessing little more than speed last year, who showed the way.

The 20-year-old righthander who had a 3.88 earned run average with the Senators last season, outpitched veteran Bob Porterfield, who didn't have the stuff to win against his former teammates.

Ramos racked up eight strikeouts including three by Billy Consolo. The performance spelled the fourth straight loss for the Sox who opened the campaign with three straight triumphs.

Sievers was joined in the Washington attack by Jim Lemon, who had two doubles and a walk and scored once.

Trio W.Va. State Racing Group Work Without Pay

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 25 (AP)—The three members of the State Racing Commission decided today to work without pay for the remainder of the fiscal year as part of a solution to a harassing financial dilemma.

At the same time, they cut the salaries of certain track officials and sharply curtailed the agency's budget for traveling expenses as steps toward assurance that scheduled horse racing meetings could be held.

Gov. William C. Marland directed, late in March, the transfer to the commission of $6,860 from his personal contingent fund. At that time, the agency's financial troubles had cast some doubt over operations for the remainder of fiscal 1956.

Today's steps were taken as the commission prepared a schedule of expenditures it must submit to the State Budget Office before bills it already owes, and others to be incurred, can be paid.

Commission figures showed it would have about $7,500 for operating expenses through June 30 after payment of debts already outstanding. The expenditures schedule anticipates a balance of $6.44 at the fiscal year's end.

The racing commissioners themselves normally draw $25 each for each day of racing held in the state. That would mean a normal return of $1,675 each for the remainder of the fiscal year, under ordinary circumstances.

Some 60 days of racing are scheduled at the state's three tracks through June 30, counting all of a meeting which began last Saturday at Wheeling Downs. The commissioners also were not paid for the final six days of the spring meeting at Charles Town, which ended early in March.

Also still unpaid for the last six days of the Charles Town meeting are the state steward, at $75 a day; the state pari-mutuel supervisor, at $50 daily, and the $10-a-day, state-employed license clerk.

Chairman John E. Ambrose of Charles Town, clinging to a hope that additional money might be found from some source, called the reductions "tentative." Member Ralph LePore of Huntington frankly regarded them as final and representing "the only thing we can do."

OUR CHAMPS OF 1904—Fifty-two years ago this basketball team from the old Cumberland YMCA was recognized as Tri-State champions. The "Y" in those days was located on Baltimore street on the site now occupied by Peskin's Shoe Store and was the headquarters for all sports, namely, football, basketball, boxing, wrestling and track and field. The high schools did not go in for sports but the Allegany County Academy on Washington street—a small military preparatory school— had a good football team. Among the college grads who played on the YMCA grid teams were J. Philip Roman and Bladen and Lloyd Lowndes. Dr. James A. Naismith originated basketball in 1891 and the above team was one of the earliest formed teams. The players pictured above, left to right, are: FIRST ROW—William L. Radcliffe, YMCA secretary; Russell Hummelshime, George Cromwell, Herman Hast, Charles Ockert, physical director. BACK ROW—L. E. "Red" Van Sant, who is still prominent here as a tennis promoter and player; Rev. William McCurdy and Ellsworth Rosenmerkel. The youngster holding the ball is Garland Powell, now a resident of Florida.

Five Ex-Track Stars Admit Flouting Rules

Accepted Payoffs In Expenses, Cash

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP)—Five former amateur track stars told today in a Life magazine article by Jack Newcombe how they flouted the amateur rules by accepting payoffs in expense money or cash.

"I never ran unless I got my price," Elmore Harris, a 600-yard star from 1945-47 was quoted. "Maybe only a couple of us out of five or six starters were paid. But the promoters knew that without us they didn't have a race.

"After I lost a race in the nationals, the promoter of the next meet said he was cutting my price in half. I protested and said I had lost only two races in recent years. He finally offered me double or nothing to win. I won."

"It Was Practice"

Joe Nowicki, former half-mile collegiate champ at Fordham and later an amateur athletic union official, was quoted as saying, "It was the practice to talk with other runners and find out what they were getting. If the man you were beating got more than you did, you asked for more than next time.

"When the Santee case broke, I thought it was unfair to start enforcing rules that have been waived for years. I know AAU officials who, when they were competing, took just as much as Santee did."

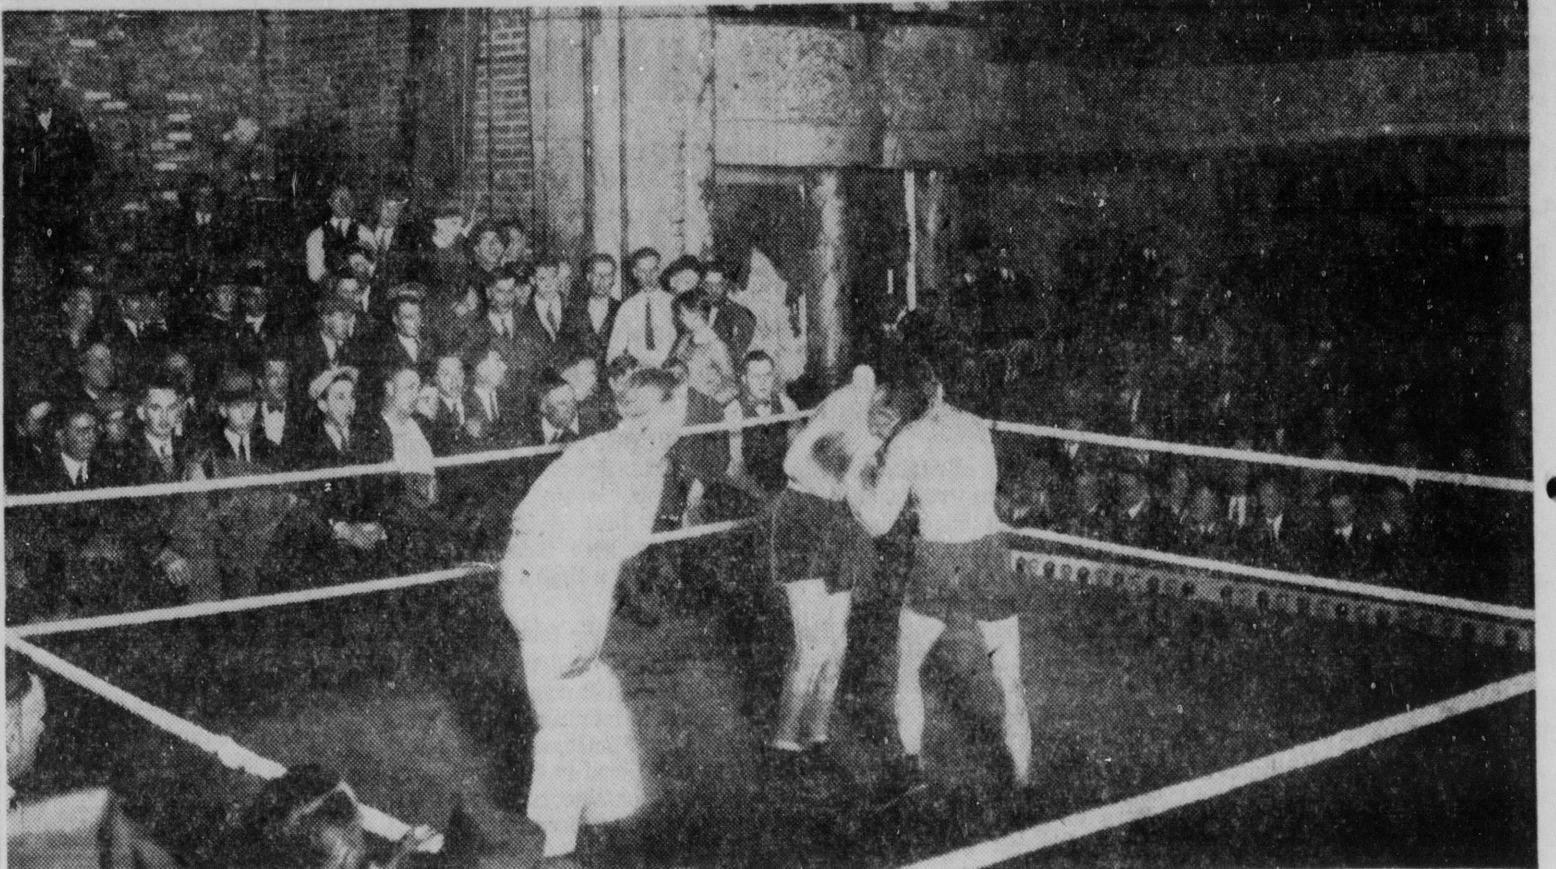
Roscoe Browne, former 1,000-yard national indoor champion, said, "I got paid bonuses, but I know I was as pure in performance as the most rabid amateur. It isn't the extra money that makes a man a pro. It's the extra emphasis on winning, on breaking records and — especially in an Olympic year—on patriostism."

Meets Run For Profit

Jim Herbert, another former track star of the 1937-47 era, told Newcombe, "some meets were run strictly for profit—that's why I demanded 'liberal 'expenses.' Sure, I made more money than AAU rules permit, but I didn't make a living out of it. When I retired, I didn't have five dollars in bank."

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, had branded as "ridiculous" charges by a former Stanford university track star, John T. Fulton, that Ferris had arranged for Fulton to make a trip to Canada that exceeded allowable expense account rules.

Fulton, a half miler at Stanford and captain of the 1946 U.S. track team that toured Europe, wrote to Ferris, "Twice I was guilty of flagrantly violating AAU expense regulations. But although I was at fault I was not nearly as guilty as. . . AAU officials who proposed those violations to me."



FIGHT NIGHT AT THE MARYLAND—John W. Snyder, "Vic" Ricker and Calton L. "Funny" Newnam promoted boxing shows at the Mellinger Brothers' Maryland Theater in the 1920s and early 1930s. Such nationally known fighters as Jackie Clark, Wolf Larsen, Willie Davies, Fay Keiser, Norm Genet, Patsy Perroni and "Chuck" Burns boxed there. Here's a shot taken during a lightweight match between Young Xeny, of Erie, Pa., and Johnny Donnelly, of Uniontown, Pa., who was managed by Newnam. Charlie Short of Baltimore is the referee. In the far corner in shirt sleeves and bow tie is Newnam. In 1935, Perroni gave Joe Louis a great 10-round fight in Detroit. When Snyder promoted shows at the Maryland, bouts also were being staged at the Liberty Theater. Young Xeny, a Greek, whose real name was Xenephon Kakovras, is now a prominent Pittsburgh dentist. Newnam, who is now in business here, promoted the Donnelly-Xeny fight. Ricker now operates the Fort Cumberland Hotel barber shop. Snyder died in 1949.

Doug Sanders Defeated By Howard Everitt

North-South Medalist Loses By 3 And 2

PINEHURST, N. C., April 25 (AP)—Medalist Doug Sanders finally was cooled off today and the older heads took charge of the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament.

Surviving two rounds to gain the quarterfinals were Billy Joe Patton, 1954 winner; Bill Campbell and Frank Strafaci, each a two-time North-South champion; Dave Smith, Bill Hyndman, Hillman Robbins, Dr. Ted Lenczyk and Jake Howard, 20-year-old University of Georgia junior from Augusta, Ga.

Was 11 Under Par

Sanders, who was 11 under par in the qualifying round and his first match play test, ran into Howard Everitt, scrap metal company representative from Northfield, N. J., and the Jerseyite scrapped Sanders' title hopes with a decisive 3 and 2 second round victory in the morning. Everitt shot par golf and lost only one hole to the Miami, Fla., youngster who had established himself as a favorite to go all the way.

But Everitt bowed out in the afternoon third round test against Strafaci in a 19-hole duel. Strafaci, from Garden City, N. Y., won the 16th to get even and parred the extra hole to take a match in which both men squandered many opportunities.

Strafaci's opponent tomorrow will be Jake Howard, a two handicap player, who surprised with his 5 and 3 rout of Jim Tom Blair of Jefferson City, Mo., following a 3 and 2 morning conquest of Larry Dana of Bradford, Pa.

Smith Wins 3 And 1

Big Dave Smith, 240-pound, 6-5 automobile dealer from Gastonia, N. C., who was medalist and semi-finalist last year, struggled through a bogie-filled morning match in which he won from William Chapin of Rochester, N. Y., 3 and 1, after trailing by two when he turned in 43, seven over par for the 7,000-yard No. 2 course of the country club. In the afternoon Dave won an even tougher one, 1 up from Eddie Merrins of Meridien, Miss.

Hyndman, of Abington, Pa., runnerup to Harvie Ward in the National Amateur last summer, followed up a 2 up morning victory over Don Weiland of Phoenixville, Pa., by trimming 21-year-old Wayne Jackson of Hampton, Va., 5 and 4. The 5-4 Jackson had ousted 1954 runnerup Alex Welsh of Rockford, Ill., 3 and 2, in the second round. Smith and Hyndman meet in the quarterfinals.

Campbell Cops Pair

Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., had a 1 up morning struggle with John Ward of Fayetteville, N. Y., and then played one under par golf to stop Ben Goodes, Reidsville, N. C., veteran 3 and 2.

Campbell plays Hillman Robbins of Memphis next. Robbins, 1954 national collegiate champion, had the day's shortest victory route. In the morning he was one over in a 4 and 3 conquest of Frank Souchak of Pittsburgh and he followed that with a 5 and 4 defeat of Raymond Pittman, three handicapper from Fayetteville, N.C.

In other action today, Ben Goodes, Reidsville, N. C., defeated Aulick Burke, Bristol, Va., 5 and 4.

The New York Yankees have beaten Bob Feller of Cleveland 37 times. He has beaten them 30 times, through 1955.

Tebell Quits Baseball

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., (AP)—Gus K. Tebell has stepped down as University of Virginia baseball coach after a quarter of a century. As Cavalier athletic director, Tebell has turned the job over to Evan (Bus) Male, once a star on Tebell's finest teams.

Tebell singles out the 1940 team as his greatest. "We finished with a 19-4 record that year," Tebell says, "and most of those players became professionals."

Fighting Rock Ends Careers

Don Cockell Joins A Growing List

LONDON, April 25 (AP) — Once you've fought "The Rock," chances are you're as good as finished as a prize fighter.

Don Cockell, Britain's tubby heavyweight who was knocked out by heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano last May, is the latest to join the club of men who were finished by the champ.

Cockell didn't fight for four months after the Marciano mauling. When he did venture into a ring he was stopped by Cuban Nino Valdes in three rounds.

Last night Cockell tried again. The British champ wanted to prove he still was the gladiator who fought his way to top. But once again the 27-year-old Briton crashed to defeat. It took less than two rounds for a little-known heavy called Kitione Lave from Tonga to polish off Don.

British sports writers saw the ghost of Marciano behind the Cockell defeat.

"His savage beating by Rocky Marciano had obviously left its mark," wrote Tom Phillips of the Daily Herald. "He was nothing like the man who went nearly nine rounds with Marciano," commented Gerard Walter of the New Chronicle. "Cockell was a leaden-legged caricature of the man who only 11 months ago fought with such gallantry against 'Ruthless' Marciano," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror.

Flaherty Says He Broke Rules

Fight Promoter Tells Of Violating Laws

OAKLAND, Calif., April 25 (AP)—Fight Manager Sid Flaherty, the Mr. Big of northern California boxing, frankly admitted at a California fight investigation today that he consistently violated state regulations.

In a rapid exchange with investigating counsel James Cox, Flaherty admitted he acted as co-promoter in many northern California cities, that he received money not called for in the contracts, and that he often had more than the permissible three fighters on a single card.

He also agreed there had been no practical change in the operation of the California Boxing Enterprises between the time he operated it as an individual and its incorporation in 1955.

Flaherty was an exceptional witness at the northern half of the lengthy statewide investigation, where most witnesses professed a failing of memory.

Beall Wallops Flintstone Nine By 12-7 Score

Rogish Is Star In Relief Role

FROSTBURG, April 25 — Beall High's Mountaineers snapped a three-game losing streak and scored their first Bi State Conference victory here today by walloping Flintstone High's Aggies, 12-7.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the winless Aggies.

Coach Melvin Brown's Beall nine hopped off to four runs in the first frame, saw Flintstone battle back to take a 6-5 lead in the third, and then the Mountaineers finished off the visitors with three in the third, and a pair of runs in each the fourth and fifth innings. Ken Lough's double was the big blow of the Aggies' third.

Jim Thompson's triple with two aboard sparked the winning three-run rally for Beall in the third and Jim Rogish, righthanded relief ace, stopped Flintstone in the last four innings to gain the triumph.

Rogish went to the hill after Richards and Folk had given up five runs in the third and halted the Aggies with four hits and a run in the final four innings.

In the only other Bi State encounter scheduled today at Penn Avenue field in Cumberland the contest between Mt. Savage's Braves and the LaSalle Explorers was postponed because of wet grounds.

Brother Thomas, LaSalle athletic director, said the game had been rescheduled for Wednesday, May 2, at the Penn Avenue field at 4 p. m. The lineups:

HELPED SET ALL-TIME MARK—What Allegany county basketball team holds the record for consecutive wins? Why Central High School, Lonaconing, of course. They won 65 in a row in three seasons, 1922, 1923 and 1924. Name the girl who hung up the all-time scoring record for a single game? Marie Boyd (now Mrs. Benjamin J. Eickler, Rutherford, N. J.) of those Central teams scored 156 points, Feb. 25, 1924, as CHS clobbered Ursuline Academy, 162 to 3. Above is the Central team, W.M.I. League champions of 1922-23, that figured in the record string of victories. Left to right are: FRONT ROW—Helen Danahey, Annie Lauder, now of Holland, Mich.; Mildred Clark and Esther Smith. BACK ROW—Dr. Henry Hodgson, coach; Josephine Waddell, Mary Moody, physical education teacher; Marie Boyd and Prof. Arthur F. Smith, principal. Central's long win string was snapped by Beall in a W.M.I. League championship playoff game by Beall High here in 1924. The score was 36-35.

IZAAK WALTONS ON OUTING—All dressed up in their Sunday finery, members of the Queen City Fishing Club take an outing on a canal boat at the Western Maryland Station. When the photo was taken in 1908, dues in the club were 30 cents a month.

Yanks Play Doesn't Please Ole Case Despite Wins

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP) — The New York Yankees had just taken three straight from the Boston Red Sox, making it five victories in six starts, so it might be imagined Casey Stengel would be quite pleased, if not tickled pink.

"The Red Sox didn't play the game they can," he said, "and they didn't have the big fella."

The Yankee at the moment had averaged nine and one-third runs a game, and had hit 11 home runs.

"We been lucky our injuries didn't hurt us," Casey said. "We could be unlucky some time and have injuries cost us games."

"We been ragged in the infield," Stengel grumbled. "That could give us trouble."

In sweeping the first series with the Red Sox the Yankees were beating a team considered by many as the team they'll have to beat to repeat as American League champions.

"Aside from them, Washington is the only team we've faced," the cheerful manager suggested. "Could be some of others in the league have been underrated."

Well, it seems the master-mind of the Yankees has joined the knock - down - the - champion club. Just knock 'em down, not break 'em up.

A shrewd psychologist, he knows his athletes can read, and that they have been reading a lot about their prowess. He also knows that nothing is more dangerous to a group of star performers than the smug idea that all they have to do to win games is to show up.

So if nobody else will do it, Casey is going to point out to them, indirectly, that no matter what they read they still aren't the greatest assembly of athletes since the last Olympic games.

Umpires Assigned

Umpires for this Sunday's Pen Mar Baseball League games have been assigned by Kenneth Grimes, umpire-in-chief. They are:

Mt. Savage at Centreville — George Schoenadel and Joe Geatz.

Hyndman at Wellersburg—Chick Snider and Blaine McKenzie.

Barrelville at Flintstone — Russ Minnicks and George Geatz.

Grantsville at Zihlman — Cecil Warnick and Moose Arnone.

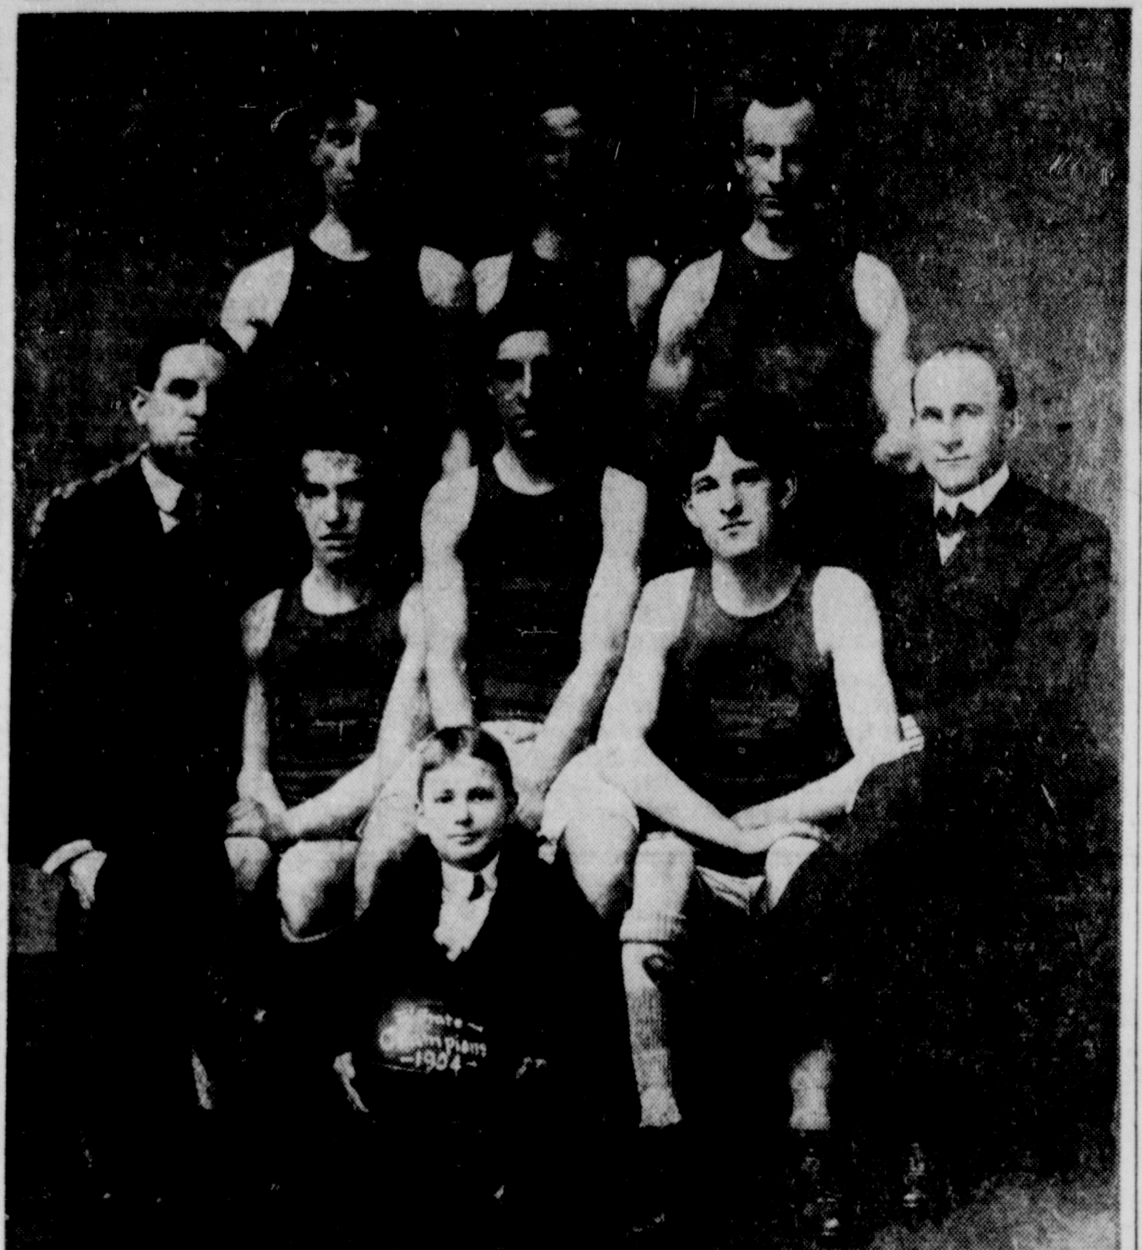
129 BALTIMORE ST.



OUR CHAMPS OF 1904—Fifty-two years ago this basketball team from the old Cumberland YMCA was recognized as Tri-State champions. The "Y" in those days was located on Baltimore street on the site now occupied by Peskin's Shoe Store and was the headquarters for all sports, namely, football, basketball, boxing, wrestling and track and field. The high schools did not go in for sports but the Allegany County Academy on Washington street—a small military preparatory school— had a good football team. Among the college grads who played on the YMCA grid teams were J. Philip Roman and Bladen and Lloyd Lowndes. Dr. James A. Naismith originated basketball in 1891 and the above team was one of the earliest formed teams. The players pictured above, left to right, are: FIRST ROW—William L. Radcliffe, YMCA secretary; Russell Hummelshime, George Cromwell, Herman Hast, Charles Ockert, physical director. BACK ROW—L. E. "Red" Van Sant, who is still prominent here as a tennis promoter and player; Rev. William McCurdy and Ellsworth Rosenmerkel. The youngster holding the ball is Garland Powell, now a resident of Florida.

Five Ex-Track Stars Admit Flouting Rules

Accepted Payoffs In Expenses, Cash

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP)—Five former amateur track stars told today in a Life magazine article by Jack Newcombe how they flouted the amateur rules by accepting payoffs in expense money or cash.

"I never ran unless I got my price," Elmore Harris, a 600-yard star from 1945-47 was quoted. "Maybe only a couple of us out of five or six starters were paid. But the promoters knew that without us they didn't have a race.

"After I lost a race in the nationals, the promoter of the next meet said he was cutting my price in half. I protested and said I had lost only two races in recent years. He finally offered me double or nothing to win. I won."

"It Was Practice"

Joe Nowicki, former half-mile collegiate champ at Fordham and later an amateur athletic union official, was quoted as saying, "It was the practice to talk with other runners and find out what they were getting. If the man you were beating got more than you did, you asked for more than next time.

"When the Santee case broke, I thought it was unfair to start enforcing rules that have been waived for years. I know AAU officials who, when they were competing, took just as much as Santee did."

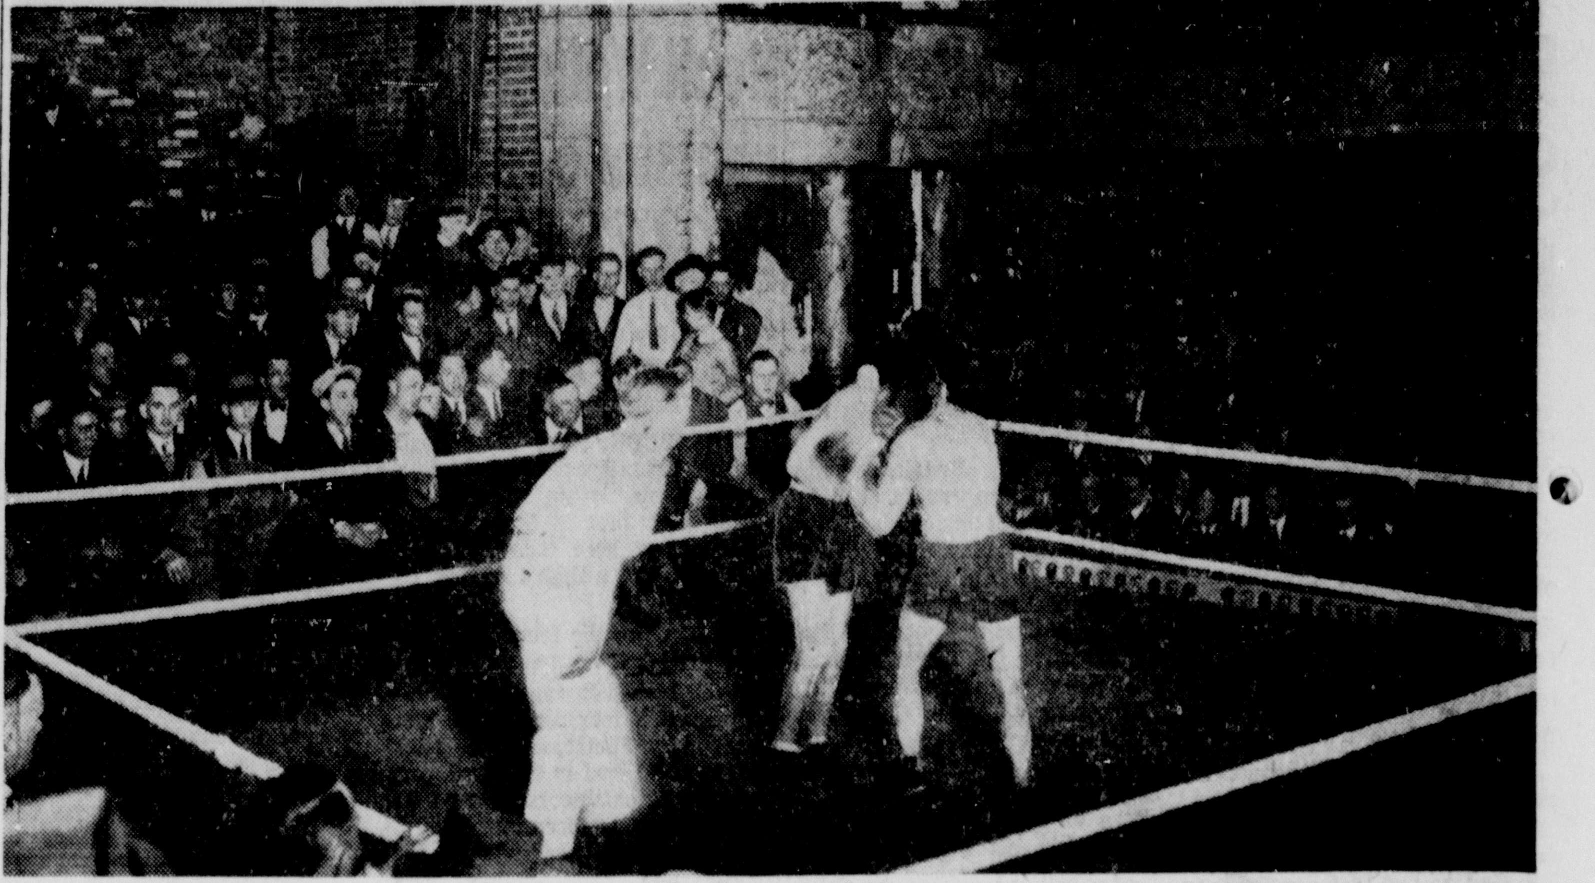
Roscoe Browne, former 1,000-yard national indoor champion, said, "I got paid bonuses, but I know I was as pure in performance as the most rabid amateur. It isn't the extra money that makes a man a pro. It's the extra emphasis on winning, on breaking records and — especially in an Olympic year—on patriostism."

Meets Run For Profit

Jim Herbert, another former track star of the 1937-47 era, told Newcombe, "some meets were run strictly for profit—that's why I demanded 'liberal 'expenses.' Sure, I made more money than AAU rules permit, but I didn't make a living out of it. When I retired, I didn't have five dollars in bank."

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, had branded as "ridiculous" charges by a former Stanford university track star, John T. Fulton, that Ferris had arranged for Fulton to make a trip to Canada that exceeded allowable expense account rules.

Fulton, a half miler at Stanford and captain of the 1946 U.S. track team that toured Europe, wrote to Ferris, "Twice I was guilty of flagrantly violating AAU expense regulations. But although I was at fault I was not nearly as guilty as. . . AAU officials who proposed those violations to me."



FIGHT NIGHT AT THE MARYLAND—John W. Snyder, "Vic" Ricker and Calton L. "Funny" Newnam promoted boxing shows at the Mellinger Brothers' Maryland Theater in the 1920s and early 1930s. Such nationally known fighters as Jackie Clark, Wolf Larsen, Willie Davies, Fay Keiser, Norm Genet, Patsy Perroni and "Chuck" Burns boxed there. Here's a shot taken during a lightweight match between Young Xeny, of Erie, Pa., and Johnny Donnelly, of Uniontown, Pa., who was managed by Newnam. Charlie Short of Baltimore is the referee. In the far corner in shirt sleeves and bow tie is Newnam. In 1935, Perroni gave Joe Louis a great 10-round fight in Detroit. When Snyder promoted shows at the Maryland, bouts also were being staged at the Liberty Theater. Young Xeny, a Greek, whose real name was Xenephon Kakovras, is now a prominent Pittsburgh dentist. Newnam, who is now in business here, promoted the Donnelly-Xeny fight. Ricker now operates the Fort Cumberland Hotel barber shop. Snyder died in 1949.

Doug Sanders Defeated By Howard Everitt

North-South Medalist Loses By 3 And 2

PINEHURST, N. C., April 25 (AP)—Medalist Doug Sanders finally was cooled off today and the older heads took charge of the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament.

Surviving two rounds to gain the quarterfinals were Billy Joe Patton, 1954 winner; Bill Campbell and Frank Strafaci, each a two-time North-South champion; Dave Smith, Bill Hyndman, Hillman Robbins, Dr. Ted Lenczyk and Jake Howard, 20-year-old University of Georgia junior from Augusta, Ga.

Was 11 Under Par

Sanders, who was 11 under par in the qualifying round and his first match play test, ran into Howard Everitt, scrap metal company representative from Northfield, N. J., and the Jerseyite scrapped Sanders' title hopes with a decisive 3 and 2 second round victory in the morning. Everitt shot par golf and lost only one hole to the Miami, Fla., youngster who had established himself as a favorite to go all the way.

But Everitt bowed out in the afternoon third round test against Strafaci in a 19-hole duel. Strafaci, from Garden City, N. Y., won the 16th to get even and parred the extra hole to take a match in which both men squandered many opportunities.

Strafaci's opponent tomorrow will be Jake Howard, a two handicap player, who surprised with his 5 and 3 rout of Jim Tom Blair of Jefferson City, Mo., following a 3 and 2 morning conquest of Larry Dana of Bradford, Pa.

Smith Wins 3 And 1

Big Dave Smith, 240-pound, 6-5 automobile dealer from Gastonia, N. C., who was medalist and semifinalist last year, struggled through a bogie-filled morning match in which he won from William Chapin of Rochester, N. Y., 3 and 1, after trailing by two when he turned in 43, seven over par for the 7,000-yard No. 2 course of the country club. In the afternoon Dave won an even tougher one, 1 up from Eddie Merrins of Meridien, Miss.

Hyndman, of Abington, Pa., runnerup to Harvie Ward in the National Amateur last summer, followed up a 2 up morning victory over Don Weiland of Phoenixville, Pa., by trimming 21-year-old Wayne Jackson of Hampton, Va., 5 and 4. The 5-4 Jackson had ousted 1954 runnerup Alex Welsh of Rockford, Ill., 3 and 2, in the second round. Smith and Hyndman meet in the quarterfinals.

Campbell Cops Pair

Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., had a 1 up morning struggle with John Ward of Fayetteville, N. Y., and then played one under par golf to stop Ben Goodes, Reidsville, N. C., veteran 3 and 2.

Campbell plays Hillman Robbins of Memphis next. Robbins, 1954 national collegiate champion, had the day's shortest victory route. In the morning he was one over in a 4 and 3 conquest of Frank Souchak of Pittsburgh and he followed that with a 5 and 4 defeat of Raymond Pittman, three handicapper from Fayetteville, N.C.

In other action today, Ben Goodes, Reidsville, N. C., defeated Aulick Burke, Bristol, Va., 5 and 4.

The New York Yankees have beaten Bob Feller of Cleveland 37 times. He has beaten them 30 times, through 1955.

GOING BACK 51 YEARS—In 1910 Cumberland adopted its present commission form of government and George G. Young was elected first mayor under the new system. Five years before that, however, Young played an altogether different role—that as head of the Cumberland Baseball Association team of the Cumberland and Georges Creek League, which played its games on the west side near the Potomac river. Young is the gentleman sporting the derby in the above picture. Piedmont beat out Cumberland for the title in a close race in 1905 but the "oldtimers" still around haven't forgotten those pitching duels between "Slats" Reeder, of Cumberland, and Nick Maddox. The latter went with Pittsburgh, tossed a no-run, no-hit game in the majors and won a World Series game in 1909 from Detroit. Cumberland won 47 games and lost 32 in 1905. The locals opened the season April 20 and lost to the famed Baltimore Orioles, 8-5. Reeder pitched that game and Harry Tate was the catcher. Hughie Tate, uncle of John J. Long, Cumberland's present finance commissioner, was Cumberland's playing manager and later was with the Washington Senators. He now resides at Greenville, Pa. It was impossible to obtain identification of players.

HELPED SET ALL-TIME MARK—What Allegany county basketball team holds the record for consecutive wins? Why Central High School, Lonaconing, of course. They won 65 in a row in three seasons, 1922, 1923 and 1924. Name the girl who hung up the all-time scoring record for a single game? Marie Boyd (now Mrs. Benjamin J. Eickler, Rutherford, N. J.) of those Central teams scored 156 points, Feb. 25, 1924, as CHS clobbered Ursuline Academy, 162 to 3. Above is the Central team, W.M.I. League champions of 1922-23, that figured in the record string of victories. Left to right are: FRONT ROW—Helen Danahey, Annie Lauder, now of Holland, Mich.; Mildred Clark and Esther Smith. BACK ROW—Dr. Henry Hodgson, coach; Josephine Waddell, Mary Moody, physical education teacher; Marie Boyd and Prof. Arthur F. Smith, principal. Central's long win string was snapped by Beall in a W.M.I. League championship playoff game by Beall High here in 1924. The score was 36-35.

IZAAK WALTONS ON OUTING—All dressed up in their Sunday finery, members of the Queen City Fishing Club take an outing on a canal boat at the Western Maryland Station. When the photo was taken in 1908, dues in the club were 30 cents a month.

Yanks Play Doesn't Please Ole Case Despite Wins

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP) — The New York Yankees had just taken three straight from the Boston Red Sox, making it five victories in six starts, so it might be imagined Casey Stengel would be quite pleased, if not tickled pink.

"The Red Sox didn't play the game they can," he said, "and they didn't have the big fella."

The Yankee at the moment had averaged nine and one-third runs a game, and had hit 11 home runs.

"We been lucky our injuries didn't hurt us," Casey said. "We could be unlucky some time and have injuries cost us games."

"We been ragged in the infield," Stengel grumbled. "That could give us trouble."

In sweeping the first series with the Red Sox the Yankees were beating a team considered by many as the team they'll have to beat to repeat as American League champions.

"Aside from them, Washington is the only team we've faced," the cheerful manager suggested. "Could be some of others in the league have been underrated."

Well, it seems the master-mind of the Yankees has joined the knock - down - the - champion club. Just knock 'em down, not break 'em up.

A shrewd psychologist, he knows his athletes can read, and that they have been reading a lot about their prowess. He also knows that nothing is more dangerous to a group of star performers than the smug idea that all they have to do to win games is to show up.

So if nobody else will do it, Casey is going to point out to them, indirectly, that no matter what they read they still aren't the greatest assembly of athletes since the last Olympic games.

Umpires Assigned

THE LITTLE GIANTS OF SOCCER—Barton High School is just a memory but soccer teams from that little up-creek school were the toast of the sports world 30 years ago when they rolled over everything in the state to win three successive titles. The 1923 eleven was the first Allegany County soccer team to win a state championship. The 1924 teams was a repeater and the 1925 aggregation also went all the way, disregarding the size and reputation of opposing schools. Benny Artigiani, of Baltimore, now a scout for the New York Yankees, coached all three state championship teams at Barton. Pictured above is one of the most powerful Barton teams, shown at Patterson Park, Baltimore, after beating Danton High in the state finals. The squad, left to right: FRONT ROW—Kermit Longridge, Dave Thomas, Ernie Schramm, Karl Schramm, Vernon O'Neil and Dave Smith. BACK ROW—Thomas Chappell, Clarence Llewellyn, Wilbur McDonald, Harrison Schramm, Emerson Symons, Courtney Andrews and Coach Artigiani.

Darling Daddy Captures First In Anacostia

Cops Laurel Purse In 3-Horse Finish

LAUREL, Md., April 25 (AP) — Nailing down his victory in the very last stride of the Anacostia Purse here today, Darling Daddy won by a head from Girl Crazy in a tight three-horse finish.

Bea Marony, third horse to finish in the mile and a sixteenth race, was beaten two heads while outfinishing Parlo Pink by three-quarters of a length.

Darling Daddy, owned by Gerald Moore, posted a $28.60 mutuel while giving Jockey Eldon Nelson his second score of the afternoon.

Mrs. Colin MacLeod's Chadail appeared to have the race won while leading into the stretch but he stopped miserably in the last furlong and wound up fifth.

Nelson's earlier score was with Bryan Webb's Lustralice, length and a half victor over Bail Out in the fifth race. Lusterlice was the $6.80 for $2 favorite.

Bobby Martin also brought home two winners on the card, scoring with Pomposity in the second and Kevin Boy in the third. Both horses are trained by Bernard P. Bond.

Pomposity, $5.20 for $2 choice, completed a $33.60 daily double (Nos. 10 and 12) which was started by A. P. Bovello's Folderol, $10.20 for $2 winner of the opener.

Prophet's Bell Takes Feature

Wins Rosedale Stakes At Jamaica Track

JAMAICA, N. Y., April 25 (AP) — Reginald N. Webster's Prophets Bell was an easy victor in the 4th running of the $16,725 Rosedale Stakes at Jamaica Race Track today.

The daughter of Prophets Thumb-Two Bells, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, who was racking up his third victory of the day, dashed home by four and a half lengths in the five furlong spin for 2-year-old fillies.

Alan W. Vaughan's Anita V., who led to the eighth pole, took the place by three quarters of a length over John H. Clark's Dotty Bishop, who beat her stablemate, Memo, by a similar distance. The time was a moderate 1:00 2-5.

Heavy favorite with the crowd of 21,261, Prophets Bell returned mutuels of $3.80, $4.50 and $2.10. Anita V. was $11.70 and $2.10 and Dotty Bishop $2.10 to show. The unusual mutuel payoff resulted from the heavy wagering placed on the Clark entry.

Prophets Bell earned a net purse of $11,300 in annexing her second victory in as many starts. She previously won a maiden race at Bowie this spring.

Baseball Magnates Meet In Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, April 25 (UP)—Representatives of the major and minor leagues will meet in Cincinnati tomorrow to consider extension of their working agreement which will expire Jan. 12, 1957.

Baseball Commissioner Ford C. Frick called the meeting of the major-minor rules committee. He arrived from New York City today, but was not available immediately for comment.

Charles M. Segar, secretary-treasurer of baseball, said owners of both major and minor leagues have suggestions for changes. He declined to name any of them, however.

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons and seven other trainers of Preakness winners will be honored by Pimlico on May 18, the day before this year's running of the classic for 3-year-olds.

Pimlico previously had announced it will stage a $10,000 race named for Fitzsimmons, trainer of last year's Preakness winner, Nashua, that day.

It reported today the seven other races on May 18 will be named for other trainers who sent out winners of the middle leg of the Triple Crown.

They are Max Hirsch, trainer of Assault in 1946, Ben Jones, who saddled Whirlaway in 1941, Jimmy Jones, handler of Citation in 1948, Preston M. Burch, with Bold in 1951, John M. Gaver, winner of the 1949 Preakness with Capot, Bill Winfrey, conditioner of Native Dancer in 1953 and Harry Trostek who sent out Hasty Road in 1954.

GOING BACK 51 YEARS—In 1910 Cumberland adopted its present commission form of government and George G. Young was elected first mayor under the new system. Five years before that, however, Young played an altogether different role—that as head of the Cumberland Baseball Association team of the Cumberland and Georges Creek League, which played its games on the west side near the Potomac river. Young is the gentleman sporting the derby in the above picture. Piedmont beat out Cumberland for the title in a close race in 1905 but the "oldtimers"still around haven't forgotten those pitching duels between "Slats" Reeder, of Cumberland, and Nick Maddox. The latter went with Pittsburgh, tossed a no-run, no-hit game in the majors and won a World Series game in 1909 from Detroit. Cumberland won 47 games and lost 32 in 1905. The locals opened the season April 20 and lost to the famed Baltimore Orioles, 8-5. Reeder pitched that game and Harry Tate was the catcher. Hughie Tate, uncle of John J. Long, Cumberland's present finance commissioner, was Cumberland's playing manager and later was with the Washington Senators. He now resides at Greenville, Pa. It was impossible to obtain identification of players.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, April 25 (INS)—It will be Howard Keel opposite Doris Day in "Pajama Game." Howard and Doris blending their golden pipes in the Broadway musical, for which Warners are said to have paid a hot million dollars, should be a treat for the fans of musicals. There are also some good emoting moments for both in the sewing machine opus.

Already announced for the picture is Carol Haney to play the part she originated in the Broadway show and which jumped her to stardom overnight.

Doris likes the music in "Pajama Game" so much she drives around with the album playing the tunes on her car phonograph.

Ursula Thiess tells me that she expects to take her examination for American citizenship in September. She and Bob Taylor go to San Francisco for the opening of "Bandido," her new picture. I believe they wanted her to go out on tour, but she isn't eager to leave Bob and the baby. She says the company has been so kind to her she's happy to make appearances near home.

Amazing thing about Ursula's son by a previous marriage is that although he's been here less than a year, he's learned to speak English perfectly. As for Bob's nine-months-old son, he ain't talkin'—but he's a darling and a beauty.

Last December Bette Davis and Paul Henreid took an option on "The Stubborn Wood," a controversial novel by Emily Harvin. They have now exercised the option and have bought the book.

Bette, who is at her home in Maine, has been talking long distance to Paul and has agreed to star in the picture, while he will direct it and another leading man will be chosen to play opposite Bette.

Seems more than likely that "Stubborn Wood" will be released through Republic, for whom Henreid is doing a very successful job of directing.

Against her doctor's orders, Marilyn Monroe is back at work on "Bus Stop." Dr. Nathan Headley said she still has a bad cough and is in no condition to work, but when she found the company would have to close down if she didn't report, she insisted on returning.

The set is closed down tighter than a drum. A protective ring has been thrown around Marilyn to aid her in every way possible to conserve her strength, and a nurse is with her.

There were no interviews, visiting reporters or even press people from the studio today. She had her luncheon in her dressing room and about the only visitor she had was Milton Greene.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Dick Haymes, looking not at all sad, holding hands with Jackie Laughery at the Encore the other night and later at Zardi's Jazzland.

The Spanish food isn't agreeing with Cary Grant. He's been ill with stomach trouble ever since starting "The Pride and the Passion" in Madrid.

Spencer Tracy dropped 17 pounds before starting "Old Man and the Sea" in Havana today.

Rock Hudson says that if he and Phyllis have children he'll have his name legally changed from Fitzgerald to Hudson so the offspring would bear his best known moniker.

I'm really looking forward to Orry-Kelly's private showing of his new paintings on May 3. He paints pictures as well as he designs clothes and vice versa.

Sympathy goes to Comedian Bert Roach on the death of his mother, 82-year-old Mrs. Jennie Smith, following an injury suffered in a fall.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Celanese Notes 1955 As Year Of Progress

Celanese Corporation of America in its annual report to employes reported 1955 was a year of definite progress with textile sales volume higher than any year since 1951 although price instability in the market kept profit margins low.

The company said the employes' share of the 1955 income dollar was 34 cents, second highest claim against earnings. The largest share, 43 cents, went for materials, fuel, supplies, services, state and local taxes.

Net sales were up 20 per cent over 1954 and amounted to $177,502,026 compared to $147,606,550. Net income, after federal taxes and including tax refunds of $4,082,268, amounted to $15,303,268. Net income for 1954 after federal taxes was $6,590,268.

Actual dollar payments for employes' wages, salaries and other benefits last year totaled $61,884,923 compared to $54,146,347 the previous year.

Employment increased. The company had 13,460 employes at the end of 1955 compared to 12,406 at the end of 1954. Total wages and salaries, including those engaged in construction work, amounted to $57,772,428 compared to $50,515,680 the previous year.

Management and employe relations continued on a stable basis with 11 contracts and two wage reopenings negotiated. Wages, the company said, were maintained in line with industry pattern applicable to its operations. The group insurance program was expanded and accident and sickness benefits increased.

LaVale Opens Drive For Street Signs

A committee of the LaVale Civic Improvement Association is making excellent progress in the effort to provide street signs and house numbers for that growing suburb.

Attending a planning meeting of the committee Monday night in the LaVale Fire Hall were Lloyd Buchanan, chairman; Bruce Long, John J. Rowan, William Durland and George Carney, and Walter N. Hedrick, newly elected civic improvement association president.

It was decided that residents will be contacted by mail and later by personal canvass for their contribution to this community project.

Buchanan pointed out that the U.S. Post Office Department has given the authority for the establishment of service comparable to Cumberland's, once street signs are erected and houses numbered.

Presently there are four rural routes or parts of them serving LaVale, Routes 1, 5, 6 and 7, from the Cumberland Post Office. This is in addition to LaVale Post Office, which, because of its increased volume of mail, has been classed for the past several years as a second class post office.

The committee pointed out that a new post office building is to be constructed in the future in LaVale.

It was decided that the campaign will get underway the week of May 15. Based on latest census figures of the LaVale Sanitary Commission, the cost of the street signs will amount only to $2 per house, Buchanan told the committee.

THE LITTLE GIANTS OF SOCCER—Barton High School is just a memory but soccer teams from that little up-creek school were the toast of the sports world 30 years ago when they rolled over everything in the state to win three successive titles. The 1923 eleven was the first Allegany County soccer team to win a state championship. The 1924 teams was a repeater and the 1925 aggregation also went all the way, disregarding the size and reputation of opposing schools. Benny Artigiani, of Baltimore, now a scout for the New York Yankees, coached all three state championship teams at Barton. Pictured above is one of the most powerful Barton teams, shown at Patterson Park, Baltimore, after beating Danton High in the state finals. The squad, left to right: FRONT ROW—Kermit Longridge, Dave Thomas, Ernie Schramm, Karl Schramm, Vernon O'Neil and Dave Smith. BACK ROW—Thomas Chappell, Clarence Llewellyn, Wilbur McDonald, Harrison Schramm, Emerson Symons, Courtney Andrews and Coach Artigiani.

Darling Daddy Captures First In Anacostia

Cops Laurel Purse In 3-Horse Finish

LAUREL, Md., April 25 (AP) — Nailing down his victory in the very last stride of the Anacostia Purse here today, Darling Daddy won by a head from Girl Crazy in a tight three-horse finish.

Bea Marony, third horse to finish in the mile and a sixteenth race, was beaten two heads while outfinishing Parlo Pink by three-quarters of a length.

Darling Daddy, owned by Gerald Moore, posted a $28.60 mutuel while giving Jockey Eldon Nelson his second score of the afternoon.

Mrs. Colin MacLeod's Chadail appeared to have the race won while leading into the stretch but he stopped miserably in the last furlong and wound up fifth.

Nelson's earlier score was with Bryan Webb's Lustralice, length and a half victor over Bail Out in the fifth race. Lusterlice was the $6.80 for $2 favorite.

Bobby Martin also brought home two winners on the card, scoring with Pomposity in the second and Kevin Boy in the third. Both horses are trained by Bernard P. Bond.

Pomposity, $5.20 for $2 choice, completed a $33.60 daily double (Nos. 10 and 12) which was started by A. P. Bovello's Folderol, $10.20 for $2 winner of the opener.

Prophet's Bell Takes Feature

Wins Rosedale Stakes At Jamaica Track

JAMAICA, N. Y., April 25 (AP) — Reginald N. Webster's Prophets Bell was an easy victor in the 4th running of the $16,725 Rosedale Stakes at Jamaica Race Track today.

The daughter of Prophets Thumb-Two Bells, ridden by Eddie Arcaro, who was racking up his third victory of the day, dashed home by four and a half lengths in the five furlong spin for 2-year-old fillies.

Alan W. Vaughan's Anita V., who led to the eighth pole, took the place by three quarters of a length over John H. Clark's Dotty Bishop, who beat her stablemate, Memo, by a similar distance. The time was a moderate 1:00 2-5.

Heavy favorite with the crowd of 21,261, Prophets Bell returned mutuels of $3.80, $4.50 and $2.10. Anita V. was $11.70 and $2.10 and Dotty Bishop $2.10 to show. The unusual mutuel payoff resulted from the heavy wagering placed on the Clark entry.

Prophets Bell earned a net purse of $11,300 in annexing her second victory in as many starts. She previously won a maiden race at Bowie this spring.

Baseball Magnates Meet In Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, April 25 (UP)—Representatives of the major and minor leagues will meet in Cincinnati tomorrow to consider extension of their working agreement which will expire Jan. 12, 1957.

Baseball Commissioner Ford C. Frick called the meeting of the major-minor rules committee. He arrived from New York City today, but was not available immediately for comment.

Charles M. Segar, secretary-treasurer of baseball, said owners of both major and minor leagues have suggestions for changes. He declined to name any of them, however.

Eight Trainers To Be Honored At Pimlico May 18

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons and seven other trainers of Preakness winners will be honored by Pimlico on May 18, the day before this year's running of the classic for 3-year-olds.

Pimlico previously had announced it will stage a $10,000 race named for Fitzsimmons, trainer of last year's Preakness winner, Nashua, that day.

It reported today the seven other races on May 18 will be named for other trainers who sent out winners of the middle leg of the Triple Crown.

They are Max Hirsch, trainer of Assault in 1946, Ben Jones, who saddled Whirlaway in 1941, Jimmy Jones, handler of Citation in 1948, Preston M. Burch, with Bold in 1951, John M. Gaver, winner of the 1949 Preakness with Capot, Bill Winfrey, conditioner of Native Dancer in 1953 and Harry Trostek who sent out Hasty Road in 1954.

The holdover is Pete Ladygo, 240-pound guard and linebacker formerly with Baltimore of the National League.

LINCOLN, R. I., April 25 (AP) — Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Joe Jones scored a nose victory over alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's Find in the $54,800 Lincoln Downs Special before 20,246 at Lincoln Downs today.

The six-year-old Stymie gelding with Tony DeSpirito aboard, came from behind in the mile and a sixteenth event which he finished in 1:44 4-5.

A length back of Find was A. J. Mesler's War Command with Mrs. R. V. Robidou's Deep Thought and the Maine Chance Farm's Jet Action completing the small field.

Favored by the bettors, Joe Jones paid $4.40 and $2.40 and with Find returning $2.80. There was no show betting.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Travel With A Light Hand

To be an ambassadress of charm when travelling nearby or to far-off places, take along as little luggage as possible. Have simple occasion-right clothes that give you a color coordinated interchangeable wardrobe.

It is a nuisance and expensive to overload yourself with luggage. For a lengthly sojourn a "fortnighter," an overnight bag, and a train case should be sufficient. By air, two pieces are even better.

If you want to travel with a light hand, don't overlook the lightness of canvas suitcases, two sizes—one long enough to take your costume in one fold. They can go with you in the car, or the train or on the plane. That with cosmetic case is enough. Storage space on trains is limited. But, for cruises or longer trips, you wil probably need a wardrobe trunk and shoe-hat bag.

For the trip air-borne, first-class passage permits only 66 pounds of luggage free of charge on your ticket. For tourist travel, 44 pounds is your limit and every thing above that costs extra—all based on international agreement. It is best to keep your luggage down to two pieces if you go by air. Of course, on ships, there is no clothes limit; but the stateroom is your base of operation, and you don't want to be bogged down by having too much with you. Cruises are less formal than transatlantic crossings.

Don't forget that when you get to your destination you may go via many routes within a month's time—car, sleeper plane, or train, or even bus down the length of Italy—so limit yourself as to luggage. You don't want to be encumbered by baggage and too many things. You won't have time to make all the changes anyway.

Tomorrow—To make you feel beautiful.

Marines To Give Orchids To Donors In Cancer Drive

Members of the Cumberland Detachment, Marine Corps League, will distribute baby orchids tonight in return for donations to the American Cancer Society's 1956 Crusade.

George Powers, commandant of the detachment, announced today that volunteers of the organization will present an orchid to each person making a Cancer Crusade donation at the corner of Baltimore and Liberty Streets between 5 and 9:30 p. m.

The Cumberland Detachment is composed of ex-Marines and Friday's solicitation has received the approval of the Mayor and City Council as well as that of William Walsh, general chairman of the American Cancer Society's fund-raising drive in Allegany county. All contributions will be turned over to the county's campaign fund.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, April 25 (INS)—It will be Howard Keel opposite Doris Day in "Pajama Game." Howard and Doris blending their golden pipes in the Broadway musical, for which Warners are said to have paid a hot million dollars, should be a treat for the fans of musicals. There are also some good emoting moments for both in the sewing machine opus.

Already announced for the picture is Carol Haney to play the part she originated in the Broadway show and which jumped her to stardom overnight.

Doris likes the music in "Pajama Game" so much she drives around with the album playing the tunes on her car phonograph.

Ursula Thiess tells me that she expects to take her examination for American citizenship in September. She and Bob Taylor go to San Francisco for the opening of "Bandido," her new picture. I believe they wanted her to go out on tour, but she isn't eager to leave Bob and the baby. She says the company has been so kind to her she's happy to make appearances near home.

Amazing thing about Ursula's son by a previous marriage is that although he's been here less than a year, he's learned to speak English perfectly. As for Bob's nine-months-old son, he ain't talkin'—but he's a darling and a beauty.

Last December Bette Davis and Paul Henreid took an option on "The Stubborn Wood," a controversial novel by Emily Harvin. They have now exercised the option and have bought the book.

Bette, who is at her home in Maine, has been talking long distance to Paul and has agreed to star in the picture, while he will direct it and another leading man will be chosen to play opposite Bette.

Seems more than likely that "Stubborn Wood" will be released through Republic, for whom Henreid is doing a very successful job of directing.

Against her doctor's orders, Marilyn Monroe is back at work on "Bus Stop." Dr. Nathan Headley said she still has a bad cough and is in no condition to work, but when she found the company would have to close down if she didn't report, she insisted on returning.

The set is closed down tighter than a drum. A protective ring has been thrown around Marilyn to aid her in every way possible to conserve her strength, and a nurse is with her.

There were no interviews, visiting reporters or even press people from the studio today. She had her luncheon in her dressing room and about the only visitor she had was Milton Greene.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Dick Haymes, looking not at all sad, holding hands with Jackie Laughery at the Encore the other night and later at Zardi's Jazzland.

The Spanish food isn't agreeing with Cary Grant. He's been ill with stomach trouble ever since starting "The Pride and the Passion" in Madrid.

Spencer Tracy dropped 17 pounds before starting "Old Man and the Sea" in Havana today.

Rock Hudson says that if he and Phyllis have children he'll have his name legally changed from Fitzgerald to Hudson so the offspring would bear his best known moniker.

I'm really looking forward to Orry-Kelly's private showing of his new paintings on May 3. He paints pictures as well as he designs clothes and vice versa.

Sympathy goes to Comedian Bert Roach on the death of his mother, 82-year-old Mrs. Jennie Smith, following an injury suffered in a fall.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Celanese Notes 1955 As Year Of Progress

Celanese Corporation of America in its annual report to employes reported 1955 was a year of definite progress with textile sales volume higher than any year since 1951 although price instability in the market kept profit margins low.

The company said the employes' share of the 1955 income dollar was 34 cents, second highest claim against earnings. The largest share, 43 cents, went for materials, fuel, supplies, services, state and local taxes.

Net sales were up 20 per cent over 1954 and amounted to $177,502,026 compared to $147,606,550. Net income, after federal taxes and including tax refunds of $4.082.268, amounted to $15,303,268. Net income for 1954 after federal taxes was $6,590,268.

Actual dollar payments for employes' wages, salaries and other benefits last year totaled $61,884,923 compared to $54,146,347 the previous year.

Employment increased. The company had 13,460 employes at the end of 1955 compared to 12,406 at the end of 1954. Total wages and salaries, including those engaged in construction work, amounted to $57,772,428 compared to $50,515,680 the previous year.

Management and employe relations continued on a stable basis with 11 contracts and two wage reopenings negotiated. Wages, the company said, were maintained in line with industry pattern applicable to its operations. The group insurance program was expanded and accident and sickness benefits increased.

LaVale Opens Drive For Street Signs

A committee of the LaVale Civic Improvement Association is making excellent progress in the effort to provide street signs and house numbers for that growing suburb.

Attending a planning meeting of the committee Monday night in the LaVale Fire Hall were Lloyd Buchanan, chairman; Bruce Long, John J. Rowan, William Durland and George Carney, and Walter N. Hedrick, newly elected civic improvement association president.

It was decided that residents will be contacted by mail and later by personal canvass for their contribution to this community project.

Buchanan pointed out that the U.S. Post Office Department has given the authority for the establishment of service comparable to Cumberland's, once street signs are erected and houses numbered.

Presently there are four rural routes or parts of them serving LaVale, Routes 1, 5, 6 and 7, from the Cumberland Post Office. This is in addition to LaVale Post Office, which, because of its increased volume of mail, has been classed for the past several years as a second class post office.

The committee pointed out that a new post office building is to be constructed in the future in LaVale.

It was decided that the campaign will get underway the week of May 15. Based on latest census figures of the LaVale Sanitary Commission, the cost of the street signs will amount only to $2 per house, Buchanan told the committee.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear son, husband and father, Robert C. Hartman, who passed away April 26, 1953.

Do not ask us if we miss him;
There's such a vacant place,
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
And see his smiling face.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Memory keeps him ever near us,
Though he left us three years ago.

Loving Mother, Wife & Son.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Travel With A Light Hand

To be an ambassadress of charm when travelling nearby or to far-off places, take along as little luggage as possible. Have simple occasion-right clothes that give you a color coordinated interchangeable wardrobe.

It is a nuisance and expensive to overload yourself with luggage. For a lengthly sojourn a "fort-nighter," an overnight bag, and a train case should be sufficient. By air, two pieces are even better.

If you want to travel with a light hand, don't overlook the lightness of canvas suitcases, two sizes—one long enough to take your costume in one fold. They can go with you in the car, or the train or on the plane. That with cosmetic case is enough. Storage space on trains is limited. But, for cruises or longer trips, you wil probably need a wardrobe trunk and shoe-hat bag.

For the trip air-borne, first-class passage permits only 66 pounds of luggage free of charge on your ticket. For tourist travel, 44 pounds is your limit and every thing above that costs extra—all based on international agreement. It is best to keep your luggage down to two pieces if you go by air. Of course, on ships, there is no clothes limit; but the stateroom is your base of operation, and you don't want to be bogged down by having too much with you. Cruises are less formal than transatlantic crossings.

Don't forget that when you get to your destination you may go via many routes within a month's time—car, sleeper plane, or train, or even bus down the length of Italy—so limit yourself as to luggage. You don't want to be encumbered by baggage and too many things. You won't have time to make all the changes anyway.

Tomorrow—To make you feel beautiful.

Marines To Give Orchids To Donors In Cancer Drive

Members of the Cumberland Detachment, Marine Corps League, will distribute baby orchids tonight in return for donations to the American Cancer Society's 1956 Crusade.

George Powers, commandant of the detachment, announced today that volunteers of the organization will present an orchid to each person making a Cancer Crusade donation at the corner of Baltimore and Liberty Streets between 5 and 9:30 p. m.

The Cumberland Detachment is composed of ex-Marines and Friday's solicitation has received the approval of the Mayor and City Council as well as that of William Walsh, general chairman of the American Cancer Society's fund-raising drive in Allegany county. All contributions will be turned over to the county's campaign fund.

The Marines have received an order of 900 orchids for the project.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Card of Thanks

We take this means of expressing our sincere thanks and appreciation to all our relatives, neighbors and friends, for their kindness and sympathy during our recent bereavement, the death of our dear mother and mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Blair. Also members of Myrtle Temple, Pythian Sisters, Martha Washington Chapter No. 10, O.E.S., Mr. and Mrs. George Eichorn, Phillips Flower Shop, Kelly Tire Plant depts., Celanese Plant depts., Midland Fire Dept. and Auxiliary for Floral tributes and services rendered. Also thanks and appreciation to all others who sent floral tributes, loaned cars for the funeral and assisted in many other ways.

The Blair Brothers
Their Sister and their Families.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear son, husband and father, Robert C. Hartman, who passed away April 26, 1953.

Do not ask us if we miss him;
There's such a vacant place,
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
And see his smiling face.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Memory keeps him ever near us,
Though he left us three years ago.

Loving Mother, Wife & Son.

Man Is Drowned After Plunge From Bridge

E. William Arnold Pulled From Potomac

Earl William Arnold, 59, of 118 Harrison Street, jumped or fell from the new interstate bridge into the Potomac River above the new industrial dam and drowned in 10 to 12 feet of water yesterday afternoon.

Paul Thompson, an employe of the E. J. Albrecht Company who was operating a huge Euclid near the river bank, was attracted to the scene by youngsters yelling that a man had jumped from the bridge.

Thompson ran to the river bank, peeled off his heavy overalls and jumped into the cold water to pull Arnold to shore. He said Arnold was moving slightly as he swam toward the man. Thompson, who came here in December from Chillicothe, Ohio, lives in a trailer at the LaVale Motor Court.

Probe Continues

Although Arnold's body had been washed over the dam, police said there were no marks on his body to indicate that he might have died as a result of striking the dam. Drowning was believed the cause of his death, although Dr. H. V. Deming, county deputy medical examiner, had not completed his investigation last night.

Dr. Deming was trying to get the names of persons who actually saw Arnold plunge some 40 feet from the upstream side of the bridge into the river.

Police Officer Donald Smith, who was walking the Greene Street beat when the report was received at 4:21 p. m., applied artificial respiration after Thompson got the man to shore.

Detective Lt. James E. Van and Detective Thomas F. See rushed to the scene, as did Police Officer Ernest M. Powell in the patrol wagon. The detectives continued to apply artificial respiration as Officer Powell drove them to Sacred Heart Hospital but Arnold was pronounced dead on arrival.

Native Of Grafton

Arnold, who had lived here about three years, was a native of Grafton, W. Va. He had attended Grafton Baptist Church and was a painter and paperhanger by trade.

For the past five weeks, until Sunday, he had been staying with and taking care of Oliver Twigg, who is blind and 93 years old, and lives alone at 308 Williams Street.

Then on Sunday, Arnold asked to be relieved of his duties for a while because of a hernia condition. Since Sunday he had been staying with a brother-in-law, William E. Arble at 118 Harrison Street.

Police were told that Arnold returned to the Twigg residence about 3:30 p. m. yesterday and got a clean shirt. He reported then that he was going to Keyser for a hernia operation. Authorities believe that Arnold walked down from Williams Street and directly to the bridge because he jumped into the water about 4:15 p. m.

The body is at the Kight Funeral Home.

Pope To Accept Assistant Post In Hagerstown

Merritt N. Pope, 84 Broadway, Frostburg, assistant county agent here since last August 1, announced last night that he is accepting a position as assistant county agent in Washington County effective May 1.

A native of Fairfax County, Va., and a graduate of the University of Maryland, Pope taught vocational agriculture about three-and-one-half years in Baltimore and Garrett counties before joining the State Extension Service last August.

He and his wife, the former Miss Erin McCullough of Baxter Spring, Kansas, have lived in Frostburg since moving from Garrett County last summer.

Pope's position here will be filled effective July 1 by William Nixon, now assistant agent in Dorchester County on the Eastern Shore. Nixon is a native of West Virginia and a graduate of West Virginia University.

These changes are taking place as a chain reaction resulting from the resignation of Horace Fuller as associate county agent in Washington County. Fuller has returned to teaching vocational agriculture at Smithsburg in that county.

As a result George Wood, who has been assistant agent to County Agent Mark Miller in Washington County, is moving up to associate agent thereby creating the vacancy which Pope is filling.

Streetcars And Gaslights

Facts On Fluorides—6

Fluoridation Is Established Public Health Procedure

Today, The Cumberland News, in cooperation with the Allegany-Garrett Dental Society, presents the last in a series of authoritative articles on the fluoridation of community water supplies. The articles are prepared by the American Dental Association.

Fluoridation is described by the president of the Amercian Dental Association as "an established health measure that should be a routine procedure in every water department in the country."

"The safety and effectiveness are proved beyond doubt," according to Dr. Bernerd C. Kingsbury, of San Francisco. "Never before in the history of public health has a procedure had such a wealth of supporting scientific evidence," he points out.

There are now more than 1,100 communities, embracing a population of 22 million people, where the drinking water is fluoridated. In addition, there are 3,570,000 people in some 1,100 communities where fluorides occur naturally in the water in desirable amounts.

In all, according to American Dental Association statistics, one out of every four persons living in U. S. urban communities is being served by water containing favorable amounts of fluorides.

For those rural areas where there is no public water supply, dentists have advocated topical fluoride treatment—application of fluorides directly to the surface of children's teeth by a dentist or dental hygienist.

First Preventive Step

The fluoridation movement has been described as the first concrete prevention step in dentistry. Because of the huge toll of dental decay, dentists have been hard-pressed to cope with the ravages of the disease. The backlog is bulking larger each year. The current rate of decay is six times the rate of repair.

It is estimated that 95 per cent of the American population is afflicted with dental decay. It reaches down to children as young as two.

If fluoridation can help bring decay under a large measure of control, it will permit dentistry to be transformed largely into a preventive health practice rather than a treatment. This, in the opinion of Dr. H. Trendley Dean, secretary of the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Research and one of the pioneers in fluoride research, will be as revolutionary as the change that occurred in medicine during the past generation through development of immunization and antibiotics.

Lifetime Benefits

The benefits of fluoridation will be carried throughout a person's lifetime. A study of adults, ages 35 to 44, living in water-fluoridated Colorado Springs, Colo., found they had only one-fourth the dental decay and tooth loss as the same age group in non-fluoridated Boulder.

Scientists warn fluoridation is not a cure-all. It must be accompanied by other well-established ways of reducing caries, including the restriction of carbohydrates and the practice of good oral hygiene.

Compared with the benefits to be achieved, the cost of fluoridation is low. Experience at various sized water works has shown the range to be from 4 to 14 cents a year per person, or an average of 10 cents—about the cost of an ice cream cone.

What it could mean in actual saving to a nation which now spends a staggering $1.6 billion for dental decay may be seen in a pilot study by Drs. Wesley O. Young and W. J. Pelton of the U. S. Public Health Service. They found fluoridation in a community in Idaho could cut dental costs for children by more than 50 per cent.

Local Jaycees Represented At D.C. Session

A member of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce is representing Maryland at a meeting in Washington of representatives of local and state Jaycee organizations which have conducted outstanding programs to create greater public interest in the second Hoover report.

The report contains more than 300 recommendations aimed at returning the Executive Branch of the federal government to a more economical and efficient operating level.

Representing Maryland will be Albert D. Darby Jr., vice president of the Cumberland Jaycees, who served as chairman of the local Jayce committee which attempted to stimulate greater public interest in the recommendations of the Second Hoover Commission.

Former President Herbert Hoover, who served as chairman of both the first and second bipartisan Hoover Commissions, will address the Jaycees representing all states and territories at a banquet-breakfast Friday morning at the Willard Hotel in Washington.

Rep. DeWitt S. Hyde of the Sixth Congressional District has accepted an invitation to be Darby's guest at the breakfast.

The banquet-breakfast climaxes a three-day visit to the nation's capital for the 56 Jaycee representatives. Yesterday and today are being devoted to a personal inspection of federal government operation and the opportunity to meet many of the important men who made it function.

Planned events include a visit to selected government agencies, a briefing at the Pentagon, visits to both House and Senate galleries for an introduction from the floor, a presentation to leaders of Congress and a special luncheon in the Senate building. The entire program is sponsored by the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mahoney Group Names Workers

A "Get-Out-the-Vote" Committee was named by James E. Kenney, general chairman of the Allegany County Mahoney for U. S. Senator organization, at a meeting Tuesday night.

Kenney named four veterans of World War II to the committee with William B. Orndorff as chairman, assisted by Phil Fleming, Thomas B. Finan and W. Earle Cobey.

Orndorff is active in the Young Democrat Club and a charter member, and a past commander of the Amvets. Finan, chairman of the Allegany County Democratic Committee, and Fleming are past commanders of the American Legion.

The campaign committee, Kenney said, made tentative plans for rallies next week throughout the county. District leaders were instructed to set a time and place for rallies at Cumberland, Mt. Savage, Lonaconing and Frostburg. Kenney said details will be announced over the weekend.

Bakery Places Bulk Handling Unit In Service

Is Part Of $150,000 Modernization Plan

The Community Baking Company yesterday afternoon placed into service its new bulk flour handling equipment, the first complete installation of its kind in Maryland.

John A. Kreiling, president, said the installation is part of a $150,000 plant modernization program which is to be completed in about two months.

Mayor Roy W. Eves pressed the button of an electronic control system and started flour flowing from a special railroad car and into one of two new storage bins, each of which holds 60,000 pounds of flour.

Is First In State

The first complete installation of its kind in Maryland, the equipment will enable the bakery to unload a car of flour, spotted on its railroad siding, at the rate of up to 30,000 pounds of flour an hour.

The installation includes a pressure pneumatic unloading system, which includes a blower which "fluidizes" the flour in the car, allowing it to flow into a hopper located beaneth the track. From there, another blower moves the flour through a three-inch pipe, carried by a steel truss over Henderson Avenue and into the storage bins on the second floor of the bakery.

From these bins, flour is conveyed pneumatically through a sifting operation and then delivered by sealed pipes to the dough mixer.

Kreiling said the flour is never exposed to the air from the time it leaves the mill until it is ready for mixing.

$300,000 Payroll

Before the equipment was installed, it took about eight hours to unload a carload of flour by hand, load it into trucks and deliver it to the plant across the street.

The modernization program also includes a modern office, new double- lap tray ovens with conveying equipment and depanners, a complete molder, twister and panner and a new 16-rack proof box.

The company, located at Knox Street and Henderson Avenue, has 75 employes and has an annual payroll of over $300,000.

The firm delivers a complete line of bakery goods to independent food stores of this area.

Ridgeley Will Distribute Food

Surplus food will be distributed from noon until 4 p.m. today at the American Legion Home in Ridgeley.

Canal Parkway Discussion Set At Reunion Hike

Route Of Highway Is Outlined

The Wilderness Society, which under the leadership of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas hiked the historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, will meet for a weekend get-to-gether at Fort Frederick State Park and Harper's Ferry tomorrow and Saturday.

While this group, along with other opponents of a highway from Cumberland to Washington along the old canal, have been successful in having the original plan abandoned, they are in accord to a considerable degree with an alternate plan for a low-water route between Cumberland and Hancock, as well as furtherer development in the lower and around the Great Falls area.

A bulletin sent to all members of The Wilderness Society outlines present plans for the Cumberland-to-Hancock route. The National Park Service is continuing its planning for this route, along with a longer-range program of preserving the entire 180 miles of the canal as a national park.

Report Expected

A C&O Canal committee, named by Justice Douglas to work with governmental agencies, will report at the weekend session on progress to date.

It will be shown, the bulletin indicates, that the proposed highway at either end of the canal will be kept off the canal, and the canal itself is to be kept free of highway encroachment and preserved intact.

The committee said the highway end will go along a route approximately as follows:

1. From North Branch outside of Cumberland to a few miles west of Paw Paw, over existing highway Route No. 51 (which is to be modernized).
2. A new road is to be built following the valley near Anthony Ridge to approximate the route of Oldtown Road.
3. The approximate route of Oldtown Road will be followed to a point north of Little Orleans.
4. The new road would go north of Little Orleans through Pearre and then northward to a point near Little Tonoloway Creek.
5. From here the new road would go to Hancock. The committee says this approximate route is not objectionable to the opponents of the original plan.

As to the Washington end of the canal area, the committee said it was strongly of the opinion that all highway lanes from Chain Bridge to Great Falls should be placed along the bluffs in some way as to link River Road with Route 40 and MacArthur Boulevard, and to develop a four-lane highway to Seneca with possibly a branch to Great Falls.

Plans Advance

National Park Service Director Conrad L. Wirth said this week that no blueprints for development have been drawn but many phases of the project are well advanced.

The section between Paw Paw and Cumberland is to be kept in its present state with access to it by Oldtown Road. Paw Paw tunnel is to be repaired and the boardwalk inside replaced. Wirth said he would like to see a big camping ground developed on down the river after leaving the tunnel, adding that people would have to hike it.

Between the canal and the river at Little Orleans is another good place for a camping ground, he noted. From the high road to be built between Route 50 and Woodmont Club, a couple of feeder roads coming down close to the canal terminating at camping areas are being considered.

It is anticipated that actual work on this much discussed project will get under way in the next year or two, with camping grounds, picnic grounds, stone fireplaces, overnight shelters, pure drinking water and sanitary facilities available all along the canal.

Not Withdrawn

Fay W. Keiser, whose beer and wine license for the premises on National Highway opposite Crystal Park was renewed by the Board of Alcoholic Beverages License Commissioners, said yesterday that he has not withdrawn his application for a beer, wine and liquor license.

Choral Unit Will Sing 'Requiem'

The Cumberland Choral Society, which has been presenting outstanding musical programs for the community ever since its organization 16 years ago, is now completing preparations for the presentation of Mozart's "Requiem" in the Allegany High School auditorium on Monday, May 7.

Featured soloists for the concert will be Miss Josephine Kompanek, soprano; Mrs. Joyce Zornig, contralto; Rudolph Kompanek, tenor, and William Cletus Hartsock, baritone.

Presentation of Mozart's "Requiem" will wind up another busy year for the society which has presented Handel's "The Messiah" each Christmas season since 1940. Only once in all that period was admission charged for "The Messiah." That was in 1941 when all the proceeds went to the American Red Cross.

In its 16 years of operation, the choral society has had only two sponsors. They were Mrs. Robert Henderson and Mrs. Helen Waring Martin. The greater part of the group's income has come from public-spirited citizens in Cumberland acting as patrons and associate members.

Present director of the society is Charles I. Sager, head of the Music Department at Frostburg State Teachers College.

Charter members of the society who still are active include Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Kremer, Mrs. Elsie Brinkman, Mrs. Jack Wetzel, Miss Althea Birchard, Miss Mary Robb, Robert Moreland and W. A. Strother, all of Cumberland; James Darrow of Frostburg and Mrs. Earl Miller of Ellerslie. Kremer was the first president.

New Boy Scout Troop Formed In Ellerslie

A new Boy Scout troop will be instituted at ceremonies planned tomorrow night in Ellerslie.

The charter for Troop 55, sponsored by the Patriotic Sons of America lodge of Ellerslie, will be held Friday at 7 p. m. in the Ellerslie Fire Hall, according to Carl Wagner, chairman of the Organization and Extension committee of Nemacolin District.

Members of the troop committee will be Stanley Daniels, city, institutional representative; Quentin Griffey, chairman, and Clifton H. Close, David L. Kendall, Charles F. Wisler Sr., W. Ambrose Miller and Ellis B. Wisler Sr.

Richard L. Close will be scoutmaster, and Duane F. Shaffer and Curtis L. Hickle, assistant scoutmasters.

The new troop was organized by William G. Barger, a member of the district Organization and Extension committee.

The charter will be presented by Robert Moore, a member of the committee.

The troop will be chartered with 32 members, all new to Scouting.

District officials will persent registration cards to the new Scouts, who will take part in the ceremonies.

Choral Festival Opens Today

The annual All - County High School Choral Festival will open this morning with rehearsals at Allegany High School.

A 165-voice chorus representing all high schools in Allegany County will rehearse at the school all day today, with time out for lunch in the school cafeteria. An evening rehearsal also will be held from 7 to 9 p. m.

Tomorrow, all 800 singers who will take part in various portions of the festival will perform in groups for Luther W. Goodhart, professor of education in the Department of Music at New York University. Goodhart will evaluate vocal groups and will conduct an afternoon choral clinic.

The festival will close Saturday with a public concert at 8 p. m.

Tydings Calls For Debate With Mahoney

Wants To Meet 'Face To Face'

By GEORGE BOWEN

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Millard E. Tydings made the first direct personal challenge today to George P. Mahoney, his main foe for the U. S. Senate nomination by the Democrats, to debate issues "face to face."

So far in the campaign which culminates in the primary May 7, Mahoney and Tydings have gone their separate ways without personal mention of the other in public or on the record. Some of their backers have traded blasts, but the two candidates have ignored each other.

Tydings offered to end that with a showdown discussion.

While he didn't say so specifically, he didn't deny he was suggesting a television meeting so as many voters as possible could be reached.

Says Mahoney Ducked

Tydings claimed he has discussed the issues and records and "my major opponent hasn't."

He said Mahoney "has evaded issues, except a few on which he is perfectly safe because there can be no real difference of opinion. He, or his associates, have shed smoke, but no light, on my record.

"The electorate deserves something better."

He proposed:

"Let Mr. Mahoney and me get on the same forum. Let there be no ghost writers, no people whispering into our ears. Let us discuss issues. Let us discuss our records.

Meet "Face To Face"

"If there is any criticism of my long career in public office, let it come out openly, where I can answer it face to face. And I will assure you I will answer to the public's satisfaction.

"If Mr. Mahoney has any ideas about international or national policy, let him disclose them. I shall present my deeds. Each of us will have a chance to comment.

"And the voters will be able to see us face to face, to hear our views and the statement of our records. And then they will have the best possible basis for judging between us.

"That is what a campaign should give the voters. And I am ready to provide it.

"How about you, Mr. Mahoney?

"Any reasonable time will suit me."

Man Killed By Tractor

Frederick Louis Brinker, 66, Springfield, W. Va., farmer, died yesterday at 7:10 p. m. in Memorial Hospital of injuries suffered several hours earlier when his tractor overturned on him.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said death resulted from internal injuries.

He said Mr. Brinker was plowing on his farm, with a harrow attached, on a deep incline, when the accident occurred about 3 p. m.

The front end of the tractor reared up, he reported, throwing Mr. Brinker upon the harrow, on which he was pinned as the tractor fell back on him.

He was born here June 26, 1889, a son of the late Mathias and Louisa Ruppenkamp, and had operated a large farm in Springfield for 16 years.

Surviving are two sons, Charles W., Springfield, and Francis E., Racine, Wis.; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Roby, city; Miss Rosemary Brinker, Washington, and Miss Pauline, city; a brother, George A., Springfield; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Wempe, city, and the Misses Elizabeth and Anna Brinker, Springfield, and nine grandchildren.

The body is at the Scarpelli Funeral Home.

Library Offers Two Displays

A "double feature" is being offered at the Cumberland Free Public Library all this week.

Instead of the usual single exhibit in the main room of the library there are two.

Nearest the main entrance is a large display prepared by the Celanese Corporation of America to emphasize Chemical Progress Week. Small booklets available for library patrons explain that Celanese chemicals are basic for American industry.

In the regular display cabinet, art students of Mrs. Ethel Bruce at Allegany High School have arranged an exhibit of enameling on copper. The name of the artist accompanies each article. Children from the seventh through the 12th grades are exhibiting their handicraft.

Home Ec Teachers To Attend Meeting

A group of Allegany County home economics teachers will attend the annual spring meeting Saturday of the Maryland Home Economics Association in College Park, according to Miss Ruth E. McColly, supervisor of home economics in the county public schools.

The county teachers will present a skit to promote interest in the National Home Economics meeting planned in Washington in June.

Man Is Drowned After Plunge From Bridge

E. William Arnold Pulled From Potomac

Earl William Arnold, 59, of 118 Harrison Street, jumped or fell from the new interstate bridge into the Potomac River above the new industrial dam and drowned in 10 to 12 feet of water yesterday afternoon.

Paul Thompson, an employe of the E. J. Albrecht Company who was operating a huge Euclid near the river bank, was attracted to the scene by youngsters yelling that a man had jumped from the bridge.

Thompson ran to the river bank, peeled off his heavy overalls and jumped into the cold water to pull Arnold to shore. He said Arnold was moving slightly as he swam toward the man. Thompson, who came here in December from Chillicothe, Ohio, lives in a trailer at the LaVale Motor Court.

Probe Continues

Although Arnold's body had been washed over the dam, police said there were no marks on his body to indicate that he might have died as a result of striking the dam. Drowning was believed the cause of his death, although Dr. H. V. Deming, county deputy medical examiner, had not completed his investigation last night.

Dr. Deming was trying to get the names of persons who actually saw Arnold plunge some 40 feet from the upstream side of the bridge into the river.

Police Officer Donald Smith, who was walking the Greene Street beat when the report was received at 4:21 p. m., applied artificial respiration after Thompson got the man to shore.

Detective Lt. James E. Van and Detective Thomas F. See rushed to the scene, as did Police Officer Ernest M. Powell in the patrol wagon. The detectives continued to apply artificial respiration as Officer Powell drove them to Sacred Heart Hospital but Arnold was pronounced dead on arrival.

Native Of Grafton

Arnold, who had lived here about three years, was a native of Grafton, W. Va. He had attended Grafton Baptist Church and was a painter and paperhanger by trade.

For the past five weeks, until Sunday, he had been staying with and taking care of Oliver Twigg, who is blind and 93 years old, and lives alone at 308 Williams Street.

Then on Sunday, Arnold asked to be relieved of his duties for a while because of a hernia condition. Since Sunday he had been staying with a brother-in-law, William E. Arble at 118 Harrison Street.

Police were told that Arnold returned to the Twigg residence about 3:30 p. m. yesterday and got a clean shirt. He reported then that he was going to Keyser for a hernia operation. Authorities believe that Arnold walked down from Williams Street and directly to the bridge because he jumped into the water about 4:15 p. m.

The body is at the Kight Funeral Home.

Pope To Accept Assistant Post In Hagerstown

Merritt N. Pope, 84 Broadway, Frostburg, assistant county agent here since last August 1, announced last night that he is accepting a position as assistant county agent in Washington County effective May 1.

A native of Fairfax County, Va., and a graduate of the University of Maryland, Pope taught vocational agriculture about three-and-one-half years in Baltimore and Garrett counties before joining the State Extension Service last August.

He and his wife, the former Miss Erin McCullough of Baxter Spring, Kansas, have lived in Frostburg since moving from Garrett County last summer.

Pope's position here will be filled effective July 1 by William Nixon, now assistant agent in Dorchester County on the Eastern Shore. Nixon is a native of West Virginia and a graduate of West Virginia University.

These changes are taking place as a chain reaction resulting from the resignation of Horace Fuller as associate county agent in Washington County. Fuller has returned to teaching vocational agriculture at Smithsburg in that county.

As a result George Wood, who has been assistant agent to County Agent Mark Miller in Washington County, is moving up to associate agent thereby creating the vacancy which Pope is filling.

Streetcars And Gaslights

All of Baltimore Street stood still for the photographer when the first street cars ran on Baltimore Street in the early 1900s. Note car at foreground entering Baltimore Street from North Centre, opposite to the traffic pattern. Other cars are shown coming down Baltimore Street and entering the main thoroughfare from South Centre. Derby-hatted gentlemen and barefoot children alike posed for the picture under one of the city's gas lights, as if the whole town had turned out for the fun.

Facts On Fluorides—6

Fluoridation Is Established Public Health Procedure

•Today, The Cumberland News, in cooperation with the Allegany-Garrett Dental Society, presents the last in a series of authoritative articles on the fluoridation of community water supplies. The articles are prepared by the American Dental Association.

Fluoridation is described by the president of the Amercian Dental Association as "an established health measure that should be a routine procedure in every water department in the country."

"The safety and effectiveness are proved beyond doubt," according to Dr. Bernerd C. Kingsbury, of San Francisco. "Never before in the history of public health has a procedure had such a wealth of supporting scientific evidence," he points out.

There are now more than 1,100 communities, embracing a population of 22 million people, where the drinking water is fluoridated. In addition, there are 3,570,000 people in some 1,100 communities where fluorides occur naturally in the water in desirable amounts.

In all, according to American Dental Association statistics, one out of every four persons living in U. S. urban communities is being served by water containing favorable amounts of fluorides.

For those rural areas where there is no public water supply, dentists have advocated topical fluoride treatment—application of fluorides directly to the surface of children's teeth by a dentist or dental hygienist.

First Preventive Step

The fluoridation movement has been described as the first concrete prevention step in dentistry. Because of the huge toll of dental decay, dentists have been hard-pressed to cope with the ravages of the disease. The backlog is bulking larger each year. The current rate of decay is six times the rate of repair.

It is estimated that 95 per cent of the American population is afflicted with dental decay. It reaches down to children as young as two.

If fluoridation can help bring decay under a large measure of control, it will permit dentistry to be transformed largely into a preventive health practice rather than a treatment. This, in the opinion of Dr. H. Trendley Dean, secretary of the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Research and one of the pioneers in fluoride research, will be as revolutionary as the change that occurred in medicine during the past generation through development of immunization and antibiotics.

Lifetime Benefits

The benefits of fluoridation will be carried throughout a person's lifetime. A study of adults, ages 35 to 44, living in water-fluoridated Colorado Springs, Colo., found they had only one-fourth the dental decay and tooth loss as the same age group in non-fluoridated Boulder.

Scientists warn fluoridation is not a cure-all. It must be accompanied by other well-established ways of reducing caries, including the restriction of carbohydrates and the practice of good oral hygiene.

Compared with the benefits to be achieved, the cost of fluoridation is low. Experience at various sized water works has shown the range to be from 4 to 14 cents a year per person, or an average of 10 cents—about the cost of an ice cream cone.

What it could mean in actual saving to a nation which now spends a staggering $1.6 billion for dental decay may be seen in a pilot study by Drs. Wesley O. Young and W. J. Pelton of the U. S. Public Health Service. They found fluoridation in a community in Idaho could cut dental costs for children by more than 50 per cent.

Local Jaycees Represented At D.C. Session

A member of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce is representing Maryland at a meeting in Washington of representatives of local and state Jaycee organizations which have conducted outstanding programs to create greater public interest in the second Hoover report.

The report contains more than 300 recommendations aimed at returning the Executive Branch of the federal government to a more economical and efficient operating level.

Representing Maryland will be Albert D. Darby Jr., vice president of the Cumberland Jaycees, who served as chairman of the local Jayce committee which attempted to stimulate greater public interest in the recommendations of the Second Hoover Commission.

Former President Herbert Hoover, who served as chairman of both the first and second bipartisan Hoover Commissions, will address the Jaycees representing all states and territories at a banquet-breakfast Friday morning at the Willard Hotel in Washington.

Rep. DeWitt S. Hyde of the Sixth Congressional District has accepted an invitation to be Darby's guest at the breakfast.

The banquet-breakfast climaxes a three-day visit to the nation's capital for the 56 Jaycee representatives. Yesterday and today are being devoted to a personal inspection of federal government operation and the opportunity to meet many of the important men who made it function.

Planned events include a visit to selected government agencies, a briefing at the Pentagon, visits to both House and Senate galleries for an introduction from the floor, a presentation to leaders of Congress and a special luncheon in the Senate building. The entire program is sponsored by the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Mahoney Group Names Workers

A "Get-Out-the-Vote" Committee was named by James E. Kenney, general chairman of the Allegany County Mahoney for U. S. Senator organization, at a meeting Tuesday night.

Kenney named four veterans of World War II to the committee with William B. Orndorff as chairman, assisted by Phil Fleming, Thomas B. Finan and W. Earle Cobey.

Orndorff is active in the Young Democrat Club and a charter member, and a past commander of the Amvets. Finan, chairman of the Allegany County Democratic Committee, and Fleming are past commanders of the American Legion.

The campaign committee, Kenney said, made tentative plans for rallies next week throughout the county. District leaders were instructed to set a time and place for rallies at Cumberland, Mt. Savage, Lonaconing and Frostburg. Kenney said details will be announced over the weekend.

Bakery Places Bulk Handling Unit In Service

Is Part Of $150,000 Modernization Plan

The Community Baking Company yesterday afternoon placed into service its new bulk flour handling equipment, the first complete installation of its kind in Maryland.

John A. Kreiling, president, said the installation is part of a $150,000 plant modernization program which is to be completed in about two months.

Mayor Roy W. Eves pressed the button of an electronic control system and started flour flowing from a special railroad car and into one of two new storage bins, each of which holds 60,000 pounds of flour.

Is First In State

The first complete installation of its kind in Maryland, the equipment will enable the bakery to unload a car of flour, spotted on its railroad siding, at the rate of up to 30,000 pounds of flour an hour.

The installation includes a pressure pneumatic unloading system, which includes a blower which "fluidizes" the flour in the car, allowing it to flow into a hopper located beaneth the track. From there, another blower moves the flour through a three-inch pipe, carried by a steel truss over Henderson Avenue and into the storage bins on the second floor of the bakery.

From these bins, flour is conveyed pneumatically through a sifting operation and then delivered by sealed pipes to the dough mixer.

Kreiling said the flour is never exposed to the air from the time it leaves the mill until it is ready for mixing.

$300,000 Payroll

Before the equipment was installed, it took about eight hours to unload a carload of flour by hand, load it into trucks and deliver it to the plant across the street.

The modernization program also includes a modern office, new double-lap tray ovens with conveying equipment and depanners, a complete molder, twister and panner and a new 16-rack proof box.

The company, located at Knox Street and Henderson Avenue, has 75 employes and has an annual payroll of over $300,000.

The firm delivers a complete line of bakery goods to independent food stores of this area.

Ridgeley Will Distribute Food

Surplus food will be distributed from noon until 4 p.m. today at the American Legion Home in Ridgeley.

Canal Parkway Discussion Set At Reunion Hike

Route Of Highway Is Outlined

The Wilderness Society, which under the leadership of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas hiked the historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, will meet for a weekend get-to-gether at Fort Frederick State Park and Harper's Ferry tomorrow and Saturday.

While this group, along with other opponents of a highway from Cumberland to Washington along the old canal, have been successful in having the original plan abandoned, they are in accord to a considerable degree with an alternate plan for a low-water route between Cumberland and Hancock, as well as furtherer development in the lower and around the Great Falls area.

A bulletin sent to all members of The Wilderness Society outlines present plans for the Cumberland-to-Hancock route. The National Park Service is continuing its planning for this route, along with a longer-range program of preserving the entire 180 miles of the canal as a national park.

Report Expected

A C&O Canal committee, named by Justice Douglas to work with governmental agencies, will report at the weekend session on progress to date.

It will be shown, the bulletin indicates, that the proposed highway at either end of the canal will be kept off the canal, and the canal itself is to be kept free of highway encroachment and preserved intact.

The committee said the highway end will go along a route approximately as follows:

1. From North Branch outside of Cumberland to a few miles west of Paw Paw, over existing highway Route No. 51 (which is to be modernized).
2. A new road is to be built following the valley near Anthony Ridge to approximate the route of Oldtown Road.
3. The approximate route of Oldtown Road will be followed to a point north of Little Orleans.
4. The new road would go north of Little Orleans through Pearre and then northward to a point near Little Tonoloway Creek.
5. From here the new road would go to Hancock. The committee says this approximate route is not objectionable to the opponents of the original plan.

As to the Washington end of the canal area, the committee said it was strongly of the opinion that all highway lanes from Chain Bridge to Great Falls should be placed along the bluffs in some way as to link River Road with Route 40 and MacArthur Boulevard, and to develop a four-lane highway to Seneca with possibly a branch to Great Falls.

Plans Advance

National Park Service Director Conrad L. Wirth said this week that no blueprints for development have been drawn but many phases of the project are well advanced.

The section between Paw Paw and Cumberland is to be kept in its present state with access to it by Oldtown Road. Paw Paw tunnel is to be repaired and the boardwalk inside replaced. Wirth said he would like to see a big camping ground developed on down the river after leaving the tunnel, adding that people would have to hike it.

Between the canal and the river at Little Orleans is another good place for a camping ground, he noted. From the high road to be built between Route 50 and Woodmont Club, a couple of feeder roads coming down close to the canal terminating at camping areas are being considered.

It is anticipated that actual work on this much discussed project will get under way in the next year or two, with camping grounds, picnic grounds, stone fireplaces, overnight shelters, pure drinking water and sanitary facilities available all along the canal.

Not Withdrawn

Fay W. Keiser, whose beer and wine license for the premises on National Highway opposite Crystal Park was renewed by the Board of Alcoholic Beverages License Commissioners, said yesterday that he has not withdrawn his application for a beer, wine and liquor license.

Choral Unit Will Sing 'Requiem'

The Cumberland Choral Society, which has been presenting outstanding musical programs for the community ever since its organization 16 years ago, is now completing preparations for the presentation of Mozart's "Requiem" in the Allegany High School auditorium on Monday, May 7.

Featured soloists for the concert will be Miss Josephine Kompanek, soprano; Mrs. Joyce Zornig, contralto; Rudolph Kompanek, tenor, and William Cletus Hartsock, baritone.

Presentation of Mozart's "Requiem" will wind up another busy year for the society which has presented Handel's "The Messiah" each Christmas season since 1940. Only once in all that period was admission charged for "The Messiah." That was in 1941 when all the proceeds went to the American Red Cross.

In its 16 years of operation, the choral society has had only two sponsors. They were Mrs. Robert Henderson and Mrs. Helen Waring Martin. The greater part of the group's income has come from public-spirited citizens in Cumberland acting as patrons and associate members.

Present director of the society is Charles I. Sager, head of the Music Department at Frostburg State Teachers College.

Charter members of the society who still are active include Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Kremer, Mrs. Elsie Brinkman, Mrs. Jack Wetzel, Miss Althea Birchard, Miss Mary Robb, Robert Moreland and W. A. Strother, all of Cumberland; James Darrow of Frostburg and Mrs. Earl Miller of Ellerslie. Kremer was the first president.

Richard L. Close will be scoutmaster, and Duane F. Shaffer and Curtis L. Hickle, assistant scoutmasters.

The new troop was organized by William G. Barger, a member of the district Organization and Extension committee.

The charter will be presented by Robert Moore, a member of the committee.

The troop will be chartered with 32 members, all new to Scouting.

District officials will persent registration cards to the new Scouts, who will take part in the ceremonies.

Parents of the Scouts are being urged to attend the charter presentation.

The festival will close Saturday with a public concert at 8 p. m.

Tydings Calls For Debate With Mahoney

Wants To Meet 'Face To Face'

By GEORGE BOWEN

BALTIMORE, April 25 (AP)—Millard E. Tydings made the first direct personal challenge today to George P. Mahoney, his main foe for the U. S. Senate nomination by the Democrats, to debate issues "face to face."

So far in the campaign which culminates in the primary May 7, Mahoney and Tydings have gone their separate ways without personal mention of the other in public or on the record. Some of their backers have traded blasts, but the two candidates have ignored each other.

Tydings offered to end that with a showdown discussion.

While he didn't say so specifically, he didn't deny he was suggesting a television meeting so as many voters as possible could be reached.

Says Mahoney Ducked

Tydings claimed he has discussed the issues and records and "my major opponent hasn't."

He said Mahoney "has evaded issues, except a few on which he is perfectly safe because there can be no real difference of opinion. He, or his associates, have shed smoke, but no light, on my record.

"The electorate deserves something better."

He proposed:

"Let Mr. Mahoney and me get on the same forum. Let there be no ghost writers, no people whispering into our ears. Let us discuss issues. Let us discuss our records.

Meet "Face To Face"

"If there is any criticism of my long career in public office, let it come out openly, where I can answer it face to face. And I will assure you I will answer to the public's satisfaction.

"If Mr. Mahoney has any ideas about international or national policy, let him disclose them. I shall present my deeds. Each of us will have a chance to comment.

"And the voters will be able to see us face to face, to hear our views and the statement of our records. And then they will have the best possible basis for judging between us.

"That is what a campaign should give the voters. And I am ready to provide it.

"How about you, Mr. Mahoney?

"Any reasonable time will suit me."

Man Killed By Tractor

Frederick Louis Brinker, 66, Springfield, W. Va., farmer, died yesterday at 7:10 p. m. in Memorial Hospital of injuries suffered several hours earlier when his tractor overturned on him.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said death resulted from internal injuries.

He said Mr. Brinker was plowing on his farm, with a harrow attached, on a deep incline, when the accident occurred about 3 p. m.

The front end of the tractor reared up, he reported, throwing Mr. Brinker under the harrow, on which he was pinned as the tractor fell back on him.

He was born here June 26, 1889, a son of the late Mathias and Louisa Ruppenkamp, and had operated a large farm in Springfield for 16 years.

Surviving are two sons, Charles W., Springfield, and Francis E., Racine, Wis.; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Roby, city; Miss Rosemary Brinker, Washington, and Mrs. Pauline, city; a brother, George A., Springfield; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Wempe, city, and the Misses Elizabeth and Anna Brinker, Springfield, and nine grandchildren.

The body is at the Scarpelli Funeral Home.

Library Offers Two Displays

A "double feature" is being offered at the Cumberland Free Public Library all this week.

Instead of the usual single exhibit in the main room of the library there are two.

Nearest the main entrance is a large display prepared by the Celanese Corporation of America to emphasize Chemical Progress Week. Small booklets available for library patrons explain that Celanese chemicals are basic for American industry.

In the regular display cabinet, art students of Mrs. Ethel Bruce at Allegany High School have arranged an exhibit of enameling on copper. The name of the artist accompanies each article. Children from the seventh through the 12th grades are exhibiting their handicraft.

Home Ec Teachers To Attend Meeting

A group of Allegany County home economics teachers will attend the annual spring meeting Saturday of the Maryland Home Economics Association in College Park, according to Miss Ruth E. McColly, supervisor of home economics in the county public schools.

The county teachers will present a skit to promote interest in the National Home Economics meeting planned in Washington in June.

You Just Press The Button

Mayor Roy W. Eves presses a control at the Community Baking Company and starts flour flowing into storage bins from a car spotted on the B & O siding across Henderson Avenue. Watching the ceremony are County Commissioner James Orr, W. H. Hagenmeyer, of International Milling Company; Anthony Saeli, manager of the Chamber of Commerce; Gordon S. Leatherman, secretary-treasurer, and John A. Kreiling, president of the Community Baking Company.
